That there is a Gulf stream has been demonstrated to the satisfaction of all reasonable men. Moreover, we know that there is a polar current pouring down from the north along the coast of Labrador and following the shore-line as far south as Sandy Hook. But while this current hugs the coast, not all of its waters pass through the narrow strait which Mr. Goodrige proposes to dam. On the contrary, there is reason to believe that these waters for the most part pass outward around the eastern shore of Newfoundland. The dam would be a source of great comfort to the people who inhabit the shores of the St. Lawrence Gulf, but New England and New York would still be in the cold.—New York Times.

Fear that the world's supply of coal would be exhausted a century hence or thereabouts, is somewhat modified by the discovery of enormous deposits in China, including a district larger than the coal fields of Pennsylvania, yielding the best anthracite.

St. Andrew's Society.

The Executive Committee of St. Andrew's Society, held a meeting in the Collector's office last night. Several reports of persons in need of assistance were made, and steps were taked to immediately relieve the distressed parties. In this cool weather a benevolent society is a good institution.

Calendar's Minstrels.

This company enjoying, as it does, great popularity as the greatest, genuine, refined Negro Minstrel organization now on the road, will be sure to attract large and fashionable audiences. No profanity or objectionable language is allowed on the stage. This fine company will play in Bradburn's Opera House on Friday and Saturday, February 5th and 6th, with a Saturday afternoon matinee at 2.30. Popular prices. Reserved seats at Menzies' Bookstore.

The Coming Carnival.

To dress, or not to dress, that is the question;
Whether 'tis nobler at my home to loiter,
While others don brave costumes at the rink,
Or to indue me in Shakesperian garb
And by appearing take the cake. To sleep;
To miss the chance—Aye, that's the rub!

This is something like the cogitations of those who think of dressing for the grand carnival to be given at the Skating Rink on Friday, Feb. 19th, which will, by all odds, be the most gorgeous affair of the kind ever attempted in Peterborough.

Canada's Comic Paper on Burdette.

Grip, Canada's comic journal, says, in speaking of "Bob" Burdette, of its contemporary the Burlington Hawkeye, and who will deliver a lecture entitled "Advice to young Men," in the Opera House here on Monday, February the 15th: "His lecture on Tuesday evening was as witty and brilliant and as well attended as Grip anticipated. Burdette is a prince of good fellows and deserves all the patronage he received."

Police Court.

John Martin was brought before Police Magistrate Dumble this morning charged by P. C. Adams with being drunk in a public place. Martin admitted the charge. He said he was a tanner from Uxbridge. In tramping from that place to Peterborough he had sprained his ankle which pained him so very much that he could with difficulty walk. The Magistrate sentenced him to one month in jail. He was taken to his quarters in a cab.

Burdette

will lecture in the Peterborough Opera House on Monday, February the 15th. Subject,—"Advice to young men." All should hear him. He is one of the best humourists of the age. Admission 25 and 50 cents. Reserved seats can be secured at A. L. Davis & Co's. The New Yorker says of him:—"Mr. Burdette is the most genial humourist we ever met. With a heart full of love for his home, for his friends and for the universe, he comes upon the stage, and without a sneer at man, woman or child, he keeps an audience entertained for nearly two hours. His lecture is pathetic, quaint, funny and side-splitting, and, in our judgment, the most highly finished and many-sided as a literary production that we ever heard from an American humorist."

A Horse-Joke.

It is said there were several sick sports in town yesterday. A distinguished horseman who happened to see the donkey belonging to the Irish Aristocracy company, lodged in a stall of the Grand Cental stables, whispered to another horseman that there was a "flyer" in such-and-such a box stall. This aroused the curiosity of horseman No. 2; who immediately took a roundabout route for the said stall. He sneaked up to it, and took a stolen glance through a knot hole. When he got used to the light and saw the speedy animal and heard its laugh, (which was more ironical than any horse-laugh) mingled with the laugh of No. 1 horseman, he went behind the stable to kick himself. While chastising himself a bright idea struck him, and he though he would play the joke on some of his friends, and carried his idea into effect. He was successful in his undertaking, and it is asserted that quite a number called on the hostler to see the fast horse in No.—stall.

River Rising.

The cold snap has resulted in the formation of another ice jam at the railway bridge and the river is nearly up to its level of the high water of two or three weeks ago.

On the Warpath.

Calendar's Celebrated Minstrels paraded the streets to-day during noon hour and gave an exhibition of their musical ability, although it was cold enough to freeze a——, colored person at the time.

Directors to Deliberate.

A meeting of the Directors of the West Riding of Peterborough Agricultural Society, will be held on Wednesday the 10th day of February, 1886, at two o'clock p.m. in the Old Music Hall, Peterborough.

Suburban Salutation.

A surprise party from town last night came down like a wolf in the fold on the [illegible] Hotel, [illegible] and merrily danced away the hours till four o'clock in the morning. Mine host Irwin, was equal to the occasion and supplied excellent refreshments.

Annual Church Meeting.

The annual congregational meeting of the Charlotte Street Methodist church will be held this evening. Tea on gospel terms will be served in the school room from 6.30. After tea a statement of the financial affairs of the church will be presented, followed by brief addresses. The latter part of the programme will be varied by the presentation of a number of excellent musical selections.

Colder.

The mercury in the self-registering thermometer at Mr. E. J. Hartley's music store slept at 27° below zero last night, and did not get up for breakfast. Mr. Hartley has been considering the advisability of providing a companion for it and this morning placed another thermometer alongside. They agreed all right but would not speak about anything but the weather, so he separated them again. Mr. G. A. Schofield's thermometer has been very low-spirited all day, and required a strong nail to hold it up.

The Children's Concert.

A Pleasant Entertainment in St. Paul's Church School Room, given by the Children of the Hazel Brae Home.

The concert in St. Paul's Church school room yesterday evening given by the children of the Hazel Brae Home, assisted by friend was novel and interesting and altogether a most excellent entertainment. The attendance was large. Mr. D. W. Dumble, occupied the chair and performed the duties of that position in a happy and graceful manner. The entertainment opened with a chorus or singing Quadrilles, by the children, introducing a number of nursery rhymes, such a "Georgie Porgie," "Humpty Dumpty," "Old King Cole," etc. At a signal from Mr. Duff the children numbering about forty rose, and at the fall of his baton they commenced their song. The voices of the singers, with their peculiar accent, blended as one in the simple melodies and produced music sweet and sympathetic. "Beautiful Rain," a descriptive duet and chorus, was very nicely given, Misses. Huston and Wells singing the duet. Miss. Stevens then sang in her best voice a very pretty solo. This was followed by "Poor Tom Tump," a temperance song, with whistling chorus. In this piece the children excelled themselves. The whistling was very accurate and charmed the audience. A crying song followed, and closed the first part of the programme. During the intermission Mr. Dumble made a few remarks in praise of the Home and the manner in which it was conducted, also complimenting the children on their appearance, manner and abilities. He was in favor of showing more sympathy to homeless children. He expressed it as his belief that the Government should continue to assist in bringing these homeless children to Canada. There was plenty of room. They received better training at the Homes than most of children, and he felt sure they would become useful and honorable men and women. The second part of the programme opened with a selection from an orchestra, composed of piano, first and second violins and six toy instruments. The selection played was called a toy symphony. The music produced was surprisingly good, considering the instruments used, and delighted the audience. An encore was responded to. The following are the names of the performers, with the instruments they played: Mrs. Duff, piano; Mr. Cooper, first violin; Mr. Lech, second violin; Mr. Duff, whistle and trumpet; Miss Nellie Smith, bells; Miss Ettie Taylor, Nightingale; Miss Kathleen Duff, Cuckoo; Miss Laura Davidson, triangle; Miss Lillie Hall, rattle; Algie Duff, dram. The toy instruments used were the gift of G. Schermer, a New York music dealer. The remainder of the programme consisted of choruses by the children. Miss Stevens, Miss Wells and Miss Huston, Mr. Baguley and Mr. W. Hill assisted in the choruses. The pieces were all very pretty, especially the last, "Evening Prayer." At the close of the programme Mr. Dumble made a few remarks with regard to the excellence of the entertainment and expressed a desire that it should be repeated. Revs. Messrs. Munro and Davis also spoke in praise of the concert. A unanimous vote of thanks was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Duff for the trouble they had taken to prepare such a treat for the public. Mr. Duff replied thanking the audience for the expressions of gratification. He explained that the preparations was not troublesome as the pupils were taught to sing by note as ordinary lessons. He could in truth repeat the old joke, and say, if the audience were satisfied they were gratified and if the audience were gratified they were satisfied.

Plenty of Wood.

Wood was very plentiful on the market today. Hard wood sold well at from $3.00 to $3.75 per cord.

New, Nobby, Neat.

The Canadian Express Company has added to its equipment a five new town express sleigh. This excellently built vehicle, which was turned out by Messrs. Fitzgerald & Stenger, has double runner gearing, painted vermillion with a panelled box in bottle green with carimine lines. Ed., the genial and jocular office clerk, says it was made for the express purpose of delivering parcels as fast Jack and his bay flyer can do it.

A Tobogganing Party.

A party of about twenty-five couples patronized the Riverside Toboggan Slide last night. Very few of the ladies had ever experienced the delighful sensation before, and were timid at taking the first slide, but while refusing consented, and before they knew it were rushing over the ice with their eyes shut enjoying everything immensely. The master of ceremonies in charge says it was difficult to persuaded them to leave the sport to go home. He thinks they were very brave to face the cold all for the sake of somebody.

What We May Expect.

A gratis gastronomical gathering at the Charlotte street Methodist Church this evening.

Ethiopian entertainers to execute elaborate expansions of the oricular opening of the œsophagus at the Opera 'ouse to-night.

Tight contests at the toboggan tournament to-night.

Light to moderate winds, generally fair weather, slightly higher temperatures; higher temperatures on Saturday.

High Schools and Their Maintenance.

The following letter appeared in the Globe yesterday:—

SIR,—The School law provides that a town separated from a county is a county for High School purposes. There are in Ontario many such towns. In these the High Schools are sustained by fees from pupils, Government grants, and municipal rates. The fees from pupils are usually an inconsiderable amount. The Government grant is a substantial sum, but the bulk of the burden falls upon the local municipality.

The schools are usually in the large towns; here they offer the best possible accomodation for the residents of the county.

No one will take the position that the boys and girls from the country are to be debarred from the privilege of obtaining a High School education. Nay, we boast that our Public Schools spread themselves so as to cover the entire country. Fitting on these, in higher course, are the High Schools, while topping the High Schools are the Colleges, and the one University at Toronto is somtimes spoken as the "cap stone" of our educational system.

This latter institution is supported by the entire people through the Government funds or appropriation—the Common Schools are sustained by the people, each School Section with the aid of a Government grant sustaining its own; but these High Schools in towns separate from the County are not in any way aided by the counties of which they are, in fact, the County High Schools.

If the counties were starting High Schools they would invariably place them in the towns. Yet because towns, separate from counties, are counties for High School purposes, no legal obligation rest on the counties to contribute to their support, and we have the huge injustice of towns educating High School pupils at an expense to the local municipality of $20 or $30 per pupil per annum, while in very many cases from one-fourth to one-half of the pupils are outsiders, residents of the adjacent county, who pay from $5 to $9 a year each, in fees, for their education—in some cases less.

This is leaving out of the question the cost of the school buildings.

Nearly all the teachers in the country have been educated in the High Schools: the country thus getting great benefit in the improved character of the Public Schools. Yet many County Councils take advantage of their freedom from legal obligation, and refuse to contribute one dollar towards the support of such High Schools as happen to be in towns separate from the county.

The law should be amended so that for High School purposes the entire county, and not the town, should be a High School district, and then both town and county would contribute to sustain what are, in fact, county schools, on some fair basis, perhaps proportioned to the attendance from town and county respectively.

Councillors are afraid of the carping of illiberal constitutents, and while themselves often favouring a grant, yet vote against it. The most ignorant and most illiberal constitutents thus prevent a Councillor from doing what he would fain do (barring his lack of courage.) No one will be better pleased than these same Councillors if the law were so changed as to relieve them from the supposed necessity of voting to please these illiberal and narrow-minded constitutents.

If the law is not changed, and that at once, High School Boards in towns, so separate, will, by imposition of high fees, exclude the country students, and with smaller staffs impart to the local children the required higher education.

There are advantages in a large school with well graded classes, and the course suggested will be reluctantly adopted, but adopted it will be unless the Government comes to the aid of the municipalities now suffering financially, and to the aid of the county municipalities which will suffer educationally, if the towns in self-defence take the course which the present state of things seems to render imperative.

D. W. DUMBLE.

Peterborough, Feb. 2.

The Restless Reds.

General Strange is of the opinion that strong precautions should be taken against an outbreak among the Blackfeet next spring. The restlessness of these Indians is due to the fact that their wonted means of livelihood is to a large extent cut off. This warning is interesting in connection with the declaration of Hon. Wm. McDougall, who says the Indians were not fairly dealt with in the treaties made with them. He speaks with a certain authority as he was the negotiator of some of the earlier Indian treaties which have, so far as we know, proved entirely satisfactory to the Indians, and which, he says, have resulted in the settlement of many of them on farms. The rule of action which Mr. McDougall set himself, and which has according to him, been since ignored, was to give the Indians the whole present value of the territory taken from them.

TO INVESTORS—The five and ten year FIVE PER CENT DEBENTURES of this Company which are issued in denominations of $100, $200, $300 and $1000 each, transferable by endorsement, with half-yearly interest Coupons attached, payable at the Head Office of the Company in Peterborough, or at any Branch of the Bank of Toronto in Canada, afford a safe and convenient mode of investment.

The funds of the Company being invested in first mortgages on Real Estate, no better security can be offered to depositors or debenture-holders, they having a first claim or mortgage on the whole Assets of the Company, the shareholders having the second. The annual statement shows that the amount so invested was over $600,000, and on the security of real estate at least double that value.

By the laws of Ontario, Trustees, Executors and Administrators may deposit Trust Funds of the estates which they control in this Company, and are free from all further liability, a privilege of which many have largely availed themselves.

TO BORROWERS—Money is obtainable from this Company on approved Real Estate security at the Lowest Current Rates of Interest.

The Mortgage may be repaid by yearly instalments, or otherwise as may be agreed upon, the interest ceasing at once on all amounts paid on account of the sum borrowed.

CARD OF THANKS.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance,

THE CHOICE OF A WIFE.

Women who Lift Men up and Those Who Drag Them Down.

The First of a Series of Sermons on the Marital Relations, Preached by the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage at the Brooklyn Tabernacle.

(Concluded from Yesterday.)

IT IS BETTER NOT TO MAKE THE MISTAKE

than to attempt its correction. But men and women do not reveal all their characteristics till after marriage, and how are you to avoid committing the fatal blunder? There is only one Being in the universe who can tell you whom to choose, and that is the Lord of Paradise. He made Eve for Adam, and Adam for Eve, and both for each other. Adam had not a large group of women from whom to select his wife, but it is fortunate, judging from some mistakes which she afterward made, that it was Eve or nothing.

There is in all the world some one who was made for you, as certainly as Eve was made for Adam. All sorts of mistakes occur because Eve was made out of a rib from Adam's side. Nobody knows which of his twenty-four ribs was taken for the nucleus. If you depend entirely upon yourself in the selection of a wife there are twenty-three possibilities to one that you will select the wrong rib. By the fate of Ahab, whose wife induced him to steal; by the fate of Macbeth, whose wife pushed him into massacre; by the fate of James Ferguson, the philosopher, whose wife entered the room while he was lecturing and wilfully upset his astronomical apparatus, so that he turned to the audience and said: "Ladies and gentlemen. I have the misfortune to be married to this woman;" by the fate of Bulwer, the novelist, whose wife's temper was so incompatible that he furnished her a beautiful house near London and withdrew from her company, leaving her with the one dozen dogs whom she entertained as pets; by the fate of John Milton, who married a termagant after he was blind, and when someone called her a rose, the poet said: "I am no judge of colors, but it may be so, for I feel the thorns daily;" by the fate of an Englishman, whose wife was so determined to dance on his grave, that he was buried in the sea; by the fate of a village minister whom I knew whose wife threw a cup of hot tea across the table because they differed in sentiment—by all these scenes of disquietude and domestic calamity, I implore you to before you enter upon the connubial state, which decides whether a man shall have two heavens or two hells, a heaven here and heaven forever, or a hell now and a hell hereafter.

By the bliss of Pliny, whose wife, when her husband was pleading in court, had messengers coming and going to inform her what impression he was making; by the joy of Grotius, whose wife delivered him from prison under the pretence of having books carried out lest they be injurious to his health, she sending out her husband unobserved in one of the bookcases; by the good fortune of Roland, in Louis' time, whose wife translated and composed for her husband, while Secretary of the Interior—talented, heroic, wonderful Mme. Roland; by the happiness of many a man who has made intelligent choice of one capable of being prime counselor and companion in brightness and in grief—pray to Almighty God, morning, noon and night, that at the right time and in the right way He will send you a good, honest, loving sympathetic wife; or, if she is not sent to you, that you may be sent to her.

At this point let me warn you not to let a question of this importance be settled by the celebrated matchmakers in almost every community. Depend upon your own judgment, divinely illumined.

THESE BROKERS IN MATRIMONY

are ever planning how they can unite impecunious innocence to an heiress, or celibate woman to millionaire or marquis, and that in many cases makes life an unhappiness. How can any human being, who knows neither of the parties as God knows them, and who is ignorant of the future, give such direction as you require at such a crisis! Take the advice of the earthly matchmaker instead of the divine guidance and you may some day be led to use the words of Solomon, whose experience in home life was as melancholy as it was multitudinous.

One day his palace, with its great wide rooms and great wide doors and great wide hall, was too small for him and the loud tongue of a woman belabouring him about some of his neglects, and he retreated to the housetop to get relief from the lingual bombardment. And while there he saw a poor man on one corner of the roof with a mattress for his only furniture and the open sky his only covering. And Solomon envies him and cries out: "It is better to dwell in the corner of the housetop than with a brawling woman in a wide house."

And one day during the rainy season the water leaked through the roof of the palace and began to drop in a pail or pan set there to catch it. And at one side of him all day long the water went drop! drop! drop! while on the other side a female companion quarreling about this and quarreling about that, the acrimonious and petulant words falling on his ear in ceaseless pelting—drop! drop! drop! and he seized his pen and wrote: "A continual dropping in a very rainy day and a contentious woman are alike."

If Solomon had been as prayerful at the beginning of his life as he was at the close, how much domestic infelicity he would have avoided. But prayer about this will amount to nothing unless you pray soon enough. Wait until you are fascinated and the equilibrium of your soul is disturbed by a magnetic and exquisitive presence, and then you will answer your own prayers, and you will mistake your own infatuation for the voice of God.

What you want, O man! in a wife, is not a butterfly of the sunshine, not a giggling nonentity, not a painted doll, not a gossiping gadabout, not a mixture of artificialities which leave you to doubt as to where the humbug ends and the woman begins, but an earnest soul, one that can not only laugh when you laugh, but weep when you weep.

THERE WILL BE WIDE, DEEP GRAVES

in your path of life, and you will both want steading when you come to the verge of them, I tell you! When your fortune falls you will want some one to talk of treasures in heaven, and not charge upon you with a bitter "I told you so." As far as I can analyze, sincerity and earnestness are the foundation of all worthy wifehood. Get that and you will get all. Fail to get that and you get nothing but what you will wish you never had got.

Don't make the mistake that man of the text made in letting his eyes settle the question in which coolest judgment, directed by Divine Wisdom, are all important. He who has no reason for his wifely choice except a pretty face is like the man who should buy a farm because of the dahlias in the front-door yard. Beauty is a talent, and when God gives it he intends it as a benediction upon a woman's face. When the good Princess of Wales dismounted from the railtrain last summer, and I saw her radiant face, I could understand what they told me the day before that, when at the great military hospital where are now the wounded and sick from the Egyptain and other wars, the Princess passed through, all the sick were cheered at her coming, and those who could be roused neither by doctor nor nurse from their stupor would get up on their elbows to look at her, and wan and wasted lips prayed an audible prayer: "God bless the Princess of Wales! Doesn't she look beautiful?" But in a human countenance. Explosion of a kerosene lamp turns it into sacrification, and a scoundrel with one dash of vitrol may dispel it, or time will drive his chariot wheels across that bright face, cutting it up in deep ruts and gullies. But there is an eternal beauty on the face of some whom a rough and ungallant world may criticize as homely, and though their features may contradict all the laws of Lavater on physiognomy, yet they have graces of soul that will keep them attractive for time and glorious through all eternity.

There are two or three circumstances in which the plainest wife is a queen of beauty to her husband, whatever her stature or profile. By financial panic or betrayal of business partner, the man goes down, and returning to his home that evening he says: "I am ruined; I am disgraced forever; I care not whether I live or die." It is an agitated story he is telling in the household that winter night. He says: "The furniture must go, the house must go, the social position must go," and from being sought for obsequiously they must be cold-shouldered everywhere. After he ceases talking and the wife has heard all in silence, she says: "Is that all? Why, you had nothing when I married you, and you have only come back to where you started. If you think that my happiness and that of the children depend on these trappings, you do not know me though we have lived together thirty years. God is not dead, and the National Bank of Heaven has not suspended payment, and if you don't mind I don't care a cent. What little we need of food and raiment the rest of our lives we can get, and I don't propose to SIT DOWN AND MOPE AND GROAN.

Mary, hand me that darning needle. And, John, light one of the other gas burners. And, Jimmy, open the register for a little more heat. Fanny, fetch you father's slippers. I declare I have forgotton to set the rising for those cakes!" And while she is busy at it he hears her humming Newton's old hymn, "To-morrow."

"It can bring with it nothing,
But He will bear us through;
Who gives the lilies clothing
Will clothe his people, too;
Beneath the spreading heavens
No creature but is fed;
And He who feeds the ravens
Will give his children bread.

"Though vine nor fig tree either
Their wonted fruit should bear,
Though all the fields should wither
Nor flocks nor herds be there:
Yet God, the same abiding,
His praise shall tune my voice;
For while in Him confiding
I cannot but rejoice."

The husband looks up in amazement, and says: "Well, well, you are the greatest woman I ever saw. I thought you would faint dead away when I told you." And as he looks at her, all the glories of physiognomy in the court of Louis XV on the modern fashion plates, are tame as compared with the superhuman splendors of that woman's face. Joan of Arc, Marie Antoinette and La Belle Hamilton, the enchantment of the court of Charles II are nowhere.

There is another time when the plainest wife is a queen of beauty to her husband. She has done the work of life. She has reared her children for God and heaven, and though some of them may be a little wild they will yet come back, for God has promised. She is dying, and her husband stands by. They think over all the years of their companionship, the weddings and the burials, the ups and the downs, the successes and the failures. They talk over the goodness of God and his faithfulness to children's children. She has no fear about going. The Lord has sustained here so many years she would not dare to distrust Him now. The lips of both them tremble as they say good-by and encourage each other about an early meeting in a better world. The breath is feebler and feebler and stops. Are you sure of it? Just hold that mirror at the mouth, and see if there is any vapor gathering on the surface, Gone! As one of the neighbors takes the old man by the arm gently and says: "Come, you had better go into the next room and rest;" he says: "Wait a moment; I must take one more look at that face and those hands!" Beautiful! beautiful!

My friends, I hope you do not call that death. That is an autumnal sunset. That is a crystaline river pouring into a crystal sea. That is the solo of human life overpowered by hallelujah chorus. That is a queen's coronation. That is Heaven. That is the way my father stood at eighty-two, seeing my mother depart at seventy-nine. Perhaps, so your father and mother went. I wonder if we will die as well.

At a meeting of Ironmoulders' Union No. 136, of Oshawa, held on the evening of last Friday, it was resolved to declare the Malleable Iron Works of that place closed to union men, owing to the peremptory refusal of the Company to recognize organized labour and the Ironmoulders' Union Committee in particular.

LIBERALS, LOOK ALIVE!

Now is the time to be alive to the importance of every Liberal name being put on the "perliminary" list—the basis of all future lists under the Dominion Franchise Act.

Tory newspapers do not need to appeal to individual members of their party, to take action, for Sir John's revising officers are paid by the people of Canada to work in the interest of the Conservative party, and Conservative "unions" are working night and and day to see that every Conservative vote goes on the first list.

Every Liberal elector has to look out for himself personally, if he desires to have a vote at the next general Dominion election. The EXAMINER has published the qualifications necessary to constitute a voter; but the grand qualification is to get your name on the first list.

If you are qualified, and are not on the assessment roll, you must send to the revising officer or his clerk AT ONCE a declaration of qualification.

You can obtain the necessary forms of application for the West Riding by applying to Mr. R. E. Wood, barrister, Mr. E. B. Stone, barrister, or at the EXAMINER Office, and for the East Riding from Mr. W. A. Stratton, barrister.

There is not a moment to lose. The first lists must be made up, printed and distributed before the first of March.

Don't delay; delay means disfranchisement.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

During the cold snap, the increased consumption of coal, caused the delivery of about 200 tons per week in town. On this our citizens paid in taxes to the Government $100, no small addition, considering the rate at which the coal had to be shovelled in to keep the frost out.

It is decidedly refreshing in these days when political feeling runs so high to see the old country Tories graciously allow Mr. Gladstone to be returned without opposition for Midlothian. What greatly intensifies the kindness of the feeling is that Mr. Gladstone's majority at the general election was only 4000, and a Tory candidate in opposition would have had one chance in 4000 of succeeding.

The date of the opening of the next session of Parliament, is fixed now as Feb. 25th, but if the indications are not favourable to theministry, the date may be again postponed. Sir John doesn't do anything, from the hanging of a culprit to the opening of a parliament, without having an eye to the main chance as it affects himself and his political futured. It would be original to see the G. O. M. (gay old man) doing something for principle, and not from expediency.

The Mail says that "the man who is a Conservative need not be ashamed when he is called a Tory." But he certainly seems to be somewhat ashamed of it, remarks the News, not satisfied with toning his party designation down to "Conservative" he dilutes and deodorizes it by prefixing the word "Liberal." Why do the Tory organizations call themselves "Liberal-Conservatives" unless they are afraid of strighttout Toryism?

The N. P. affects the farmer something like this. Its operation, in Canada and the United States, has been such as to force the British manufacturer to look for new markets; and in India there lies a boundless field for expansion. The Indian cannot purchase manufactures unless the Briton buys something from him: and as Britain needs wheat, the energies of the Indian government have been devoted for several years, not only towards constructing railroads for its cheap and rapid transmission when grown. The time has come when the fruits of this development must be met. The consequence is there is a lessened demand for Canadian wheat, and, of course, a surplus which leaves the price down so low that the farmer has no profit. The boast of the N.P. was that it would give farmers high prices. It has not only not done that, but it has reduced the price far below what would have ruled, had the law of supply and demand been allowed to take its course in spite of bungling intermeddling. Before we had the N. P., a dollar a bushel was a low price, now ninety cents a bushel is a big figure for wheat.

Tennysoniana.

Two Extracts from the New Volume of the English Poet-Laureate.

The New York Independent has received by cable two extracts from Tennyson's new volume. The first, which is reputed one of the best of the short poems, is as follows:

EARLY SPRING.

Once more the heavenly power makes all things new,
And domes the red-plowed hills with loving blue;
The blackbirds have their wills—the throstles, too.

Opens a door in Heaven. From skies of glass
A Jacob's ladder falls on greening grass;
And o'er the mountain walls young angels pass.

Before them fleets the shower and bursts the buds,
And shine the level lands and flash the floods.
The stars are from their hands flung through the woods.

The woods with living airs, how softly fanned!
Light airs from where the deep, all down the sand,
Is breathing his sleep, heard by the land.

O, follow leaping blood, the season's lure;
O heart, look down or up, serene, secure.
Warm as the crocus bud—like snowdrops pure.

Past, future, glimpse and fade through some slight spell.
A gleam from yonder vale some far blue fell;
And sympathies bow frail in sound and smell.

Till all the churchid [illegible]
The fairy fancies range and lightly stirred.
Ring, little bells of change, from word to word.

For now the Heavenly powers make all things new
And thaws the cold and fills the flower with dew.
The blackbirds have their wills—the poets, too.

The second extract is from the poem on Tiresias, who gives its name to the volume. Tiresias, while wandering in the forest, happened to see Minerva bathing, and was punished by the angry goddess with loss of his sight. The life of seven generations was accorded him, and his gift of prophecy, like Cassandra's, was so cursed that no one might believe him. Tiresias speaks:

Then, in my wanderings, all the lands that lie
Subjected to the Heliconian ridge
Have heard this footstep fall, although my wont
Was more to scale the highest of the heights,
With some strange hope to see the nearer God.
One naked peak, the sister of the sun,
Would climb from out the dark and linger there,
To silver all the valleys with her shafts.
There once, but long ago, five times thy term
Of years, I lay. The woods were dead for heat;
The noonday crag made the land burn and sick
For shadow; not one bush was near. I rose,
Following a torrent till its myriad falls
Found silence in the hollows underneath.
There in a secret olive glade I saw
Pallas Athene climbing from the bath
In anger. Yet one glittering foot disturbed
The lucid well. One snowy knee was pressed Against the margin flowers. A dreadful light
Came from her golden hair, her golden helm,
And all her golden armor on the grass,
And from her virgin breast and virgin eyes,
Remaining fixed on mine till mine grew dark
Forever; and I heard a voice that said:
"Henceforth be blind, for thou hast seen too much;
And speak the truth that no man may believe."

HER HUSBAND'S SECRET.

For the first time since her marriage Patty Welborn experienced a sense of positive distrust when, one day, in answer to a careless inquiry, her waiting-maid informed her that she had seen Mr. Welbron walking on the cliffs with a strange woman a few hours before.

The young couple were living for the summer in a pretty hired cottage not far from Kennebunkport, on the coast of Maine.

Patty disdained to ask the servant for particulars. She went in from the garden and sank into a seat at a seaward-looking window, with the glancing blue waters below and the now hateful cliffs in the distance, with a dull pain of doubt and distress at her heart.

She was a lovely New England girl, who, scarcely a twelvemonth before, had become the blushing bride of the man of her heart, a handsome and accomplished Englishman, rich and highly connected, but of somewhat misty antecedents, on the subject of which he had always maintained a certain troubled reticence, even during his love-making and the subsequent joyous honeymoon.

True, his occasional fits of preoccupation, if not of secret sadness, had not passed unnoticed by the young wife, but until this moment there had been not the shadow of an estrangement, and now Patty was feeling really miserable.

But she succeeded in masking her wretchedness pretty fairly when her husband entered the cottage a few minutes later, and looking, she thought, annoyed and nervous.

"I must take a run to Portland on pressing business, darling," said he, kissing her with all his tenderness. "Can't even wait for luncheon."

"You've been out rambling ever since breakfast, Reggy," she demurred. "Can't you remain with me even now?"

"You must know that nothing would delight me more, dear," said he; "but the affair I refer to is both urgent and unpleasant. I may give you the particulars some time, but they would only distress you now. Bye-bye! Be sure I shan't keep you waiting at dinner."

She did not respond as he kissed her again and hurried away.

As he passed the window at which she had seated herself again, however, she looked after him with troubled eyes, her bosom rising and falling painfully, and with one jewelled hand clutching tightly at her fair white throat.

"You have a mystery—you are keeping a secret from me, Reginald Welborn," she murmured, "and I must find it out or sleep no more."

Were his thoughts preoccupied with the image of some other woman? The terrible reflection at first caused her to shudder, and then a resentful fire flickered in her heart that might at any moment become a volcano of jealous fury.

Or was he, perchance, haunted by the fear of some former and slighted love, whose avenging Nemesis was now pursuing him?

"It must be one or the other," she said to herself. "That strange woman on the cliffs—and now this sudden and unexpected call to Portland. Oh, I can't endure it!"

She desperately resolved on a step, the mere suggestion of which, a short time before, would have summoned the hot flush of self-shame to her pure cheeks. She determined to search her husband's private drawer, which he had heretofore jealously guarded on various pretexts.

In a few moments the young wife had found access to it, and was feverishly examining its contents. These were simply the fragments of a torn letter, and several printed slips, evidently clipped from English newspapers.

Try as she would, she could not piece the epistolary fragments together, but the handwriting was a woman's, and she at last made out one word—evidently the writer's signature—and that word was "Marguerite."

Her Husband's Secret.

No more than that, but yet enough to fan her smouldering suspicion into a torturing flame.

Then she read the printed slips.

They recounted the particulars of the divorce suit of one Reginald Gascoyne, against his wife, Marguerite Gascoyne, in London, upon charges of reckless misconduct, the bare mention of which caused Patty's cheeks to burn.

The acts of misconduct instanced had occurred years before, when the reader was no more than a child.

She read enough to learn that the injured husband's plea had ultimately been granted, and the faithless wife dead by that time driven away from him forever. Then, while wondering what interest her Reginald could have in thus hoarding up another man's closet skeleton, the bell rang for lunch.

She wearily responded, but could not eat anything, and spent the rest of the day a prey to her torturing thoughts.

While dressing for dinner word was brought by her maid that Mr. Welborn had returned from the city and gone to his room.

Patty called out to the maid from her boudoir that she would be downstairs presently, without requiring the usual assistance with her toilet; and then remained for some moments pensively gazing out of her window, which commanded a noble prospect of sea, cliff, and strand, interspersed with belting woodlands, cultivated fields, and fishing-huts, over which the red light of the setting sun slept peacefully.

Suddenly she started, almost with a cry.

There, before her very eyes, was the strange woman of the cliffs! She was loitering along the dangerous edge, and apparently watching expectantly the isolated villa of which she, Patty Welborn, was the rightful mistress.

"It must be she—the very same Norah saw walking there with Reggy this morning!" gasped the young wife. "Oh, what can it mean?"

She kept her eyes upon the figure till it disappeared behind a jutting rock. Then she paced the room, with a stormy tumult in her soul, till word came that dinner was waiting.

Rallying her self-control, she went down to it without completing her toilet, a thing she had not done before since her marriage.

Her husband greeted her with his customary kindness, but with an increased abstraction that took no note of her own perturbed condition.

The meal, though an elaborate one, was disposed of almost in silence, and then Patty hurriedly sought once more the solitude of her own room.

Here she again busied herself, but vainly, with trying to put together the fragments of the mysterious letter, which she had brought away from the secret drawer, and finally sought her couch, wearied and insensible.

After a night of broken slumbers and distressing dreams, however, she awoke at daybreak, and again applied herself to task.

To her astonished delight she now succeeded as if by magic, and read as follows:

"REGINALD GASCOYNE,—Doubtless you are still hugging yourself over the thought that you are henceforth a free man—free to marry again, even—while I, your wife, am to remain a despised, branded wretch, an outcast henceforth and alone.

"But do not flatter yourself that you are rid of me forever, Reggy Gascoyne!

"Whithersoever you may go, thither will I follow and haunt you. I am the ghost of your murdered first love, who shall not be laid or exorcised until both of us are under the sod.

"Should you ever marry again, I shall sow your path and hers with dragons' teeth.

"You may seek new scenes and a new identity; you may even change your name, in compliance with the conditions by which you can inherit the rich Canadian estates under your grandundle's will, and be known hereafter as Reginald Welborn, in lieu of Reginald Gascoyne; you may fly, with limitless wealth for your wings, to the furthermost corners of the earth, but still will I pursue and hunt you with the hate, the vengeance, and the despair which you have so richly earned from

"MARGUERITE."

Patty's cheeks had blanched as she read. She dropped the fatal letter with a stifled cry.

The mystery was explained.

She had married a divorced man—a man with another, though legally discarded, wife still living.

Her whole woman's nature, with all its backing of pious precept and Puritan breeding, revolted at the discovery. She felt that her husband had practiced a deliberate and cowardly deception upon her. Could she ever forgive him? No, no; she felt that she never could.

A step sounded in the corridor.

It might be her husband's. She sprang to the door, intending to wildly confront him with the womanly feelings he had outraged.

But it was only the step of the aged housekeeper, an old retainer in Mr. Welborn's family, on her way downstairs.

Patty grasped the old lady's arm.

"Mrs. Saunders!" she cried, "what was my husband's name before he assumed the one he now bears?"

"Bless your ne'am! And have you never inquired of it all this time!" was the startled reply. "He was Mr. Reginald Gascoyne until old Mr. Welborn's death, some five years ago, when he took the same surname and inherited all the Quebec and Montreal property."

Patty controlled herself by a great effort.

"Strangely enough, I—I was not aware of it before," she stammered, with a ghastly attempt at indifference. "Pray request Mr. Welborn, if you see him, not to quit the house without seeing me."

Hurrying back into her room, however, she had no sooner crossed the floor to the open window than another cry burst from her colorless lips.

There, in the fresh morning light, far away on the edge of the cliffs, she saw the same woman, and not alone. Her husband—Patty Welborn's husband, was walking at the woman's side.

"Oh, I will confront them together!" moaned the jealousy-tormented wife, wildly assuming her hat and shawl. "Now or never! It must be that creature—that Marguerite! I will know whether he belongs to her or me!"

Out of the room and out of the house she rushed, making her way directly [illegible] through the timber belt dividing the house-grounds from the foot of the cliffs.

But, on getting out of the wood, she perceived that the figures had shifted their position, and were now on a precipitous headland known as Mohasset Head.

This she could only reach by first descending through a gap to the water's edge, and then pursuing the narrow shore-line to a flight of steps leading up the side of the headland.

The way was not unattended by danger should the tide be coming in. But she hesitated not an instant, and kept her jealous gaze fastened upon the couple on Mohasset Head till she made the dip between the cliffs that shut them from her view.

She reached the beach, where the tide was luckily at ebb. Thence she eagerly pushed along the strip of sand, with the salt water almost washing her feet on one side and the sheer wall of rock on the other, and without noticing the attention she was exciting among the fishermen who were preparing their boats for sea or mending their nets here and there.

Mohasset Head is a steep precipice of great height jutting far out into the sea.

When Patty had reached the base she paused, panting breathlessly, before seeking the foot of the steps she had resolved to ascend.

She had recovered her breath, and was just turning away when a piercing scream a woman's scream directly overhead riveted her to the spot.

Then a human body came plunging and bounding down the precipice, and the next instant lay crushed and mangled at her feet.

It was the woman whom she had seen with her husband but a few moments before.

The poor maimed creature was not quite dead, but moaned piteously as she was raised up by several fishermen, who came hurrying to the spot after witnessing the catastrophe.

"Speak, woman!" cried Patty, suddenly starting out of her momentary stupor and glaring at the face of the sufferer with starting eyeballs: "are you Marguerite?"

The woman made a faint affirmative sign, and then expired.

Patty never knew how she made her way back home. She only remembered a dream-like toiling over rocks and ruts, combined with a horrified sensation that her husband must have pushed the woman over the crag.

Then, at last, she stood in his presence in the drawing-room, shocking him and the assembled servants beyond expression by her awful pallor, her starting eyes, and the supreme ghastliness of her entire aspect and bearing.

"Oh, Reggy, to think of you as a murderer as well as a deceiver!" she at last found voice to shriek. "Ha! There—there at the foot of the cliff she lies—Marguerite, your divorced wife—bleeding, mangled, dead! Oh, how could you do it?"

"In Heaven's name, Patty, what can you mean?" cried her husband, springing forward to support her tottering form, and with his face depicting as genuine horror as her own. "What do you know of Marguerite? And dead, say you? Impossible! I left her but twenty minutes ago on the cliff!"

Patty gave a gasp of relief, and looked at him eagerly, almost hopefully.

"If you please, sir," said an old fisherman, who had followed Mrs. Welborn up from the beach, and then into the house, hat in hand, "me and my mates saw the whole thing from Gridiron Point. The lady's under a fearsome mistake, though it was a dreadful accidental mattrer.

He told her how the unfortunate woman [illegible] the secret of his former miserable marriage.

Her husband was the soul of devotion and tenderness during that period. He [illegible] several weeks.

Patty only broke up long enough to be assured that her husband, however erring, was anything but a murderer. Then she swooned and was carried to her room. An attack of brain-fever [illegible], confining her to her bed for several weeks.

Reginald Welborn gave a groan and buried his face in his hands.

"Yes, sir; or at least the lady did as you was a-walkin' with on Mohasset a little while ago. After me and my mates saw you leave her to return to the house, we kept observin' of her purty spry because of her actin', so odd and crazy-like. Then we was surprised at seein' Mrs. Welborn hurryin' down to the water through the gap in a very extraordinary manner, which sort of drawed off our attention from the other a bit. Then, soon after Mrs. Welborn reached the bottom of the stone steps, one of my mates gave a yell an' pointed to the brow of Mohasset. None of us could tell exactly how it chanced—whether she jumped off or toppled over—but just at that minute, sir, we saw the strange lady makin' grabs at the bushes an' the air, an' then down she whopped an' bumped the hull three hundred feet, bouncing here and there as she hit the jags, an' screamin' terrible. She pitched right at Mrs. Welborn's feet, an' was dead a minute arter."

Reginald Welborn gave a groan and buried his face in his hands.

"Patty only broke up long enough to be assured that her husband, however erring, was anything but a murderer. Then she swooned and was carried to her room. An attack of brain-fever [illegible], confining her to her bed for several weeks.

Her husband was the soul of devotion and tenderness during that period. He [illegible] several weeks.

"How!" cried Welborn. "Margueriteall over the cliff there?"

"Yes, sir; or at least the lady did as you was a-walkin' with on Mohasset a little while ago. After me and my mates saw you leave her to return to the house, we kept observin' of her purty spry because of her actin', so odd and crazy-like. Then we was surprised at seein' Mrs. Welborn hurryin' down to the water through the gap in a very extraordinary manner, which sort of drawed off our attention from the other a bit. Then, soon after Mrs. Welborn reached the bottom of the stone steps, one of my mates gave a yell an' pointed to the brow of Mohasset. None of us could tell exactly how it chanced—whether she jumped off or toppled over—but just at that minute, sir, we saw the strange lady makin' grabs at the bushes an' the air, an' then down she whopped an' bumped the hull three hundred feet, bouncing here and there as she hit the jags, an' screamin' terrible. She pitched right at Mrs. Welborn's feet, an' was dead a minute arter."

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $600 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in that time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all goods sold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any person in general want who would like to [illegible] such a liberal offer, and to whom at least $75 per month ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold goods and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, for would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guarantee, and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered in the way of employment to make money.

Junior Curlers.

This afternoon a battle between the Lakefield and Peterborough junior curlers was being fought on the ice of the Charlotte street rink.

Liberals! see that your name appears on the PRELIMINARY Dominion Voters' List within the next ten days! Don't delay; delay means disfranchisement.

A Rushing Business.

The Norwood Register says:—We had the pleasure of a call from Mr. Geo. A. Morrison, of Peterborough, on Tuesday last. George is doing a rushing business in the Mutual Reserve Fund Association in this village.

Cairo Coloured Comets

Stewart and Allen's minstrels gave one of their popular entertainments in the Opera House last night. The performance is allowed to be one of the best of the kind ever given in the town. The vocal and instrumental music was particularly good. The bones and tambo players were artists of the highest order. One of the bone players gave, with marvellous precision imitations of a train in motion, a steamboat, etc. Lovers of ministrelsy should hear them to-night.

The Coming Carnival.

To dress, or not to dress, that is the question:
Whether 'tis nobler at my home to loiter,
While others don brave costumes at the rink.
Or to indue me in Shakesperian garb
And by appearing take the cake. To sleep:
To miss the chance Aye, that's the rub!

This is something like the cogitations of those who think of dressing for the grand carnival to be given at the Skating Rink on Friday, Feb. 19th, which will, by all odds, be the most gorgeous affair of the kind ever attempted in Peterborough.

A Lecture

Entitled "Advice to Young Men" will be delivered in the Peterborough Opera House, on Monday February the 15th, by America's celebrated Humourist, Bob Burdette, of the Burlington Hawkeye. The Chicago Tribune says of him: "There is no difficulty in telling where the laugh should come in. It finds it way at the proper place without any promptings of its owner. Indeed it is impossible to prevent its breaking out into uproarous cachinations when Mr. Burdette is at his funniest, and that is nearly all the time. There is a perpetual flow of drolleries from his imagination which amazes one at the extraordinary prolificness and inexhaustibility of the fountain." Tickets, 25 cents, and 50 cents. Reserved seats at A.L. Davis & Co's.

Curling.

The Peterborough curlers scored an easy victory over their opponents from Lakefield yesterday afternoon, in the match played in the Charlotte street rink. The rinks and scores were as follows:—

Prof. Doucet's Concert.

There never has been a concert given in Peterborough so original and entertaining as that of Professor Doucet, to be given on Friday evening, Feb. 12th, promises to be. No local exponents of the beauties of violin music have ever appeared upon the stage here, and that feature of the concert alone forms a great attraction. In addition there is to be present the best of outside talent, including Mr. Richard Gardner, the solo cornetist of New York, and Miss Annie Howden, the cultured vocalist, who has captivated her hearers wherever she has appeared, as well as the local singers. Altogether the programme will be one of rare attractiveness, and in addition to its intrinsic excellence, the concert should be patronized out of gratitude to Prof. Doucet, who has repeatedly and willingly rendered his important services in aid of entertainments in connection with nearly all, if not all the churches. He deserves a bumper house next Friday night. Tickets 25 and 35 cents.

Postponed.

The races which were to have taken place at the Riverside Tobogganing Slide yesterday afternoon, were postponed to Tuesday next, on account of the inclemency of the weather. A number of tobogganers employed the afternoon and evening in practicing.

The Old Council Chamber.

The old Council Chamber that once was resonant with the eloquence of the City Fathers, now gives back the echoes of the chirruppy click of the billiard balls. The room has been remodeled and improved under the skillful hands of Mr. John C. Wood, so that its old habitues would not know it. Mr. Wood has made a very creditable job of it.

Albion Hotel.

Mr. John Irwin, of Bobcaygeon, having purchased from Mr. Wm. Kennealy, the Albion hotel, Ashburnham, will hereafter conduct it in first-rate style. He will be glad to welcome all his old friends and to make new ones. The bar will be found stocked with the choicest supply of fine liquors, ales, cigars, etc., and every attention will be given to promoting the enjoyment of the guests of the Albion.

Market Items.

There was an average market this morning. Meats and wood were the principal commodities offered. Sales were slow at the following prices:—Butter in prints, 20c.; geese, 75c.; turkeys, 80c. to $1.10; beef, per cwt., $4.00 to $5.50; pork, per cwt., $5.00 to $5.50; mutton, per lb., 5c. to 7c.; potatoes, 60 per bag; apples, 50c. to 80c. per bushel; wood from $2.25 to $4.00 per cord, hay $10 to $12 per ton.

George Street Methodist Church.

To-morrow morning and evening services will be conducted by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Tovell. After the sermon in the morning, the sacrament of the Lord's supper will be given. At the close of the evening service words of welcome will be given to the new members who have united during the past quarter. Evangelistic meetings will be held during the week, commencing at 7.45 p.m. on Monday. All are invited to attend.

Belleville's Bad Floods.

The water is still rising in the river Moira, Belleville, and the area of flooded district is still spreading. Mr. J.C. Gardiner, Express Messenger on the Grand Junction train states that the water which at night was not near his lodging, rose so high during the night that this morning it almost reached his bed, and his landlord had to carry him out in his arms. The postoffice block is a mere island in the surrounding flood. The furnace fires have been put out. There is a foot of water in the press room of the Belleville Ontario. The floor of every building south of the Queen's hotel is flooded with water. The wood yards on which the poor people rely for fuel are flooded and cannot be got at. There are many incidents of suffering related. One or two will suffice for a sample of hundreds. Mrs. Bishop, who lives on Front street south of the market square, passed the night walking about the house to keep from freezing. She had no fire and but scanty clothing, the thermometer registering 22½ below zero. Another woman on Pinnacle street, who gave birth to a child during the night, was alone with her mother without provision or fire.

Ladies on the Road.

How Two of them Fared Between Moncton and Winnipeg. Children Cheerful and Happy.

"A few weeks ago," said a gentleman at the Windsor, speaking to an acquaintance, "I was on my way to Winnipeg on business and having stopped at Port Arthur, took the Canadian Pacific train again there. To my astonishment I found two ladies, one the wife of a clergyman, travelling to Winnipeg with her two little girls. I soon made friends with the little girls, one of whom was about seven and the other a year and a half or two years old, and that acquaintance soon led me into conversation with the ladies. I found that they had come all the way from Moncton, N.B., and had travelled the whole distance without staying to rest at any point. I remarked with astonishment that both the children looked fresh, hearty and well, and seemed to enjoy their journey. Usually children become fractious and irritable after a few days on the cars, but these children were good natured, laughing and chatty, or rather the eldest one was chatty, for the little one could not talk very much. I remarked on this to their mother, who smiled and said, Oh we've been all right since we get on the Canadian Pacific. The cars are comfortable and pleasant. The ventilation is perfect and there is everything the children want, and no worry of any kind. We have occasionally seen a conductor, but never the same one twice, and we have had only to show our ticket about twice a day. Then the porter of the car has been so attentive that our wants have been attended to almost before we felt them. And the children have got so used to the car that they feel quite at home, and though they will be glad to get home, they will I am shure, not regret this trip, and neither shall I. We have seen some wonderful views along the route. I used to think there could be nothing so good as the scenery in the lower Provinces and along the St. Lawrence, but along the north shore of Lake Superior is vastly grander and more beautiful. When I go back again to see my friends in New Brunswick I shall take the Canada Pacific railway both ways, because I know now that I shall receive every attention and have a good light car to stay in, good meals on the road, and be well treated in every way. "That" continued the gentleman, "is what ladies think of the road, and I can heartily endorse everything that lady said of the accommodation of the great Canadian route."

The Assessment System.

An Insurance System that Has Been Endorsed by Atherton's Greatest Authority.

In Monday's edition of the Daily EXAMINER will be found an interesting report of the last annual meeting of the Mutual Reserve Fund Life association, whose the fifth year of the existence of this wonderfully successful institution was celebrated in a fitting manner. One portion of the report, which is taken from the New York Star, is of special interest to Canadian readers. During last year $51,000,000 of new business was transacted, and the management feel confident that in 1886 their business will reach the magnificent figure of $80,000,000. During 1885 nearly a million dollars have been paid to the widows and representatives of deceased members, and the report shows that the cost to members has been less than one-half that charged under the system heretofore followed. In Canada it is shown that the business has taken tremendous leaps forward, and Mr. Wells, the Canadian manager, is to be congratulated on having secured the second prize for the largest amount of new business done. A significant circumstance in connection with the meeting was that Hon. Sheppard Homans, who is president of a rival company, and the famous actuary and author of the American Experience Mortality tables, was present at the meeting, and not only took part in the discussion on insurance matters, but endorsed the new system of life insurance. A glance at the report to be published in Monday's impression will be at benefit to those who have not as yet had their lives insured.

Interesting Anniversary Occasion.

A Successful Social and Sociable Soiree in the Charlotte Street Methodist Church.

Last evening the congregation of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church celebrated the Anniversary of the opening of the Church in an original and highly successful manner. In the early part of the evening—from 6.30 to 8—the members of the congregation enjoyed the demolition of an excellent collation, laid out in the school-room by the ladies of the congregation. After full justice had been done to the excellent repast provided, an adjournment was made to the body of the church.

Here the deservedly popular pastor, Rev. F. H. Wallace, occupying the chair, after devotional exercises, introduced an informal yet delightful programme of short speeches and meritorious music. He prefaced the programme by saying that this was the first meeting of the kind he had attended since his last arrival to this charge, and contrasted its character with a little meeting he had presided over in the same place seven years ago, when the subject was, not congratulation on success, but a consideration of the question of closing up and selling the building. He opposed the proposal then and subsequent events had justified the hopes he then entertained. He wanted the present meeting to be a social one and would call on several members to make three minute speeches.

Mrs. Chambers and Miss Davis then sang a duet with good effect.

Mr. A L. Davis submitted the FINANCIAL STATEMENT,

from which the following figures are taken:

RECEIPTS.

Envelopes and collections	$1,891 05
Pew rents	589 95
Anniversary services	51 88
Mrs. Geo. A. Cox, towards Mrs. Chambers' salary	200 00
Ladies' Aid Society	300 00
Sunday School	200 00
Sundry sources	30 00
	$3,172 88
To which is to be added mission and connexional funds contributed	706 00
Total contributions for the year for all purposes	$3,878 88

EXPENDITURES.

Salaries, etc.	$1,958 33
Interest on church debt	182 20
Sundry expenditures	415 60
	$2,856 13

A slight deficit of $213.25 was due to the fact of there having been paid during the year under review, several liabilities previously incurred.

Rev. Mr. Wallace thought this was a good showing for a church that had been on its own responsibility for only seven years.

Mr. W. A. Morrow said the envelope system had worked admirably, and the congregation had shown great liberality. He was surprised to note the material progress the church had made.

Miss Ella Cox then sang very sweetly the sacred solo, "Ashamed of Jesus?"

Mr. J. L. Hughes remarked that the meeting did not seem like a Methodist gathering, since there was neither admission fee nor collection (laughter.) He believed such social gatherings were for the good of the church. He gave reminiscences, contrasting the present condition of the church with its past struggles for existence. He hoped ere long to see the church free of debt and with free pews (hear hear.)

Mrs. Logan sang a solo, acquitting herself so well that the audience demanded an encore.

Mr. Geo. A. Cox then made a few remarks to show that there was no deficit or if there were one, it only amounted to $60. He also contrasted the present condition of the church with the past when, it was difficult to pay the $800.00 salary of one minister and special efforts had to be made to secure even a so small an amount. The progress of the church in town was only in keeping with the progress of Methodism and in fact of all the churches in Canada.

Mr. Davis asserted that he had made a correct financial statement showing there was a small deficit, and he would'nt take it back in spite of Mr. Cox's special pleadings (laughter.) It was there in black and white, but they well knew that Mr. Cox had a peculiarly practical way, personal to himself, of explaining away and reducing deficits, (applause). Every body would be glad that under his practical mode of explanation the deficit had been reduced to $60.

Mayor Stevenson heartily approved of the present meeting and its social features, since the non-soliciting element was an additional source of enjoyment. He had been a member of the church over 40 years, and had seen many changes; he had been an official for nearly forty years and had never had any trouble with the ministers—he had always stood by the ministers. He gave interesting reminiscences, showing the progress of the church. He hoped to see many repetitions of the present gathering, and that another year the whole congregation would be present.

Mr. Cluxton congratulated the congregation on the feeling of harmony that prevailed between people and pastor, which was in contrast with the bickering of other days. The explanation was chiefly due to the excellent class of ministers now supplied, each succeeding one seeming to be better than the last.

Miss Brundrette then sang in good style the solo, "Angels Ever Bright and Fair."

After some remarks from the chairman, Mr. Chambers gave, with excellent effect, "Sing to Me the Auld Scotch Sangs," and was warmly recalled.

Rev. Mr. Wallace hoped this exceedingly pleasant and profitable meeting would be the precedent for an annual family gathering of a similar kind.

Mr. Cluxton moved a vote of thanks to the Ladies' Aid Society and to the choir. He connected with the former the name of Mrs. Cox, whose liberality both, of means and act, had contributed so largely to the success of the schemes of the church, and with the later the name of Mrs. Chambers, who deserved, he said, wonderful credit for the success she had attained.

A closing chorus by the choir "Tarry with Me," and the doxology and benediction closed the exercises of a delightfully harmonious and pleasant anniversary gathering.

Beware of cigars artificially flavored for the purpose of hiding the poor quality of tobacco used in flavored cigars. Insist upon having the old reliable brands—"CABLE" and "EL PADRE."

Don't be Deceived.

Beware of any druggist, who will try to induce you to take anything in place of McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. Don't be Duped.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brand of cigars, which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pay them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby.

EGAN'S IMPERIAL TRUSS.

Read the following extract from a letter of a well-known citizen of St. Catharines,—hundreds like it:

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 4th, 1885.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, I looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two springless trusses made in York State, costing me $40. Nothing would retain my Hernia. I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down. It holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. B. KING.

This new Spirial Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child sure; and 80 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. When writing please mention this paper. Address,

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance,

PALATIAL PREMISES.

The New Offices of the Central Canada Loan and Savings Company.

Elegant, Complete, and Conspicuous

As the Handsomest Business Offices in Ontario.

Creditable to the Company and the Town.

The Central Loan and Savings Company, an investment institution established in 1884, has been hitherto carrying on business in the offices of the Cox Block formerly occupied by the Midland Railway officers, but these having been found inadequate to the rapidly expanding business and importance of the company, a splendid suite of new offices have been fitted up, a brief description of which is appended.

The offices are in the Cox block, George street, next south of the portion occupied by the Bank of Commerce and adjoining, on the north the premises occupied by the Great Northwestern Telegraph office, the Canadian Express office and the Fire and Life department of Mr. Cox's insurance business.

The immense changes in the metamorphosed premises, which were formerly fitted up as two shops, do not make much difference in the exterior. The doors have been removed from the front of the lower shop, and two large planes of plate glass take the place of the door and window which formerly occupied the front. The other division contains the doors to the general office, flanked on either side with plate glass windows. On passing these doors, one enters, through a beautiful vestibule,

THE GENERAL OFFICE.

This is a room of splendid proportions, 60 x20 feet in area with fifteen feet ceilings. The relative positions of the different apartments, composing the suite of offices, may properly precede a more detailed description. The vestibule admits into the hallway of the general office or the portion free to the clients of the corporation and the general public. This is bounded on the right hand side by a screen six feet in height, extending from the vestibule to the beginning of the counter, and containing a door admitting to the offices proper, in which are the desks, etc., for the clerks. On the left of the public hall is the door leading to the private office of Mr. Cox, the president of the company.

The counter extends from the place of beginning, seven feet, (forming the rear limit of the hall mentioned above), to within six feet of the left hand lateral wall of the room; thence it extends at right angles to the first portion, and parallel with the wall, leaving a passage six feet wide, which terminates at the point where the counter makes another right angular turn and joints the wall.

At the end of this passage on the left is the doorway, leading to a loggia or ante room or passage, or both, for it forms a passage between the general office and the present telegraph, express and insurance offices, all also under the control of Mr. Cox, and gives admission on one side to the Board room and on the other to the President's office. It not only answers for a means of communication between the several departments, but serves also as an ante-chamber, and contains a porter's desk and seats for clients who may be waiting their turns for an interview with the President.

THE ANTE-ROOM

is 15x20 feet in size and separates the Board Room in the rear from the President's Office in the front. It is handsomely finished in black ash, with furniture finish in oil. The walls and ceiling are treated with paper, that of the latter disposed in panel, with border and centre piece of a tint to harmonize with the light cream and gold paper with tessalated pattern, that covers the walls, with its illuminated frieze and harmonizing border.

From this hall two doors, one at either end, the upper parts filled with wheel ground plate glass, give admission to a fine apartment 30x30 feet in area, lighted by two lofty windows, set each with a single plate glass pane and each having head-lights of stained glass. The woodwork of this room is grained in immitation of Honduras mahogany, by Mr. H. W. Watson, who has made a wonderfully exact immitation. The ceiling is papered and panelled with a double border and ornate corner and centre pieces. The walls are laid on with a costly gold paper relieved by a frieze with double border, the upper a beautiful floral design, 20 inches in width. The tints and combinations have been most successfully selected with a view to harmony of shade and tint. On the opposite side of the hall a magnificient screen, or rather, perhaps, partition, for it extends from floor to ceiling, composed chiefly of plate glass, artistically disposed and decorated, separates it from admission being gained to the latter by a glass door on the right hand side of the screen. This splendid apartment has an area of 15x27 feet, and is finished with as opulent an appearance with good taste, architectural symmetry and tasteful combination of material tint and tone. The wood work is all of solid walnut, finished in oil, so exquisitely polished that it resembles the similar finish usually applied to a piano or organ. The screen previously alluded to, which forms at once the rear wall of the room, and admits light to the ante room, has a basement of solid black walnut, constructed in the Queen Anne style, the panels enriched with elaborate designs in tracery. Surmounting this is a row of wheel cut plate glass plates enriched with a diagonally placed papyrus design. Above these is another row of 16x16 inch bevelled plate glass panes, surmounted by still another row of large panes of plate glass, ornamented with a border of sand blast etching. Surmounting all is the summit row of glass plates 8x8 inches, with similar style of ornamentation to the rank next below. This screen is a magnificent piece of design and workmanship, a credit, both to the designer Mr. J. E. Belcher, and the builder Mr. D. Belleghem.

This beautiful room has a most artistically treated ceiling. It is papered with no less than six delicately blending and harmonising shades, disposed in panel, with highly ornamental corner and centre pieces, of Eastlake design. The walls are covered with rich, heavy paper, with a ground of subdued flesh colour, brightened with gold sprays. A 20-inch border with floral pattern, surmounts a slightly wider frieze on a yellow ground, overlaid with fine figured design in green and copper colour bronze, finished with a border.

The room is provided with an open fireplace with richly carved marble mantlepiece.

It is lighted by plate glass windows, 6x10 feet, and above each is placed a splendid head light of rolled cathedral glass, set in lead. The glass is of different colors, ruby predominating, and produces a fine effect, and is a feature as beautiful as unique. By the way, a fine effect is here produced. Looking from the front to the rear of the room, the glittering rank of bevelled plate glass in the partition screen, that forms the rear wall of the room, is seen to reflect and exactly re-produce the stained glass head lights. Mr. Belcher must have carefully studied and skillfully applied the laws of reflection and refraction to arrive at so scientific a sequence of cause and effect. When the furniture and fittings, corresponding in every respect with the richness of their surroundings, are placed in position, there will be no business office in Canada that can bear comparison with it.

THE GENERAL OFFICE.

The vestibule before referred to is built of solid cherry in the Queen Anne style, with swinging glass doors, and with side lights of wheel cut plate glass. It is finished above with the moulded trusses, rail and spindles, that characterize the style. It is about eight feet in height, and the lower aspect of the roof is richly panelled.

The counter of this room which is also of solid cherry, highly finished in oil, is worthy of special mention. The salient features of its style is the Queen Anne framing, with the inclosed Japanese panels consisting essentially of minor panels of square and oblong shape respectively, placed in opposite corners. These panels alone are of mahogany veneer, and being treated with a high polish, produce a fine effect. The counter is surmounted with a screen of cherry inclosing wheel ground glass, beautifully ornamented and bearing the monogram of the company's title.

The ceiling of this room is marked by the same rich treatment as the other rooms. Owing to its length it is divided into two parts, with stucco centre pieces, covered with paper on a fawn ground, with 20-inch border with tessalated pattern in gold or a sage green ground and a 20-inch "style" in fawn, of another shade, and gold. A rich plaster of paris cornice surrounds the room and fills the angle between the ceiling and the walls. Next beneath this is a border, in a third shade of fawn, and gold. Below this is the frieze of terra cotta and gold, 22 inches wide, subtended by a ten-inch sage green band. Next comes the body paper on a pale canary, ground, studded with dianthus flowers outlined in gold. Lastly comes a dado 3½ feet high, consisting of panels, on altenate grounds of gold and umber.

There are for the use of this office commodious double vaults of large capacity built of solid masonry, fitted with fire and burglar, proof chilled steel doors and jambs, made by J. & J. Taylor.

The room is well lighted by two large plate glass windows on either side of the vestibute in front, and by two smaller one in the rear. These as are all the outside lights, are provided with stained head lights of rolled cathedral glass set in lead.

THE PRINCIPAL DOORWAYS

are massive and elegant. They are all solid black walnut, cherry or ash to correspond with the room which they face. These doorways are 4ft9in. x9 feet and are fitted with heavy hardwood doors, panelled in a style to correspond with the design of the other woodwork. The door-frames—if that is the right term—are most massive and elaborate, and, including the transom above each doorway are fourteen feet in height. The mouldings are rich, the architraves and friezes particularly so, being surmounted with a bold coraice, supported by moulded trusses from the pilasters of the architraves, the whole terminated with a spindled balconette rail. The transoms above the doors contain plate glass with the monogram initials of the title of the company. The locks, hinges, door-fittings, etc., were supplied by the Peterborough Lock Works.

The wood used in the finishing is all of solid cherry, ash or walnut, and is very highly finished in oil, the effect being improved by time.

THE HEAD THAT PLANNED, THE HANDS THAT WROUGHT.

The designs throughout were prepared by Mr. J. E. Belcher, architect, and whether considered in general or in detail, they reflect great credit upon his skill and taste. The result are offices, which, for solidity of structure, richness of material, and opulence of adornment, are not excelled, if even equalled, in any of the cities of Ontario.

And great credit is due to all engaged in carrying the plans into execution. The partition screen previously described as well as the vestibule and counters are the splendid product of Mr. D. Belleghem's establishment. Material, workmanship and finish are all of the first-class order. The finishing in oil and polish is especially creditable to Mr. George W. H. Browne, the foreman of the finishing department of Belleghem's Furniture factory.

The decorative paper hanging constitutes a job of which Mr. H. W. Watson has every reason to be proud. For happy combination of tints and effects, for richness of decorative result, for eminent effectiveness of entirety, it is worthy of all praise. It has received from competent judges from abroad the very highest encomiums, of all of which it is richly deserving. The materials were supplied by Messrs. A. L. Davis & Co's establishment.

The heating is done according to Bolton's system of hot water heating. The coils of pipes in the principal offices are covered with marble topped ornamental gratings.

Charcoal Burning.

In many processes for the conversion of crude materials, says Science, there is much waste, which is likely to be remedied only when such materials become scarcer, and hence more costly. In producing charcoal for use in the iron manufacture, the wood is commonly burned simply for the sake of the charcoal itself; and brick, dome-shaped ovens are used, from which the smoke and other products driven off by the process of slow combustion pass freely into the air. But in some cases such of the products as are commercially valuable are saved, with results that render it surprising that more care is not usually taken to retrieve what is so often lost. The success which has been met with at Elk Rapids, Mich., in saving and profitably utilizing the by-products of charcoal-burning is worthy of imitation. At this place is a blast-furnace turning out some seventy tons of charcoal-iron daily and consuming the charcoal from one hundred and twenty-five cords of wood, previously carbonized in thirty-five kilns. The smoke and vapors given off in the latter process are drawn—by means of two exhaust-fans three feet in diameter, and making twelve hundred revolutions per minute, through the bottom of the kilns, and thence through a long wooden pipe forty-two inches in diameter to the chemical works. Here the vapors are distributed to ten condensers, each containing seventy-five copper tubes two and a fourth inches in diameter through which cold water is passed. So much of the vapor as is condensed is then drawn off into a large settling-tank; the uncondensed part is forced under the boilers by steam-injectors and burned, thus helping to furnish the motive power required at the works. In the tank the larger part of the tar settles to the bottom. This tar is now mixed with sawdust and burned under the boilers, although formerly, when more in demand, it was drawn off and barreled for market. The remaining liquor is pumped to a second tank, and neutralized with lime. After the impurities have had time to settle, it is conveyed to a still, where the wood alcohol is distilled from the acetate of lime just produced. The liquor of acetate of lime is next evaporated by steam heat nearly to the granulating point, then conveyed to graiuers, and by the further application of steam it is obtained in the solid state. Finally it is shoveled out, drained, dried in pans, and put up in bags as the acetate of lime of commerce. The capacity of the works is ten thousand pounds of acetate of lime per day. The alcohol on issuing from the still has a strength of 8 per cent, but further distillation brings it to 85 per cent, when it is barreled for shipment. It is, however, again refined by other parties to 95 per cent, and used for various mechanical purposes. The daily production can reach 170 gallons.

A Bad State of Affairs.

The following conversation took place recently in Dallas, the Chicago of Texas, between two ladies:

"Why do you make such a disgusted face? Is there anything particular the matter with you this morning?"

"I believe my husband is fixing to run off with another woman."

"If I thought that, and I was in your place, I'd get even with him. I'd run off with some other man."

"Well, isn't that what I've been trying to do for the last six months. Where is the other man?"

"I am not sure, but if you were to encourage him a little, I think my husband would run off with you, for then I'd have an excuse to go with one of the leading citizens, a prominent politician, who has been paying me attentions of late. I'd rather have my husband elope with you than with any other lady friend I've got."—Texas Siftings.

Metal-Cutting Machinery.

An account is given of the introduction into England by Mme. DeLong of her metal-cutting machinery, which has for some time been in successful use in France. She has now, it appears, perfected some ingenious machinery, worked by steam-power, which cuts with the utmost precision the hardest and softest metals in any design, so that by it can be produced a gold lace-pin or a steel castle-portcullis from the solid metal, without any molding or filing. This unique industry is divided into four general branches. The first is the production of gates, doors, balcony-fronts, and other architectural metal-work, without casting—plates of brass a foot thick being thus cut into lattice-work at a single operation; a second branch is the making of lattice-metal work filled in with glass, to supersede the ordinary leaden frames for church and other ornamental windows; the third branch comprises the inlaying of plush and ebony jewel-cases, cabinets, etc., with red and yellow copper, steel, and other metals; and a fourth for the working of picture-frames, baskets, crests, etc., out of the solid metal fully finished.

There are 150,000,000 tons of coal waste piled up in the anthracite regions.

Liberals! see that your name appears on the PRELIMINARY Dominion Voters' List within the next ten days! Don't delay; delay means disfranchisement.

THE POLICY OF INSINUATION.

The Review, true to it character, takes delight in framing a deliberate, if implied, falsehood, for the sake of getting a vindictive thrust at the member for East Peterborough, because he voted against the buncombe motion of Mr. Sol. White, having for its object the whitewashing of the Dominion Government in respect of its guilt in causing the Northwest Rebellion. No honest man can draw from the premises the conclusion which the Review insinuates. Mr. Blezard voted against a motion which was practically one of want of confidence in the ministry and was, besides one with which the local Legislature had no more to do then with the question of Home Rule for Ireland, or Bismarck's spirits monolopy measure The vote cast was not against the spirit of the the resolution but against its object—that of attempting to force a mixed political body to pronounce upon the merit of a resolution having for its object the accomplishment of partizan ends. The introduction of the motion was a piece of unparalleled impudence. Its rascally ingenuity points to Sir John, who was the party to profit by its success, as the author of it. A hypothetical illustration. Suppose any clergyman in town is in his vestry ready to enter the pulpit and preach the sermon he has prepared. Suppose the Review suggests that instead of that, he preach a sermon on the subject of breach of the seventh commandment. Of course the clergyman refuses—that is votes against the proposition. Has the Review a right to draw the inference that that clergyman is in favor of adultery, and a friend to and sympathiser with the licentious? Yet such a conclusion would be every whit as fair as that the Tory organs draw from the rejection of Mr. Sol White's amendment, practically declaring an amnesty for Sir John and his Government for their guilt in causing the Northwest rebellion.

The Review is down on Mr. Blezard for voting against the amendment, but it has not a word to say respecting the attitude of the member for West Peterborough, on the subject. His name does not appear in the division list. Did he not, by shirking the vote, neglect his opportunity of gloating over the death of Riel and washing his hands exultingly in his blood? It would well become the Review to cleanse its own skirts before bedabbling with mud those of an honorable and honest legislator.

Our Tory contemporary very glibly bandies about the title "rebel," applied to Liberals. Every Liberal and every honest man sympathises with a majority of the Legislature in declining to prostitute that body to the promotion of base partizan schemes. Yet according to the Review every Liberal in Peterborough is a "rebel," a sympathiser with rebellion. Is this either manly or charitable; either honest or just? Our contemporary, doubtless would like to count many of the Liberals of Peterborough amongst it friends, while it takes every chance to virlify, abuse and slander them. Is its highest conception of patriotism, loyalty to a party leader. Must everything inconsistent with that, be branded as "rebel" and "rebellion?" Does the truly loyal citizen strive to sow dissension amongst neighbors, and scatter broadcast insult and slander? The local organ's course is only of a piece with the policy of the Tory party which seeks to set party against party, stir up religious rancour and all for the paltry object of securing a party advantage. This was the object of the resolutions recently condemned in the Local Legislature, and not a single member voted against them except as regarding them in the right of an expression of party trickery. The dodge was recognized and treated accordingly. It is not the first time, (nor will it be the last) that Mr. Meredith and his followers have sought to subordinate the interest of the Province of Ontario to strengthen Sir John Macdonald's unholy grasp in power.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A local Tory sheet mendaciously asserts that Hon. Mr. Fraser suggests a statute for Riel. In fact he suggested nothing of the kind. He did not need to do so, for the baser sort of the Tory party are erecting a statute to him every day. It is in the shape of a political platform and the foundation is the Regina scaffold.

The surprises in Irish history and Irish politics, says an authority, are infinite. The eloquent and patriotic Father Tom Burke was the most zealous of Irishmen in condemning the Norman conquest of Ireland and in holding the Normans up to execration. Yet Father Burke was himself a Norman—a De Burgh. Everybody knowns that Mr. Parnell is not only a Protestant, but of English decent. It is now affirmed that his ancestor was a follower of Cromwell, who settled in Ireland, because after the Restoration England became rather too hot to hold him. The Irishman can utter no healthier imprecation than in wishing "the curse of Cromwell" on the object of dislike, and yet she is indebted to Cromwell for the most popular leader his country has since produced, O'Connell alone excepted.

Assessment System of Life Insurance.

Annual Meeting—The Largest, the Safest and the Best Assessment Company in the World—Fifty-One Millions of New Business in 1885, and $838,675 Death Claims Paid—Sheppard Homans' Endorsement of the Company.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—As the Company which I represent in Peterborough has been grossly misrepresented by interested parties of the "old line Insurance business," will you kindly publish the enclosed report of our last annual meeting held on the 27th ult. The New York dailies are teeming in their praises of our new system. The Star says:

"Three hundred and fifty active life insurance agents, the representatives of every section of the United States, from Oregon to Maine, and from Georgia to Canada, met at the Bryant building yesterday, which was a very lively place—a remarkably lively place. The elevators were kept busy and full all day long, and the crowd which assembled was almost cosmopolitan in its character. People were there from every state in the Union. It was the celebration of the fifth year of the existence of the

of this city, of which E. B. Harper is president. The offices of the Mutual Reserve were not large enough to hold the members who had assembled, and the Board of Trade and Transportation, whose offices are on the fifth floor of the building, were generously thrown upon for the use of the company.

The following extracts are from the annual address of the president and from the report of the executive committee:

By an examiuation of the executive committee's report you will find that our new business written in 1885 exceeded $51,000,000, being more than $12,000,000 greater than that obtained in 1884.

WE CLOSE OUR FIFTH YEAR

with more than $123,000,000 insurance in force, making a net increase for the year, after providing for all lapses and deaths of more than $38,000,000.

We have paid within the year to the widows and orphans and representatives of deceased members $838,000.

We close the year with $1,075,000 assets.

Our Tontine reserve fund exceeds $550,000.

Our actual surplus exceeds $685,000.

Our total payment to our members to date exceeds $1,680,000.

The saving in cash effected through our system to our members as compared with the level premium rates charged for ordinary life insurance at same ages under the old system is as follows, viz.:

Saving for 1881	$ 857,279 83
Saving for 1882	1,102,867 15
Saving for 1883	1,698 404 39
Saving for 1884	2,175,010 72
Saving for 1885	2,931,706 18
Total saving in cash in 5 years	$8 765,268 27

In other words, more than $2 have been saved for each $1 invested with us.

TWELVE LEVEL PREMIUM COMPANIES, chartered under the laws of New York, remain. Nine of these companies issued in 1884 new business to the amount of $33,998,434.

These nine companies had insurance in force to the amount of $162,000,000.

The Mutual Reserve's new business in 1885 was 50 per cent. greater than the combined new business of three-fourths of all the New York level premium companies, and its total business in force was more than three-fourths as great as all of those nine level premium companies.

The expenses, other than that paid to policy-holders or their representatives of these nine level premium companies—whose new business was $18,000,000 less than that of the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association—were for 1884 $4,412,252.09, while the expenses of the Mutual Reserve, doing $18,000,000 greater business, were in 1885 but $416,704.42, or only one-tenth as much.

The Equitable Life is the most popular, successful and progressive of all the old line life insurance companies; its business in New York in 1884 was $11,020,852, while the new business of the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association for the same year in New York, its own home state, was more than $19,000,000.

THE ATTENTION OF OUR MEMBERS is called to the fact that the total salaries paid to all our officers, including that paid to our treasurer and scores of employes, were but $67,383.36, and deducting from the gross amount of annual dues, to wit, $216,000, the amount retained by our general and supervising agents as commission, and the amount reported but not received, we find that the net annual dues to provide for the general expenses of the associations were but $150,000, out of which salaries, rents of home office and about fifty branch offices, law, advertising, postage and the many other general expenses incident to the management of a great organization, have been paid, showing an economy of expenditures never before presented in the history of any life insurance company.

THE RESULTS OF THE YEAR 1885

present the following facts:

Not a dollar has been lost to our death fund or reserve fund account through defalcation or fraud.

We have doubled our cash surplus.

We have doubled our Tontine reserve fund.

We have nearly doubled our accumulated assets.

We have placed in force $51,000,000 new insurance.

We have increased the amount of insurance in force by $38,000,000, being more than double the net increase of that of the Mutual Life Insurance company of New York—the oldest and largest level premium company in the world.

We close the year with no losses due and unpaid.

Every claim has been promptly paid when due—in most instances long before due.

We have more than $2 in cash for every $1 of liability, and we begin the year 1886 with more than $123,000,000 insurance in force.

TOTAL MEMBERSHIP.

The total number of members who have been received since the organization of the association is 41,093, covering insurance to the amount of $164,056,500; and we close the year 1885 with a membership of 31,264, an insurance in force aggregating $123,253,500, after providing for all lapses and deaths.

THE INCREASE IN OUR MORTUARY RECEIPTS for the year over the preceding year is $581,882.16.

The increase in payments over the preceding year to our widows and orphans of deceased members is $355,778.

The net increase of membership in force is 10,485.

The Tontine Reserve fund is now increasing at the rate of $1,000 a day.

On December 31, 1885, this Tontine Reserve fund was $2 for every $1 of actual liability existing against the association, so that it is thus shown that if the association ceased at any time the further transaction of its business it would have on hand, in cash, $2,000 for every $1,000 of death claims.

The cash assets of the association on Dec. 31, 1884, were $814,563.44. During the year our total invested assets have increased to $639,879.31, while the total assets of the association aggregate $1,075,655.18.

Every legitimate death claim against the association has been promptly paid at or before the date due, and a large portion of the claims have been paid long before they were due, and thousands of dollars have been paid to meet funeral and other necessary and immediate expenses, the money in many cases reaching the distressed widows and orphans before the body of the deceased husband and father had been laid in the grave.

These figures are the record of the FINANCIAL GROWTH AND NUMERICAL STRENGTH OF THE ASSOCIATION.

The report of the Treasurer shows:

The committee upon prizes which had been offered for the largest amount of business done during the last three months in the year 1885, reported that in the first-class the first prize had been awarded to Crawford & Parr, of Chicago; the second to J. D. Wells, of Canada; the third to W. A. Brawner, of St. Louis In the second-class the first prize to C. D. Holmes, of Boston; the second to R. C. Jones, of this city; and the third to D. M. Caldwell, of Brooklyn.

Before the adjournment of the meeting President Harper called upon Hon. Sheppard Homans, who was present, to make a few remarks, and although the president of a rival company, and for many years prominently connected with one of the oldest and most powerful of the old-line companies, Mr. Homans found himself able to pay a high tribute to the method and character of the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association, frankly saying that although brought up in the old school of insurance he had long seen the merits and advantages and opportunities of the new system."

Hon. Sheppard Homans is actuary for Canada Life.

This should forever set at rest their miserable wailing.

Yours truly.
G. A. MORRISON.

A FRENCHMAN'S TRICK.

How he Reaps a Golden Harvest in New York City.

"Parlez-vous Francais, monsieur, s'il vous plait?" asked a figure that stepped out from the shadow of a tree into the middle of one of the walks in Madison square the other evening. The reporter said he did, a very little, and then looked inquiringly at his questioner.

The latter touched his battered cap in true military style, and then thanked all the saints in the calendar that he had found some one in this forlorn country who could understand him. He was a soldier, a veteran of Magenta and Solferino, of Sedan and Metz. As he said this he straightened his lean figure, twirled the long mustache under his squiline nose, and drew the stiffly-waxed imperial through his fingers.

"But now," said he striking his breast, over which the shabby frock-coat was buttoned tightly up under the chin, "now, I am starving without a sou! Would monsieur be merciful enough to help an unfortunate one who had been vainly looking for work ever since he came over from Paris, five weeks ago?"

The reporter gave him a quarter. The ex-soldier of Solferino saluted and marched down the path away from the electric light.

Ten minutes later the reporter was crossing the square again. As he stopped in the shadow of a tree to light a cigar he saw the figure of the veteran come up a narrow path and stop in front of a lady and gentleman who were approaching. The same question which had been asked before was again asked, this time with a bow in honor of the lady. The gentleman evidently answered in the affirmative, for the veteran launched forth in an impassioned appeal in French for a little money to keep him from starving. The gentleman put his hand into his pocket, then into the veteran's hand, and then passed on with his companion.

Hardly had they turned the corner of the path when a young man in a bob-tailed overcoat and very high collar with the ends turned over loomed up. The veteran met him as he had the others. The young man in answer to the question, "Parlez-vous Francais, monsieur?" stammered out an incoherent answer, whereat the veteran said in English that he was "very hungry," and then began to recite in French his pitiable condition. The young man listened as if he understood it all, and then giving him a half-dollar walked on with a self-satisfied smile on his smooth face.

"See here," said the reporter stepping out of the shadow, "if you'll tell me how long you have been playing this game, and how you do it, I'll give you half a dollar."

The veteran scowled, but as the half-dollar glittered in his questioner's hand he hesitated a moment and then laughed.

"Of course you aren't a Frenchman?" said the reporter.

"Oh, yes, surely, monsieur," said the beggar, earnestly; "but I am not exactly a veteran. I was a regimental cook once, but I have lived in America for five years. Business was dull last summer and I bethought myself how to make money. At last I had a little idea. Said I to myself, everybody admires being thought to speak French, and if I can make myself a flatterer to their vanity they will pay for it. So I came out one night and began, just as I asked you to-night, 'Parlez-vous Francais, monsieur, s'il vous plait!' It is certainly not every gentleman I meet who will stop, but the great number do. If they are with ladies they are more sure to stop a minute and let me tell them my story, for in that way they make an impression on the fair one with them. Many a one does not understand the language, and so he hesitates. Then I say in English that I am hungry, and then I go on in French. They know then that I am asking for money, and they listen and pretend to understand. They almost all give me money, but the most liberal are the pshuttreaux, or dudes, as you call them, like the one with the cane and the overcoat that just went past. But, voila, it is a fair exchange. They think they impose on me by pretending to understand me, and I make them pay for thinking so. Merci, monsieur; bon nuit." And with another salute he pocketed the silver and marched down the path toward Broadway, where among the hundreds of theatre-goers he resumed the carrying out of his little linguistic idea.—N. Y. Sun.

A curious change has come over Mr. Roscoe Conkling's personal appearance within the last year or two. He used to be very particular about his dress. His clothing was always fashionably cut, and was made of expensive and elegant materials. He wears a Derby hat which age has withered and custom staled, and generally a suit of dark-blue cloth which is almost big enough to fit David Davis. Mr. Conkling carries under his arm a large, thick stick. He seems to have developed lately a marked tendency to solitude. He is rarely seen with any body if he can help it, and walks along through the streets with his eyes fixed on the sidewalk ten or fifteen feet in front of him.

WIT AND HUMOR.

The Servians wanted a railroad to the Lower Danube, so the first thing they did was to capture the pass.

"He is utterly unscrupulous," writes an Irish editor of a political opponent; "and his memory is so poor that he frequently forgets one minute what he says the next."

A New York detective has discovered that it's all bosh that murderers can't sleep. When you get him on the subject of sleep a detective is thoroughly at home.—Philadelphia News.

"Come here, Walter, and let me shave you too," said Uncle Alfred, who was tonsorially employed, to his five-year-old nephew. "No," was the prompt response; "my whiskers ain't ripe yet."—Harper's Bazaar.

"How is this, doctor; you charge me five francs a visit?" "It is less than I charge anybody else." "That may be so, but then, you forgot that it was I who introduced the small-pox into the neighborhood."—Independence Belge.

The spectacle of a little man under a hat too big for him is only ludicrous, but the sight of a young country like Canada laboring under a debt of nearly $300,000,000 is too serious to be amusing.—Toronto (Can.) Truth.

"Do you think you could carve the turkey, Mr. O'Dynamite?" said the landlady to her new boarder. "Well, I should blush to hesitate. Why, I was one of the men who helped to blow up Hell Gate."—N. Y. Journal.

Tailor—Married or unmarried? Customer—Married. Tailor (to cutter)—One pocket concealed in lining of vest. Customer—Eh? What? Tailor (explaining)—To hide your change, you know, at night. I'm married myself.—Chicago Rambler.

De Guy: "Ah! Toggle, old boy, how do? What are you doing now?" Toggle: "I'm living on my father just at present." "You are? I thought your father died long ago?" "So he did, but I have a new one—Government pap."—Philadelphia Call.

Elijah—"Say, Zeke, I heah yo' brudder married a rich heiress; am dat so?" Zeke—"Yes; she's wuth 'bout fi' million." Elijah (surprised)—"So much as dat?" Zeke—"It's fi' million or fi' hundred, I dunno which, but I know it's 'normous 'mount."

"Do you allow drunken people on the train?" asked an old gentleman at the city hall elevated station. "Sometimes but not when they are too drunk," replied the brakeman. "Just take a seat near the middle of the car and keep quiet and you'll be all right."—N. Y. Sun.

A little Eighth street girl in studying her Sunday-school lesson came to the words: "And the King of Nineveh covered himself with sackcloth and sat in ashes." This was a puzzler. Finally she said: "Papa, what kind of ashes is satin ashes, that the king covered himself with."—Troy Times.

Young Highcollar—Beastly weathaw, this, Miss Symphony, bah Jove! Miss Symphony (tired)—You ought not to decry the weather, no matter how bad it may be, Mr. Highcollar. If it were not for the weather you would be at a loss for something to talk about. Now take me to mamma.—N. Y. Times.

A Philadelphia man who had been jilted by a widow practiced shooting at her photograph until he got accustomed to facing her, and then fired at her through a window, but without success. Despite his practice his hand shook when the live widow got her eye on him. No man with weak nerves should go gunning for widows.—Macon (Ga.) Telegraph.

Customer—"Aren't you afraid to leave all these clothes hanging out on the sidewalk with nobody to watch them? I should think you would be afraid somebody would steal them." Dealer—"Shteal doze glothes? Mein Himmel, no! (Confidentially!) Vy, mein friend, I dell you, I sells doze glothes so sheap that it doesn't bay to shteal them."—Somerville Journal.

An old farmer was in town Saturday and decided to take an oyster stew for dinner, as he had heard his neighbors talk so much about them. He called at Nix's restaurant and ordered his dish. He had told Nix it was his first stew, and when he had finished eating he was asked how he liked it. The farmer replied that he liked the soup very well, but wished he had left the pollywogs out.—Fort Gaines (Ga.) Advertiser.

"There is a man on our street afflicted with a bad case of the foot-and-mouth disease," remarked Ebenezer Jones to a young physician of his acquaintance. "Impossible!" said the young doctor. "I never heard of a human being taking that disease." "But he has it, undoubtedly." "What are the symptoms?" "Why, he thinks he is a champion pedestrian, and he is always talking about it."—Pittsburg Chronicle.

A good old deacon in Central Illinois who lost all his big drove of swine by hog-cholera took the matter so lightly that his wife felt called upon to reproach him. "Deacon," said she, "I should think you would be ashamed of yourself. It looks to me as though it was a judgment sent on you by the Lord." "My dear," said the good old man, "if the Lord wants to take out His judgment in three-cent pork, into which I would have to be pouring good 30-cent corn if they lived, let us not grumble."

A Troy clergyman tells a story told to him by a brother pastor of another city. The latter had in his flock a man who before conversion had been very profane in language. He had become earnest in prayer, however, and on one occasion was offering a supplication in the prayer-meeting for succor for a destitute family. "O Lord," he said, "send them a barrel of flour. O Lord, send them a barrel of potatoes. O Lord, send them a barrel of [here there was a painful pause for a word] pepper. Thunder, no!" he quickly exclaimed, "that's too much pepper."—Troy Times.

Maud and her George were in the parlor, and Maud's father—who, by the way, is down on the mugwumps—was laying down his political tenets to Maud's George. "I tell you," he exclaimed, "the Democratic and Republican parties embody all there is of wisdom in party management. We don't want any third party here." "That is it precisely, papa," replied Maud; "a third party is a nuisance anywhere." Maud's father counted noses, concluded he was the mugwump, and withdrew from the field.—New Orleans Picayune.

Making Up a Shortage.

"Just to think of it," he growled, with disgust written on every line of his face. "I was coming out of St. Louis the other day, and, the car being crowded, I gave half my seat to a demure little widow."

"How do you know she was a widow?"

"She told me so. She said she was awfully afraid of being robbed, and knowing by my face that I was an honest man, she wanted me to take charge of her portemonnaie until we reached Chicago."

"And you did?"

"Am I not a fool? Yes, I did, and as she passed it over sweetly said:

"'There's exactly $90 in it.'"

"We rode to Chicago without leaving our seats. As we ran in the city I handed her the purse. She opened it and counted the money.

"'Why, there isn't but $50 here!' she said, as she looked up at me.

"'But I haven't taken any.'

"'Well, I am $40 [illegible]. Perhaps you can explain it to the police.'

"'And what did you do?'

"I gave her the $40, of course. Please kick me a few hundred times."—New York Star.

Mrs. Hulscamp.

The New York To-day says: "Conversing with a lady of my acquaintance recently, the daughter of Signor Morosini, shed a curious and melancholy light upon the domestic life from which she found refuge in the romantic fashion already fully described by the press. She said: 'Imagine the life we led up there and in the city and I do not think you will blame me for what I did. We had a beautiful home, and were entirely shut out from the world by its walls. We enjoyed every luxury possible, but had to enjoy them all alone. We met at breakfast, and papa read his papers and then went to the city and left us to ourselves. We met at lunch. In the afternoon papa came home and read his papers. Then we met at dinner, and after amusing ourselves as best we could for the evening we went to bed. This was our life day after day the year round. We had few visitors and were not permitted to visit. When we attended the opera we sat upright in a box, looking neither to right nor left, and were hurried there and hurried home again as if there was a pestilence in the streets. We had no gentlemen friends, and were permitted none of the most innocent intercourse with the few gentlemen who visited us. It was like living in a jail or a nunnery, with no one to talk to, no one to talk to you—a perfect machine of a life that always went the same way. Papa was kind, but so stern in his ideas that he seemed to regard it as a crime for us to think or act for ourselves in the most trifling things. It was as melancholy as a constant funeral.'"

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $600 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employees of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and those we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this papre who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

Town Council Meeting.

The Town Council meets to-night in the Council Chamber at the usual hour. The themes for to-night will in all probability be sawdust and police.

"King Lear."

The above play will again be studied at the Y. M. C. A. Literature Class this evening, at 8 o'clock. An invitation to be present is extended to all young men.

Liberals! see that your name appears on the PRELIMINARY Dominion Voters' List within the next ten days! Don't delay; delay means disfranchisement.

P. A. A. A. Snowshoe and Toboggan Club Meet.

A large number of the members of the P. A. A. A. Snowshoeing and Tobogganing Club met on Saturday afternoon and tramped out to the club slide, where they passed time on their fleet toboggans.

Curling.

The local curling club have arranged to play a match with the Keene curlers to-morrow on the Charlotte Street rink. The Lindsay juniors are expected down on Wednesday to play a match with the persistently victorious Peterborough juniors. It is also probable a match will be played with a Toronto club during the week.

The Carnival.

The special features of the second grand masquerade carnival of the Fire Brigade Band's series, to be held on Friday, February 19th, will be:—A children's carnival in the afternoon, (at which four valuable prizes will be given for the best costumes,) and a special prize of a beautiful gold chain and seal, for the best representation by a gentleman of a Shakesperian character at the evening carnival.

Salvation Army Jubilee.

The following lines, which appear on a Salvation Army bill, would indicate an unusually lively time at the barracks at an early date. The "campaign" extends over four days:—Special campaign and war council conducted by Staff-Capt. Eadie, D. O., assisted by Mrs. Eadie, Capt. Philpot and 25 officers; call to arms; floods of salvation, silver collection; proclamation of freedom; commissioning of sergeants, bandsmen and secretary, and big bumping Jubilee; half night of prayer.

Monday, Feb. 15th.

This is the date for Burdett's famous lecture, "Advice to Young Men" in Peterborough Opera House. All should go and hear the most brilliant humourist of the day. Tickets 25 and 50 cents. Reserved seats at A. L. Davis & Co's. Read what the Halifax Morning Chronicle says of Burdette:—"The depth of pathos and brilliancy of wit in Mr. Burdette's lecture can not be appreciated until its words are heard flowing from the lips of the author. He came here with advance press notices such as seldom fall to the lot of any lecturer, but his lecture last night fully bore out the warmest praise previously awarded him."

George Street Methodist Church.

Yesterday the services in George Street Methodist Church were of special interest. Twenty-five new members were received into the church. A large number remained to the prayer-meeting at the close of the preaching service, when upwards of twenty persons signified their desire to become Christians. The Sunday school in the afternoon had the largest attendance of any Sabbath in the past history of the school, and at the Sunday school prayer-meeting about 50 scholars, many of whom were young men and women, give evidence, by rising to their feet, that they were anxious to be followers of the Saviour. Special evangelistic services will be conducted each evening of this week in the lecture room, by the pastor of the church, when it is hoped many more may be persuaded to given up every evil way, and turn to the Lord. These services are open to the public.

"El Padre" Cigars.

Universally acknowledged to be the finest 10c cigar manufactured. Don't be persuaded to take other brands. No chemicals or artificial flavoring used.

Special Services.

Evangelistic services will be held in the school room of the above church every evening this week, except Saturday, commencing each evening at half-past seven o'clock. All welcome.

Complimentary.

The Toronto Park Tobogan Club has honored the P. A. A. A. snowshoeing and tobogganing club by sending each of the officers a complimentary badge, which they now sport when on duty.

Minstrels vs. the Army.

The Salvation Army and a number of the Cairo Colored Minstrels attracted public attention yesterday by exchanging complimentary epithets on George street, while the army was in procession. The army carried the day.

The Lakefield Carnival.

Mr. B. M. Eden, manager of the Lakefield rink, announces the second grand carnival at the Lakefield rink for to-morrow night. A special invitation is extended to Peterborough skaters, who, no doubt, will patronize the carnival in large numbers. Several special and valuable prizes are offered for the best costumes. The Lakefield carnivals are always successful, and it is not likely this one will be an exception.

Prof. Doucet's Concert.

The concert to be given by Prof. Doucet, in the Opera House on Friday evening next, February 12th, promises to be one of the most attractive musical events of the season. It addition to the best of foreign talent, including Miss. Annie Howden, the charming vocolist and Mr. R. Gardner, the accomplished solo cornetist of New York, a number of Prof. Doucet's pupils will contribute violin selections. A number of local singers will also assist. No doubt the concert will be well patronized, as it deserevs to be. Tickets 25 and 35.

Trent Valley Canal.

It would be well for the Town Council to-night to recollect the meeting of next Wednesday, in reference to the Trent Valley Canal. It might be suggested that the Council express some decided opinion on the subject that may have weight with the Dominion Government, and also appoint a deputation—it would not do any harm to have the whole Council form the deputation—to attend the meeting. The matter is of vital local importance to Peterborough, and the Council should show that it gives a proper estimate to that importance by dealing with the matter to-night.

Business Changes.

The announcement of Messrs. Poussette & Roger, indicating a dissolution of the partnership which has existed between them for the past twelve years has caused general surprise. The cause of the change is that the business of the Peterborough Real Estate Investment Company, for which Messrs. Poussette & Roger were solicitors, has increased to such an extent that it became necessary that one of the firm should give his whole time and attention to it. The amount invested by the company, which in May, 1879, amounted to about $300,000, was in May, 1885, $1,151,216.82, and has increased rapidly since then. Mr. Roger retires from the practice of the law to assume the management of the Company and Mr. Poussette succeeds to the business of the firm, wit hthe sole solicitorship of the Peterborough Real estate Investment Company (limited.) The change has been contemplated for some time.

He Got His Case.

A good story is told of a celebrated lawyer of Massachusetts. He had a client who had patented a process for preserving meats, and another party living outside the state had commenced suit for infringement. All the courts had decided against the lawyer except the supreme court of the United States, and before the case reached that court the lawyer was searching to find somebody who had used the process before, and after much time and money had been spent in traveling around the country they found a man in Philadelphia who, it was said, had a process of similar nature. The attorney was not long in reaching that city and finding his man, who proved to be an undertaker and a German. The interview took place just after the German had had his dinner. He was asked if he preserved the bodies in his business, and making a favorable reply, was asked what he used and how he applied it. The sexton slowly described the articles from which the preserving material was made and carefully explained its application. The lawyer was delighted, but did not dare to show it, for he knew he had found the very thing for which he had been searching for years. He asked of the undertaker the privilege of witnessing the operation, but was told that strangers never came there.

The lawyer determined to see the thing through, if he possibly could. The undertaker said that he did not want anybody loafing around at such a time. This gave the undertaker an opportunity to offer his services as "helper," whereupon the man of bodies said if he wanted to "help around," when he was doing the job, he could come. This was more than satisfactory, and the lawyer made arrangements with the undertaker to send word to his hotel when he had a subject. Back to the hotel the man of law went, and quickly got together some old clothing, for he expected he would be called at any moment. Early the next morning the message came, and the searcher after knowledge repaired to the place of the dead. The body was placed in position, and the attorney, acting the part of the "boy," brought water and sponges, and with his own hands mixed the chemicals, at the direction of the undertaker, and applied them to the body. The body was very hot and he watched the body until it was ready to be dropped into the grave, when he was ready to leave the old undertaker and give him a chance to hire another boy.

When the case was called in the supreme court, it was but a short time after his experience at the undertaker's in Philadelphia, and when he argued his case he showed a wonderful familiarity with the subject, and as it was shown conclusively that the process had been in use years before the plaintiff had secured his patent the lawyer got his case. It was some years before the facts came out, and it is a question now if the other side in the case has found out how its opponent got posted on preserving bodies.—Boston Herald.

At a recent meeting of the Holland Society, in New York, a resolution talked about, but not passed, sought to require every member of the society whose name begins with "Van" to write it with a small "v;" those who have the prefix "de" to use the small "d," and those who have dropped the prefix "Van" to restore it.

EGAN'S IMPERIAL TRUSS.

Read the following extract from a letter of a well-known citizen of St. Catharines,—hundreds like it:

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 30th, 1885.

GENTLEMEN. Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, I looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two spring less trusses made in York State, costing me $40. Nothing would retain my Hernia. . . I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down, it holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. B. KING.

This new Spirial Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child sure; and 80 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. When writing please mention this paper. Address,

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance,

BRITISH EMPIRE MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE CO.
OF LONDON, ENGLAND.
ESTABLISHED 1847.

CANADA HEAD OFFICE, - - MONTREAL

Note the progress in Canada of this old and reliable company:

Policies issued in 1883,	:	$1,154,700
" " 1884,	:	1,000,200
" " 1885,	:	1,557,800

Proposals were received and declined during the year 1885 amounting to $173 500.

These figures are in excess of those of any British company doing business in Canada in any one year.

The Canadian branch being established a little over 3 years, and only now getting fairly organized, it will be seen at once what confidence the people have in this Solid and Liberal Company.

The Assets and Profits belong entirely to the Policy Holders. The last division was 22½ Paid in Cash, which is the actual value of all profits declared, whether in bonus additions or otherwise, in any company. Every 3 years the profits are divided.

Policies are entirely Unconditional, Non-Forfeitable, and Indisputable on any grounds. This Company has never contested a claim. All claims are paid immediately on proof of death.

Seven Hundred Thousand Dollars Invested in Canada. Fifteen Thousand Dollars Invested in Peterborough.

ALL THE ADVANTAGES OF A HOME OR CANADIAN COMPANY, with the additional security of a well established British Office the expenses of management are exceedingly low and will compare favourably with any Company in Canada.

Our Endowment Policies pay about 5 per cent. compound interest on the investment to the holders thereof, with absolute security, take, say, a 15 year endowment and draw the full amount of the Policy yourself with all the accumulations, on reaching that period, (15 years.) If death occurs prior your heirs receive the full amount of Policy.

If you deduct the Government Reserve and the Cash Surrender Value of the Policy in this Company we claim to furnish Insurance cheaper than any Assessment Society on the Continent.

Our rates are very low. The lowest with safety.

Its Policies provide a legacy, and not a law suit.

It has no Stockholders to claim any part of the profits.

It gives the Policy Holder absolute security, and the cheapest Insurance that is honestly possible under any contract which has a definite value to the beneficiary.

No liability whatever is incurred by the Policy Holders no assessment calls to be sued for, should you wish to discontinue your Policy.

Accumulated Assets between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000.

Annual Income over $1,000,000.

Money to Loan. Funds of the Company, in sums of $5,000.00 up to $50,000 00, at 6 percent. straight, no expenses, absolute security required.

LIBERALS, LOOK ALIVE!

Now is the time to be alive to the importance of every Liberal name being put on the "preliminary" list—the basis of all future lists under the Dominion Franchise Act.

Tory newspapers do not need to appeal to individual members of their party, to take action, for Sir John's revising officers are paid by the people of Canada to work in the interest of the Conservative party, and Conservative "unions" are working night and and day to see that every Conservative vote goes on the first list.

Every Liberal elector has to look out for himself personally, if he desires to have a vote at the next general Dominion election. THE EXAMINER has published the qualifications necessary to constitute a voter; but the grand qualification is to get your name on the first list.

If you are qualified, and are not on the assessment roll, you must send to the revising officer or his clerk AT ONCE a declaration of qualification.

You can obtain the necessary forms of application for the West Riding by applying to Mr. R. E. Wood, barrister, Mr. E. B. Stone, barrister, or at the EXAMINER Office, and for the East Riding from Mr. W. A. Stratton, barrister.

There is not a moment to lose. The first lists must be made up, printed and distributed before the first of March.

Don't delay; delay means disfranchisement.

T. V. C. CONVENTION.

There is every indication that there will be a large attendance at the Trent Valley Canal convention, to be held here on Wednesday. It is understood that most of the municipalities in the district will send deputations. The Peterborough deputation will consist of the entire council and the council of Trenton, will arrive in town at 6.15 this evening to be in readiness for the occasion. It is to be hoped the convention will settle down to business and formulate some feasible scheme for the prosecution of further work, which the Government cannot help adopting, that political preferences will be set aside, and a distinct demand made that the Government cease paltering with this important matter—that the Government cease to regard it in the light of a factor in working out their political schemes—that the Government enter upon the prosecution of the work in a business-like way and show an honest intention of practically exhibiting their appreciation of the importance of the work as a national highway for the products of the field, forest and factory, and less anxiety to make it a thoroughfare over which to travel into power.

A South Monaghan Success.

A Successful Concert, and Pleasing Presentation.

A very successful entertainment was given in the Agricultural Hall, South Monaghan, under the auspices of the South Monaghan Agricultural Society on Friday evening last, February 5th. Mr. W. Rutherford, President of the Society, occupied the chair. The entertainment was well attended and the audience was delighted with the rendition of the excellent programme, which was as follows:

PROGRAMME.

Instrumental Solo	Miss Gillott
Recitation	"Papa's Letter." Miss Lelia Wright.
Play	"Arabella's Poor Relations."
Song	Miss Willan.
Tableau	"Woman's Rights."
Song	Miss Lily Dixon, (Peterborough.)
Tableau	"Just let me catch you."
Song	Miss Minnie Willan.
Play	"Those Awful Boots"
Song	Miss Hutchings.
Recitation	Miss Winslow.
Play	"Pinkin Ridge."
Tableau, in three scenes	Scene one, Courtship, scene two, Marriage, scene three, Matrimonial Difficulties.

Between the scenes spirited music was discoursed.

At the conclusion of the programme Mr. Clarke escorted Mr. D. Truscott to the platform, where Mr. T. M. Willan read the following address, and Mr. Wm. Rutherford on behalf of the directors of the Society, presented Mr. Truscott with a valuable watch, as a memento of the esteem in which he is held by the members of the Society, and in recognition of his valuable services as an officer of the Society.

D. Truscott, Esq., South Monaghan:

DEAR SIR,—We, the Directors of the South Monaghan Agricultural Society, desire to take advantage of the occasion of your resigning the Presidency of the Society, to express our regret at your finding it necessary to retire from a position, which you have filled with so much credit to yourself and the township, and with so excellent results in the interests of the organization.

We would also desire to formally recognise the untiring efforts you have put forth during your seventeen years' connection with the Society, for the promotion of the agricultural, stock and other interests that form the basis of a farmer's prosperity. Your wisely directed zeal has greatly added to the interests of the Society, and largely aided in the great measure of success it enjoys and has enjoyed.

Permit us, dear sir, in tangible recognition of the services you have rendered, to present you this watch, which will, we trust, from day to day recall associations, we hope, mutually agreeable.

May it not only be a connecting link with old associates, but may it mark the hours of a long life, whose declining hours may be full of happiness.

Signed on behalf of the Directors,
WM. RUTHERFORD.

Protection With a Vengeance.

The Benefit of a Few to the Detriment of Many.

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

MR. EDITOR,—We take the liberty through your columns to ventilate a matter of which the ratepayers of the County of Peterborough should be informed and the artful dodge perpetrated upon them through the medium of certain merchants in Peterborough, Lakefield, Norwood, Warsaw and Keene, terminating in a by-law recently passed at the late meeting of the present County Council, governing hawkers and peddlers. Previous to the latest sitting of the present County Council, the by-law regulating such parties, enacts that those pursuing such callings shall take a license, therefor, and pay at the rate of $30 per year for a two horse vehicle, such sum being considered a reasonable sum for the use of the roads, and deemed by us not unreasonable and which sum we have, since commencing business in this county cheerfully contributed. We may be permitted to state that our line of business is a specialty in teas, our business operations extending over a large portion of Ontario and our patrons principally the farming community. This business commenced in the year 1850 and has been gradually extending until at the present time we are direct importers of one-twenty-eighth of all the tea imported into Canada. Our manner of distribution places in the hands of the consumer unadulterated tea at a small margin over the cost of importation and the thousands of our patrons fully recognize in us business ability — honorable dealing and better and cheaper goods that could previously be purchased from men of small means, low credit and large expenses in proportion to the limited circle of their trade, thus causing the consumer to pay them excessive profits to meet current expenses and making the paying customer pay indirectly the loss sustained by their not properly criticising the responsibility of their customers.

Now, in order that competition on our part may be destroyed, a number of petty traders from the above named places, met quietly and without notice only to those in the ring, and concocted a document called a petition—without signature, the parties concocting the same being ashamed to father their monstrosity. Consequently we may consider the production not only illegitimate but a monster, and should have been strangled by an intelligent Council at its birth; but, no, this precious lot of business cormorants appeared before the august body of County Councillors and demanded that they should be protected, that the flesh pots of Egypt belonged by right and inheritance to them, and that the ratepayers, the farming community, should not exercise their undoubted right to purchase from whom, where and on what terms they thought best. They felt that, providing our firm could be forced by prohibitory measures from the field, that the farmer would be again in their rapacious hands. It is a well recognized principle in all intelligent legislative bodies that in the passing of any act private interests shall be considered and notice of such act is usually published in order that all parties affected by the same may have a fair and impartial hearing in so far as their respective rights are involved. We may here state that we as merchants are not the only parties affected, the consuming community should have a voice in order that all effected thereby may fully consider and act in the protection of their respective interests. What was the result in this case? The County Council of the County of Peterborough, elected to represent the interests of their constituents, to protect them from wrong, to increase rather than limit their freedom, they listen to the one side deputation and passed a By-law not for revenue (which law permits) but substantially to destroy competition and thus force their electors to purchase from the men who require more business exercise to keep them from sleeping.

The Council in order to drive us from this market, enact a By-law ordering the payment of a sum five times in excess of any individual residing within the county, they even go so far as to enact that even in the event of our living within the county and having a head office outside the county that we have not the same rights as those who live within the county, though devoid of either business ability or enterprise.

This sort of legislation is worthy of the dark ages or the modern despotism of Russia, and we believe an intellectual people loving liberty will not tolerate such tyranny in this 19th century.

There was a period when when monopolies were the chief factors in augmenting the revenues of tyrant sovereigns in England but that day is gone. Liberty and equality are the chief characteristics of English law, the rights of every subject high or low rich or poor being respected, so far as his person and property are concerned.

We may state to our legion of patrons in this county that one of our firm is a resident and freeholder in Peterborough; that we are here for business not pleasure and we purpose staying (providing tyrannical municipal enactments do not crowd us out) for the benefit of the many and we trust for the injury of none.

Yours, etc.,

From the Commissioners of the town trust, giving a statement of the moneys expended for the year.

Moved by Mr. Cahill, seconded by Mr. Davidson, that Mr. Hall be paid the costs in the Dickson estate by-law case.

Mr. Rutherford said the council did not order the case to be proceeded with and doubted if the Mayor had any authority to do as he had done.

Mr. McNaughton thought the Mayor should have asked the opinion of the Council in the matter. He thought the Council should not acknowledge the account and made a motion to that effect.

The Mayor said if the Council objected to the case being proceeded with they should not have permitted it to go on. There was no use saying they would not pay it now. It must be paid immediately.

Mr. McClelland said the late Mayor had defended the case in opposition to the wishes of the Council. He had explained this to Mr. Edwards at the time.

Mr. Moore said he had conducted the case against the town for some time and the Council had allowed it to go on. They were responsible, and it had to be paid, or a writ would be issued to morrow.

Mr. Cahill said there was no doubt about the matter. The Mayor had a perfect right to defend the By-laws of the town.

Mr. Menzies said it could not be undone and should be paid.

The motion passed on the following vote:

YEAS,—Cahill, Davidson, Kelly, McNeil, Yelland, Moore, Menzies and Hartley.

NAYS,—McNaughton, McClelland and Rutherford.

The Clerk notified the Council that their request to the County Council asking that county pay half the costs in the volunteers reception, amounting to $149 had been acceded to.

A discussion ensued in which it was maintained that Mr. Brown, who had been allowed $20 as damages, by the Finance Committee, was entitled to a much larger sum. He would accept $50, but if he did not receive that amount he would place it in court.

Mr. Moore moved that Messrs. Rutherford, Menzies, Hartley and McNaughton be a special committee to reconsider the claim of Mr. Brown.

Mr. Rutherford moved, seconded by Mr. Hartley, that Mr. Davidson's motion to adopt the report be amended by striking off the clause, allowing Mr. Brown $20, and that his claim be referred back to the committee for reconsideration.—Carried.

MOTIONS.

Moved by Mr. Cahill, seconded by Mr. Davidson, that all the members of this Council are hereby appointed a committee to meet with the deputation re the Trent Valley Canal, to meet in the Council Chamber on the 10th inst. at 1.30 p.m., also that the janitor be directed to have the Chamber in readiness for a large meeting.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Kelly, seconded by Mr. McNiel, that the clerk be requested to ascertain the cost of inserting the advertisement in the Toronto and Montreal newspapers, notice of which has been given at a previous meeting of the Council.—Carried.

Mr. Moore made a short speech in favor of consolidating the by-laws of the town. The way the by-laws were now it was hard to tell if some of them were in force or not, as they had been repealed in part and in whole for years.

Moved by Mr. Moore, seconded by Mr. Davidson, that the mover and seconder, the Mayor and Mr. Cahill, be a special committee of this Council to compile and consolidate in such form and manner as they shall consider best, the various by-laws of this town now in force, or which may come into force before consolidation be effected, and that they present the roll in manuscript when complied, with any suggestions the said committee may deem expedient for the repeal, amendment or extension of said by-laws, to this Council for such action thereon as this Council may deem proper.

The clerk of this Council is to engage a clerk to do such copying in connection with consolidation as the chairman of said committee shall require.

On motion of Mr. McNaughton, seconded by Mr. Hartley, Mr. Moore's motion was amended by adding Mr. Menzies name to the committee.

SAW DUST MEMORIAL.

Moved by Mr. McClelland, seconded by Mr. McNaughton that the Council go into Committee on the second reading of the memorial regarding the petition before the Government to exempt the Otonabee River from the Fisheries and Navigation Act, held over from last meeting.—Carried.

Mr. Menzies took the chair.

On motion it was decided to hear both the sawdust and anti-sawdust sides of the question from the representatives of the sides present. Three to speak on each side for ten minutes each.

Mr. Edwards was then called on. He said he took an interest in the matter as he thought it was of much importance to the town. He thought the Council, in taking action, should consider seriously what should be done. The lowering of the lock dam showed to what extent the sawdust had filled the lake; in many places mounds of sawdust appeared above the surface. The anti-sawdust association had been formed to do all in their power to have the dust removed and the further filling of the lake prevented. They did not wish to injure the mill-owners or cause them to put in machinery if it could be avoided. The health of the community was the main object. It had been shown that decaying sawdust was the cause of malarial fevers. The prosecutions against mill-owners had been made to give them time to make change when the mills were not running. It was not a question for next season but for all time to come, as if the stream was exempted it would be for all time to come. He did not think the cost of putting in the appliances to carry off the sawdust and burn it would be as much as represented by the millowners. Millmen disagreed very much as to the cost. He had been informed by good authority that $300.00 would cover that cost of the necessary charges. If the millowners could not afford to do it themselves, the Council would assist them. He would be willing to contribute. It had been shewn that the recent accumulations of sawdust in the lake had been very great. There was no doubt but the decomposing sawdust would create a disease. The Anti-sawdust Association do not wish to persecute or prosecute, but believe that health should be considered before wealth. Dr. Bryce had said Spalding's bay was a rose bed to the Little Lake. The Ottawa river was quite different, as it was so large and the currents so strong that the sawdust did not lodge in the channels.

Mr. Irwin questioned Mr. Edwards, who admitted that he had been misinformed regarding Boyd's mill at Bobcaygeon. Mr. Irwin also questioned him regarding his information as regarded the costs of furnaces.

Mr. Hilliard said it was a more important matter than was supposed. The agitation was originated by a number of young men who had roped in older heads. They put him in mind of a child starting to walk from one chair to another, making a rush and falling midway. The expense was what tripped them. Mr. Edwards had said that if exemption was once granted it could not be revoked. Such was not the case. There was a clause providing that it might be reveked. The older heads of the town, the men who had built the town were opposed to the anti-sawdust agitation. When the cost of re-constructing the mills was taken into consideration, it was out of the question. The mills would have to be torn down and raised 6 or 7 feet and the whole machinery changed. A furnace would also increase the insurance very materially and endanger the mills. The change was quite out of their reach. The slabs and edging compose the foundation of the banks in the lake. If they were removed the sawdust would be carried away. Mr. Edwards said it affected health and navigation. I was true it had closed up an old channel, but the health of the community had not been affected. There was evidence to show that the navigation had not been affected lately. The town was not unhealthy. It was a wonder there was not more sickness, as it was situated on a porous gravely bed, which filters all kinds of refuse matter into the lake. The doctors could not place their fingers on one case of sickness caused by the sawdust. The mills had built up Peterborough to be the banner town of Ontario. It was not the farming community, as Lindsay was surrounded by a better agricultural district and could not be compared to Peterborough. The mills had laid the foundation of the manufactories in town Wm. Hamilton's foundry was one of the number. The mills started it, and now the machinery of the foundry finds its way all over Canada. The cost of reconstructing his mill would not be less than $7,000 or $10,000. He agreed with Mr. Edwards that if the changes could be made at a reasonable rate they should be.

Mr. Rogers appeared as a delegate for the anti-sawdust association. He thought the mill-owners could put in machinery at a much less cost than they said. There were many who did not know what damage was being done by the sawdust. He did not wish to persecute the millmen. If other people committed a nuisance they were prosecuted, and he did not see why the mill-owners should not be. If they would keep out all the sawdust they could, he would be satisfied, but they allowed it all to go in the river.

Mr. Irwin, denied that all the sawdust was put in the mill. An expert who had visited the mills calculated that one tenth of the refuse was sawdust of which 60 per cent. escaped to the river. He said Mr. Edwards was aware that it would cost more than $2,500 to build a furnace as he had been informed by Edwards & Co. who had a mill no bigger that the Nassau Mill's, that their furnace cost $10,000. Fishing had not been injured by the sawdust as it was better last season than for 10 years. He would not reconstruct his mill as he could buy a mill up or down stream for less money.

Mr. J. J. Lundy, said he endorsed what Mr. Edward's had said. The millowners had said nothing against the memorial and he did not see why the Council should not pass it. He could give cases of sickness traceable to the sawdust. Many fevers were caused by it. Navigation was also affected. He thought that the statement of Dr. Bryce should have more weight with the Council than all the speeches of the millowners to the contrary.

Mr. Hazlit tesaid that in his experience the navigation had not been affected by the sawdust of late years. He had considered the cost of reconstructing the mills. He had Mr. Wm. Hamilton to look through the mills and he said the sawdust could be no prevented from reaching the river without reconstructing the mills. The cost of rebuilding and the necessary machinery would cost $30,000, and if the furnace was placed on the other side of the river $31,500. He was sure the other mills would be equally difficult to reconstruct as they were built on the same plan. The late prosecution was a malicious one. The magistrate delivered judgment in this case in a manner never done in the town before, and probably not in Canada. He came into the court room with the judgment in his pocket all written out, and delivered it without ever hearing any evidence. He thought the anti-sawdusters were dyspeptic and imagined fever was prevalent. The sawdust was really a disinfectant. Resin and turpentine of which it was chiefly composed, were the best of disinfectants. Those who complained against the bad effects of the sawdust did not look as if they had been affected by it, such as H. Strickland, John Burnham, M. P., H Calcutt and F. Winch.

Mr. Cox said if he thought as Mr. Lundy had said, the health of the community was being injured, and thought the mill-owners could not by a reasonable expenditure overcome the difficulty in question, he would be in favor of granting no exemption, but he was satisfied the difficulty could not be overcome. If the mill-owners were obliged to keep out all sawdust they would have to rebuild which they would not do, and it would be the means of driving them out of the town. It would affect him. He wished he had placed his money in mortgages like Mr. Lundy. But as he had it in brick and mortar he would suffer if the millowners left town. The mills employed 600 men, and if they were all obliged to leave town it would be a serious loss. He did not think the health of the town was affected by the sawdust. It was one of the healthiest towns in America, as shown by statistics. The town was offering bonuses for manufacturers and at the same time contemplating measures that would drive out others. He knew by experience that it cost $8 or $9,000 to build a furnace. Mr. Ulyott's cost $9,000. The insurance was also increased. As the millowners had said they could buy mills cheaper than rebuild them in town.

Mr. Edwards said that the statement made to the effect that the navigation was not impaired of late was not correct. The prosecution against the millowners had been initiated when the mills were running and that they had prolonged it by endeavoring to choke it off. The judgment made by the Magistrate was not made without evidence. Mr. Fenneste, solicitor for the defendants, had notified Mr. Dumble that they would plead guilty and he acted accordingly, the same as any other judge would do. The statement regarding the judgment was on par with the one holding that sawdust is healthy. He knew of persons whose health was injured by the sawdust. If the mill-owners left town they could not take the water power with them, and others would be glad to get it. Mr. Morgan had said that there was more typhoid fever in Peterborough than any other town in Canada. It was a question of the Council would allow the millowners, with their backers, to fill up the lake. He then went to show how valuable it was to the town. Mr. Cox's brick and mortar would be less value to him if an an epidemics should break out than if the millowners left.

Mr. Hazlitt said their counsel had pleaded guilty technically, and also pleaded that they had not broken the spirit of the law.

Mr. Hilliard said it was not of so much importance that the navigation at Ashburnham was affected. In answer to Mr. Edwards' question of where would they go to, he would say there was a good mill at Rice Lake ready for a purchaser.

With a view to bring the matter to a focus, Mr. McClelland moved that the memorial receive its second reading.

A motion made by Mr. Kelly, seconded by Mr. Hartley, that the Mayor take the chair, was lost.

The clerk read the first clause of the memorial, which accused the mill-owners of allowing all their refuse to go into the river Otonabee and praying that the Government do not grantthe petition of the mill-owners asking for exemption, was voted upon and lost.

The Mayor resumed the chair.

Mr. Moore said he was anxious that the mill-owners should not be allowed to put all their sawdust in the river, but that they should not be prosecuted for allowing that which could not be avoided to go into the river. If the Council did not take some action the Government would pass the order-in-council, granting the mill-owners exemption. He thought this could be overcome by a motion he was about to put.

Moved by Mr. Moore, seconded by Mr. Menzies, that this Council, recogising the great importance of the lumber interests in and to the Town of Peterborough, and the material advantage and benefits derivable from the successful operations of the lumber mills, also the possibity of losing or seriously injuring this staple industry by the strict enforcement of the law, relative to the throwing of sawdust and other mill refuse into the river Otonabee or the back lakes, and bearing in mind the great desirability of keeping them as free as possible from deleterious matter, this Council, to the best of its judgement, is of opinion that the interests of all concerned would be best observed by the riged enforcement of the said law regarding all the mills on the Otonabee river and the back lakes flowing into it, save that the mill owners who use and run upright saws in gates attached to pitmans in use therein, (so long as they use pitman direct action from the water wheel) should be permitted to allow so much of the sawdust from their mills to go into the river as necessarily is carried into it by such upright saws, provided that all other sawdust, slabs, edgings, sidings, butts, bark and all other mill refuse of every kind and description, made, formed or caused in the said mills is and are at all times kept out of said river and lake and otherwise burnt and disposed of by the millowners, lessees or others in charge thereof, and that this resolution should take the place of a memorial on the subject to the Government and that the Clerk do sign add seal the same.

MIDNIGHT ELOQUENCE.

Mr. Cahill said he was desirous that the health of the town should be maintained. He was glad the matter had been taken up by the Anti-sawdust Association. Mr. Moore's resolution suited his views. He thought that Spaulding's bay was worse than the lake, but all should be done to prevent the lake from becoming a second nuisance.

Mr. Hartley said it also suited his views.

Mr. McClelland said the motion might have been put in as an amendment to the first clause and avoided all discussion.

Mr. McNaughton said he was sorry the Council could be so easily soft-soaped.

Mr. Kelly said he could not agreed with Mr. Moore's motion. The mill owners were asking the government for the same exemption for the Otonabee as the river Ottawa had, which would permit them to put in all their sawdust. He was opposed to this, as all the Council seemed to be. The memorial should have been passed asking the government to grant no exemption, and then they could give the mill owners all the leniency they desired.

Mr. Hazlitt said the motion gave them all the privilege they wanted, and they would ask no more.

Mr. Yelland said the motion met his views and he had been of the same opinion all along.

Mr. Edwards said the Anti-sawdust Association did not ask them to keep out all the sawdust, but only that that could be avoided. The motion was worded to appear all right, but it was not.

A vote was taken at about half-past twelve and the motion carried.

The Council then adjourned.

The Victory of Patience.

Armed of the Gods! Divinest conqueror!
What soundless hosts are thine! Nor pomp, nor state,
Nor token, to betray where thou dost wait,
All nature stands, for thee, embassador,
Her forces all thy serfs, for peace or war.
Greatest and least alike, thou rul'st their fate,
The avalanche chained until the century's date,
The mulberry leaf made robe for emperor!
Shall man alone thy law deny?—refuse
Thy healing for his blunders and his sins?
Oh, make us thine! Teach us who waits best sues;
Who longest waits of all most surely wins.
When Time is spent, Eternity begins,
To doubt, to chafe, to haste, doth God accuse.

J. R. STRATTON.

Sister Mary.

Tom and Harry, and Charlie and Jim,
Have each their favorite cousins;
And if one listened to brother Jack,
He has sweethearts by the dozens;
But I have loved, from my boyhood up,
With a love that naught can vary,
The best little girl in all the world,
My dear, pretty sister Mary.

For Mary is always up to the mark,
Whatever you want her to do;
She mends my nets, and makes by balls,
And the flag for my yet canoe;
She copies my songs, she writes my notes,
And never has called me dictator;
For if I give her a kiss and a smile,
There's nothing she likes better.

If you take a sweetheart for a walk,
She will wear a hat and a feather,
A stylish dress and a stylish cloak,
And nothing that simple the weather.
But Mary will carry my fishing gear,
In a sensible dress and bonnet;
A sister's the girl for a real good time,
And you may rely upon it.

And you never can trust a sweetheart,
She is oftener cross than kind;
And how can you hope to please her,
When she seldom knows her mind?
But when these things go like a pleasure trip,
Or when they go contrary,
I'm sure of the same true sympathy
From my little sister Mary.

Sweethearts will play with a fellow's love;
They can give you lots of sorrow;
But Mary's good as gold to-day;
And as good as gold to-morrow.
She went away for a week one time,
And, oh! how my sad heart missed her!
I wouldn't take dozens of sweethearts
For my dear little, jolly sister.

THE INSIDE OF SIAM.

An Ex-Governess Shows Up the Court and Its Wickedness.

Mrs. Leonowens, who was governess of the young Princes of Siam, published a sketch of the Prime Minister of that country as follows. He was the actual ruler of that semi-barbarous realm and the prime contriver of its arbitrary policy. Black, but comely, robust and vigorous, neck short and thick, nose large and nostrils wide, eyes inquisitive and penetrating; his was the massive brain proper to an intellect deliberate and systematic. Well founded in the best idioms of his native tongue, he expressed strong and discriminative thought in words at once accurate and abundant. His only vanity was his English." She also sketches his harem.

"We discover in the center of the hall a long line of girls with skins of olive, creatures who in years and physical proportion are yet children, some twenty in number, with transparent draperies with golden girdles, their arms and bosoms wholly nude and covered with barbaric ornaments of gold. Their only garments the lower skirt, floating in light folds about their limbs, is one of very costly material bordered heavy with gold. On the end of their fingers they wear long nails of gold, tapering sharply like claws of a bird." She describes a dance in this harem while the Prime Minister sits stony and grim, his huge hands resting on his knees in statuesque repose. His deportment to his female slaves was studiously ungracious and mean.

"In the midst of Bangkok is a sort of sanctuary for criminals, where lurk fugitives of every class. Women in disguise as men, men in the attire of women, hiding phases of every vileness and crime of every enormity, at once the most disgusting, the most appalling and the most unnatural the heart of man has conceived. Most of the women who died in 1868, were of gentle blood, the fairest of the daughters of the Siamese nobles and Princes of the adjacent tributary States; the Queen consort was his own half-sister. Beside many choice Chinese and Indian girls purchased annually for the royal harem by agents from Bancock and Bengal, enormous sums were offered year after year at Bangkok and Singapore for an English woman of beauty and good parentage to crown the sensual collection. French women offered themselves for the harem, but the King would not accept them." Although religious ceremonies were held at this court Mrs. Leonowens says:

"The King of Siam was more systematically educated, and a more capacious devourer of books and news than perhaps any man of equal rank in his time. In inborn integrity and steadfast principle he has no faith whatever. He sincerely believed that every man strove to compass his own ends, and when sometimes I ventured to disabuse his mind of his daring scorn for motive and responsibility I had the mortification to discover that I had but helped him to an argument against myself. It was simply my pecuniary interest to do so. Money, money, money. That could procure anything. The love of children was the constant and hearty virtue of this despot. They appealed to him by their beauty and their trustfulness; they refreshed him with bold innocence of their ways. At 9 o'clock he retired to his private apartments, whence issued immediately peculiar domestic bulletins, in which were named women whose presence he particularly desired in addition to those whose turn it was to wait that night. His spies penetrate into every family of wealth and influence. Every citizen suspects and fears always his neighbor, sometimes his wife."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

It is believed that in ten years Yankton, D. T., will be an inland town. In front of the city, where the river ran twenty feet deep five years ago, there are now 100 acres of land six feet above high-water mark.

Dr. Dio Lewis contends that hot water, used internally and externally, is the best known remedy for all diseases to which human flesh is heir.

The army of artificial-flower makers in Paris is said to number not less than 30,000 souls. No country equals France in this art, and expert artificers—generally girls—can always find work at good wages.

Americans are not welcomed very enthusiastically at first-class hotels in London, says Walter McMichael, of Philadelphia, who has just got home from England. The reasons given for this are that the Americans drink very little wine, and are not, as a rule, particular about wearing full dress suits at dinner, a rule that an Englishman would not think of violating.

Of the 300,000,000 eggs annually used in Paris every one is inspected by being held before a candle. Rotten ones are thrown into a vat, which is emptied daily. Those "spotted" and unfit for food are sold to manufacturers, who extract their albumen and other chemical ingredients. The price of eggs is rising, owing to the increased demand of other countries and to onerous customs duties on those imported.

A Boston newspaper is publishing a series of monthly articles which may be called "Easy Lessons in Burglary." The article for December contained minute instructions for "second-story work," which, if informed beginners, has superceded the old-fashioned process of midnight robbery with violence. The ease, simplicity, and safety of this popular modern method were described with a clearness and vigor which could hardly fail to arouse the interest of the professional burglar and the enthusiasm of the ambitious amateur. The householder possibly might not be so appreciative.

The daughter of James D. Fish has taken up her residence in Auburn. The rules of the prison allow prisoners to receive friends for a half-hour once a month. Warden Lanehart has, however, extended to Miss Fish the privilege of visiting her father once a fortnight. Their interviews occur in the Chaplain's office, where Fish is employed in reading letters to and from his fellow-prisoners. Miss Fish attends the service in the prison-chapel Sunday mornings, and, seated in the visitors' gallery, is enabled to see her father at his devotion, but does not get an opportunity then to speak with him.

Near Haverstraw, N. Y., stands High Tor, a mountain of romantic rocks, beetling ledges, precipices, zig-zag paths, and that sort of thing. A few days ago Mr. Blakledge and Miss Millicent Porter, lovers, were coming down the mountain toward Haverstraw, when he fell headlong from a cliff. His "pale" face was seen gazing up from a tree that had caught the fallen form, and the heroine knew she must rescue him. Willing fingers ripped her cloak (how fortunate she did not have her seal sacque on!), and, tying the four shreds to other shreds, nobly obtained by the truly heroic sacrifice of a petticoat, she let the rope down. When it had been grasped by the youth, up he came, hand over hand, and down he limped to Haverstraw.

All school children have been taught for a whole generation that "the Mississippi river rises in Lake Itasca." Captain Williard Glazier in 1881 made an exploration and discovered that this was an error. The river has its origin, it is claimed, in a small lake beyond Lake Itasca. Captain Glazier describes it as "nestling among the pines of an unfrequented and wild region of Minnesota, many miles from the nearest white settlement, and just on the dividing ridge which forms the great water-shed of North America." The lake is about one mile and a half at the widest point and nearly round, and its water coming mainly from springs is as clear as crystal. In honor of the discoverer the lake has been christened Lake Glazier.

Bishop Spaulding saw a most pronounced case of dandy drag itself inertly past. The fellow had all the symptoms of acute idiocy so markedly visible that there was no mistaking the social disease—Anglomania—that had pitifully altered him from the healthy, vigorous, sensible young fellow that he might otherwise have been. "Well, here's a thought for comfort," the Bishop is quoted as saying. "I happen to know who he is. His family are wealthy and very fashionable. He has been brought to think that work is not for him to think of, and that his life is destined to be perfectly idle. In that view, don't you comprehend, the best course for him to pursue is the one that is most harmless, and what could have less actual viciousness in it than the career of an assiduous fop? Just think of it. He might be a gambler, a brawler, a sensualist; or he might even take to burglary, arson, murder. O, yes, if a young man is bound to be nothing useful, then by all means encourage him to be an innocuous dandy."—New York Sun.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $600 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through subagents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

First Blaze.

The high-up electric light, corner of Water and Hunter street, blazed out the first time last night. Hunter street is now the best lighted street in town, or in the province, for the matter of that.

The Gun Club.

The Gun club met at their range, at Riverside Park, yesterday afternoon, and peppered away at the targets for a time. The shooting was very satisfactory, and the scores good. The leading lights and crack shots of the club complain that there is not enough interest manifested in the sport. Members should attend as often as possible, as practice makes perfect.

The Carnival.

The special features of the second grand masquerade carnival of the Fire Brigade Band's series, to be held on Friday, February 19th, will be:—A children's carnival in the afternoon, (at which four valuable prizes will be given for the best costumes,) and a special prize of a beautiful gold chain and seal, for the best representation by a gentleman of a Shaksperian character at the evening carnival.

Charlotte Street Church.

The evangelistic services in the above church are opening most encouragingly. The attendance was very large on Sunday and the interest deep, and the pastor, Rev. P. H. Wallace, had the pleasure of giving the right hand of fellowship to eighteen new members. Last night (Monday) the school room was crowded. The addresses, the singing, the prayers were all full of power, and the people felt that God was pouring out his blessing upon them. These services will be continued every night this week except Saturday. The public are cordially invited.

What Might be Expected.

Mr. James Clark, of Cobourg, mechanical engineer, has been appointed by the Dominion Government, inspector of the machinery to be exhibited at the Colonial Exhibition in London, next May. He has been looking over the machinery (mill) prepared for the exhibition, by the William Hamilton Manufacturing Company, and pronounces it the finest of the kind he ever saw, and excellently adopted to the wants of the industry for which it was manufactured. This fact may be a surprise to Mr. Clark, but it was no more than we, who are acquainted with the merits of the firm's machinery, are accustomed to expect.

The Golden Horseshoe.

This great clothing house will, for the next two weeks, give the biggest kind of bargains in clothing and gentlemen's furnishings. Mr. LeBrun has in contrast with the practice of other dealers, taken stock before holding clearing sale, so that he knows exactly what surplus stock he has, and he has decided to clear it out the next two weeks at tremendous bargains. He is well satisfied with the results of the past year's business as shown by his stock taking, and he feels inclined and will deal generously with his customers. Come and be astonished and enriched with the bargains the Golden Horseshoe will offer for the next fortnight.

Burdette's Lecture.

Few names are better known than Bob Burdette, of the Burlington Hawkeye. He lectures in Peterborough Opera House on Monday, Feb. 15th. All should hear him. Tickets, 25 and 50 cents, can be secured at Hartley's, China Hall, Taylor & McDonald's, Salisbury's and A. L. Davis & Co.'s. The Halifax Herald says of Burdette:—"He was received with loud applause and the audience at once settled down to the enjoyment of what he had to impart. That this enjoyment was great, was evidenced by the frequent applause which greeted him throughout the evening. At one moment the audience would be hushed while it listened to some pathetic word picture, and would forget for a time that it had come to laugh; but in an instant his pathos would be changed to humor, and with the change would come smiles and tears."

Prof. Doucet's Concert.

The numbers to be taken by Mr. R. C. Gardiner, the solo cornetist of New York, at Prof. Doucet's concert are the Polka de Concert, "Visions," by Liberatti, and the "Sancho Pedro Polka" by Mr. Gardiner, Friday night. Tickets, 25 and 35 cents. Reserved seats at Menzies's book store.

Stolen Bells Will Squeal.

On Friday or Saturday last four bells were feloniously taken from off Mr. D. Belleghem's pleasure sleigh which was left in the rear of his furniture establishment, Hunter Street. The person who abstracted them will kindly return them and save further trouble. Mr. B. thinks the individual is not so smart as he thinks he is, and unless returned promptly, purposes taking proceedings for larceny.

Tobogganing Tour.

Last night a merry sleigh load of about a dozen young ladies and gentlemen drove to Lakefield, to enjoy the hospitality of the Lakefield Toboggan club. The latter received the visitors with open arms and a free slide, and in every way possible promoted the pleasure of the party. After spending a few hours in the dizzily delightful exercise at the slide, the Peterborough company were taken in and royally entertained by R. Graham, Esq., at his residence. About one o'clock the party arrived home, having spent a bilariously happy evening.

Actresses' Voices.

In a recently published article, Clara Morris is reported to have spoken as follows of Sarah Bernhardt's voice:

"Wonderful," she said; "her intonation; her command of her voice, the musical modulation; the intensity. She seems to know just how far to go with it. I remember seeing her act once, and she allowed her voice to play on the feelings of the audience for a certain time, and just as nearly every woman before her was on the point of crying Bernhardt cleared her voice, changed its key, changed the whole meaning of the lines, and I, who was as much worked up as anyone in the audience and expected to cry the next moment, got fooled. I could have murdered her almost for spoiling that cry; but she did it purposely, as I afterward learned. The voice betrays tears more quickly than the expression of the face. I have learned that. By training my voice in a certain key I can feel a situation more quickly than by trying to look what I express by the tone of my voice. The voice plays upon the feelings of an audience more quickly than any look that was ever seen on an actress' face. It is a pity that a good many young actresses can't understand that voice needs more careful training than facial expression. The expression of the face becomes a twin to the expression of the voice, but the face must follow the words. 'Tears?' asked the actress in reply to a question. 'Well, one must either be a pump or else one must be a desert in emotional drama. For my own part I cry in nearly everything I play. The audience frequently follows me. Of course I feel a great deal that I play. I must, else never mind how large my reservoir of tears, there would be times when I couldn't cry. Let a woman play Miss Multon, we'll say, and imagine herself the character she is playing, and ninety-nine women out of every hundred will cry. They can't help it."

A good deal has been said of late years as to the changes in the manners and customs of Quakers, who, it is urged, have put aside drab and lavender for more decided colors, and indulge in many ways after a fashion George Fox would have reprobated. But it appears from Mrs. Fry's memoirs that in her day some Quakers, at all events, were as frivolous as persons of any other sect. She and her sisters, the Misses Gurney, seem, indeed, to have had a thoroughly "good time," in the American girl's sense of that expression. She went to London in the season, and saw everything. Her hair was dressed in the height of fashion, and she "painted a little." When an American Quaker of the old school, traveling in England upon a religious mission, cast his eyes around the company he was horrified and scandalized, especially at the appearance of Miss Elizabeth Gurney, who wore "purple boots, laced with scarlet."

Thomas Stevens, the young American who is journeying around the globe on a bicycle, writes from Teheran that he had the distinction of an audience with the Shah of Persia, who was profoundly interested in the novel steed. The shah is a humorist, for, after seeing the wheelman's art illustrated in various ways, he requested Stevens to make a spurt down a long, smooth footpath. "The garden," writes the adventurous American, "is traversed by a network of irrigating ditches; but his majesty solemnly assures me that there is nothing of the kind across the path he wishes to see me ride down as fast as possible. Two hundred yards from the spot where this assurance is given sees me executing a lightning-like dismount, while going at a twelve-mile pace, to avoid running into the very thing I had just been told didn't exist." When the Shah was assured that the cycler had jeopardized his limbs, if not his neck, his Majesty was put into excellent humor and laughed heartily.

Don't be Duped.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brand of cigars, which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pay them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby.

EGAN'S IMPERIAL TRUSS.

Read the following extract from a letter of a well-known citizen of St. Catharines, hundreds like it:

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 30th, 1885.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, I looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two spring less trusses made in York State, costing me $40. Nothing would retain my Hernia. . . . I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down, it holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. B. KING.

This new Spirial Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child sure; and 80 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. When writing please mention this paper. Address,

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance.

ANNUAL MEETING.

Second Annual Meeting of the Central Canada Loan and Savings Company.

Report of Directors—Flourishing State of Company's Affairs—Votes of Thanks—Election of Directors.

The second general annual meeting of the shareholders of the Central Canada Loan and Savings Company was held in the company's office Peterborough, on Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 9th. Mr. Geo. A. Cox occupied the chair, and the following directors and shareholders were present:—Messrs. Richard Hall, J. R. Dundas, M.P., Lindsay, A. P. Poussette, D. Bannell Sawyer, E. S. Vindin, Port Hope, J. M. Ferris, M.P.P., Campbellford, R. Jaffray, Toronto. Dr. Kincaid, W. Cluxton, J. H. Roper, J. W. Flavelle, Robt. Fair, Wm. Walsh, D. W. Dumble; James Wason, James Stevenson, E. B. Edwards, Dr. Caldwell and W. J. Wallace, Lakefield, F. G. Cox and Geo. M. Roger.

Mr. Geo. A. Cox, president of the company, read the

of the directors of the company as follows:

The Directors beg to submit herewith their second annual report, shewing the operations of the Company for the past year, accompanied by the Balance Sheet to the 31st December, 1885—duly audited.

It was decided early in the year to dispose of the real estate and other securities that had been purchased by the company, and in future confine the business exclusively to that of a LOAN AND SAVINGS SOCIETY; in carrying out that decision a profit of $26,104.78 was realized, and this increased the profits of the year to $54,627.28, and enabled your Directors, after payment of all expenses, to declare two half-yearly dividends of three per cent. each, and transfer $36,000 to the credit of the Reserve Fund, leaving $729.42, at credit of Profit and Loss Account.

The $49,898.84 of subscribed capital that remained unpaid at the end of 1884, has been paid up, and the $100,000 of additional capital issued in February, 1885, was promptly taken, and has also been fully paid up. (Hear, hear.)

During the year it was deemed advisable to increase the subscribed capital to $1,000,000, by the issue of new shares to the amount of $600,000, at a premium of ten per cent. and before the close of the year $200,000 was taken, and ten per cent. with its proportion of premium paid in; this enabled the Reserve Fund to be further increased by the $2,000 received from that source, making the reserve now $38,000.

In accordance with the instructions of the Shareholders at the last annual meeting, a SAVINGS DEPARTMENT was opened, and interest allowed on deposits at four and five per cent. according to the conditions of deposit, with the result that at the close of the year there was $223,650.67 at the credit of depositors.

This evidence of confidence upon the part of the investing public, and the favor with which the Company has been received by the borrowing public is gratifying to the Directors, and they trust it will be satisfactory to the Shareholders.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

GEO. A. COX,
President.

We hereby certify that we have carefully audited the books and accounts of the Central Canada Loan and Savings Company of Ontario, for the year ending 31st December, 1885. The postings and balances of the Company's ledgers have been examined; and we find the whole correct, and in accordance with the above statements. We have also inspected the mortgages and other securities, and find the aggregate thereof agrees with the amount under the head of "securities."

J. H. ROPER,
CHAS. D. MACDONALD, } Auditors.

Peterborough, January, 25th, 1886.

Mr. Cox explained the way in which deposits were accepted. Five per cent interest was paid on all sums deposited for not less than one year, and on all sums deposited for a less term, 4 per cent. In answer to Mr. Ferris, he said the former mode was most generally adopted. He expected that in general deposits would be allowed to lie with more or less permanency. He also drew attention to the assets which consisted of nothing but securities that could easily be converted into cash.

When the item for expenses for the year ($455.40) was reached.

Mr. Ferris.—"You haven't hurt yourselves in the way of expenses. (Laughter.)

Mr. Cox.—No; we try to keep them down to the lowest point and shall continue to do so.

At the conclusion of the reading of the report President Cox said it devolved upon him to move the adoption of the report, but it would not be expected that at the close of only the second year's operations of the company, either the nature or extent of the business would call for any lengthened remarks. The progress, however, that had been made during the two years would, he said, bear very favorable comparison with the progress made by the largest and most successful of the Loan and Saving Societies of the Province of Ontario, during the first two years of their existence, and it afforded reasonable ground to hope that the company would have a PROSPEROUS AND SUCCESSFUL FUTURE.

It would be seen by the printed report that the shareholders had before them, and that had been in their hands for the last two or three weeks, that the amount of the investments had already reached $313,996.39. During the year the new loans amounted to $544,649. After deducting $155,073.50, the amount of repayments on account of loans during the year, it showed a net increase of $389,576.

The amount of subscribed capital was increased during the year by $300,000, the amount of paid-up capital by $169,898 and the reserve fund was increased to $38,000.

The savings department, that was not opened until late in the year, showed a balance of $223,650.67 at the credit of depositors at the close of the year.

Through this healthy and populous section of Ontario, where it was intended chiefly to confine the operations of the company, there were, the president pointed out, many of our more successful farmers who had large amounts of money lying on deposit in in the banks at 3 per cent. while their less fortunate neighbors are borrowing possibly the very same money from Toronto Loan Companies at rates of interest that in many cases are simply ruinous.

THE AIM AND OBJECT OF THIS COMPANY was to be the medium through which those who have money to deposit could get four or five per cent. according to the terms of deposit, and those who were now borrowing from foreign Companies could get their money at home at much less expense, and at a lower rate of interest.

The names of the Shareholders and Directors of this Company, the most of whom had for many years been known to both the depositors and borrowers, would be a sufficient guarantee that their business would be safely and satisfactorily transacted.

Provision had been made for, and it is the desire of the present shareholders that the unallotted shares of the company should also be largely taken up in our own community, thus affording to those who desire to avail themselves of it, a safe and easy mode of investment, promptly paying a half yearly dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum. There was still some $280,000 of stock open to subscription and the reserve fund that had been thus far accumulated, with the large business that had been secured, and with the preliminary expenses written off, made the intrinsic value of the stock worth at least that premium, and the premium itself remained of course, the property of the shareholders, increasing the earning power of the company and lessening the possibility of the decreased dividend in the future.

In conclusion he desired to explain that the $38,000 that had been carried to the reserve fund, from the earnings of the company was partially from profits realized from the sale of securities handed over by the original shareholders in payment of their stock, it must not therefore be expected that the reserve would increase quite so rapidly in the future. The directors should, however, hope to keep it

MOVING SURELY AND STEADILY FORWARD.

While there was no prospect of a decrease in the amount of the dividend, the shareholders should not be too sanguine as regarded an increase beyond that amount. The first object of the directors was to establish the credit of the company on such a solid basis that depositors would feel perfectly safe, and if there was no positive prospect of an increased dividend, there was the fact that a large reserve fund was being accumulated, which was the most important matter. As the enterprise was to be conducted after the model of the most approved investment companies, he felt warranted in hoping that the dividend of this company would increase. He had to express regret on his own account and on that of Mr. Wm. Gooderham, who had long been associated with him on the Midland Railway Board, that that gentleman was through illness prevented from being present.

Mr. J. R. Dundas, Vice-President, seconded the motion to adopt the report, which was carried.

AMENDING THE BY-LAWS.

Moved by Mr. Wallace, Lakefield, seconded by Dr. Kincaid, that Messrs. J. H. Roper and C.D. Macdonald be auditors for the year 1886.—Carried.

COMPLIMENTARY.

Mr. Cluxton professed a motion he had to make, with a few remarks. He said that for a young company the Central Canada's record was remarkable. It had started off at a good pace and had kept it up. If we sought for the cause we must come to the conclusion that it was due to the indefatigable and indomitable perseverance of the president of the company, assisted by the co-operation of the directors. The directorate must create confidence, so that depositors would feel satisfied that their funds were safely invested. This confidence had been established, and it assisted in the sale of debentures, and operated in inducing persons to take stock. The directors were gentlemen of broad views, wide experience, and farseeing, who had made their mark in the country; they were gentlemen representing in their personal capacity, millions of dollars. The board would compare favorably, in point of capital, financial experience, ability, and capability of management with the directors of any bank or other monetary institution in Canada. The results of their management were remarkable. The financing had been conducted in such a manner that a dividend had been declared of six per cent. and during last year the stock had increased in value ten per cent. and was now selling at ten per cent. premium. These two items made 16 per cent. gained in one year in addition to a large amount set apart as a rest. While the shareholders might not be warranted in looking forward to dividends like these, there was no doubt that the company would continue to declare dividends at six per cent.

He felt it his duty to make these remarks, and as a more formal expression of his opinion he would move, seconded by Mr. Jaffray, that the thanks of the shareholders are due to the president, vice-president and officers of the company for the marked ability with which the affairs of the company have been managed during the past year.

Mr. Jaffray, in seconding the motion, said that this meeting, with Mr. Cox in the chair, reminded him of old times, when they had met together around the directors' board of the Midland Railway. When he had got the chance of taking stock in this company he had taken advantage of the opportunity with alacrity because he had been associated with Mr. Cox in the struggles that marked the history of the Midland Railway, which Mr. Cox had taken hold of when the stock had run down to 17 or 18 on the dollar, and when the credit of the company was not good for a pound of nails, and by the exercise of indomitable courage, energy and pluck, had achieved the proud accomplishment of bringing up the bonds of the road to par. Remembering these things, he had good reason to feel safe in taking stock in the Central Canada Loan and Savings Company, especially when its president showed a disposition to apply to the management of the affairs of the Company, the same energy, financial foresight and push that had characterised his management of the Midland Railway Company, he was decided to put what he could in the Company. But he did not expect to see as marked progress in the immediate future as in the past, but there still was a guarantee for the future in the way the Company had already been managed. The President had very wisely advised the shareholders against expecting extravagant dividends. Much depended upon the prosperity of the county. He knew that while the President was capable of pursuing a bold policy, he was equal to following a safe one. It would be his aim to build up a solid and stable company. He regarded the motion he had so much pleasure in seconding, as something more than a mere formality; it was very well deserved. He added that he should have said before that Mr. Gooderham had expressed to him his intention of being present at this meeting, and he knew that his disappointment was as great as theirs at his absence through severe illness.

Dr. Kincaid remarked that from what he knew of the president and directors of the company, he was satisfied that the people of this part of the country had every confidence in the company. From the day of its inception, its prospects had been of the brightest character. It filled a long-felt local want in giving the farmers of this part of the country an opportunity of making safe and profitable investments, or of securing money at low rates of interest. He was heartily in sympathy with the spirit of the motion.

Mr. J. R. Dundas, vice-president, put the motion, which was cordially and unanimously adopted.

Mr. Cox, in replying, said that he appreciated the very kind and too flattering remarks of Mr. Cluxton and Mr. Jaffray. The success that had attended the management of the Midland Railway was due, to a very large extent, to the wise counsel and cordial support that he had received from his Board of Directors, and he was very much gratified to have Mr. Dundas, Mr. Ferris, Mr. Vindin, Mr. Gooderham and Mr. Jaffray, no less than five of the same gentlemen on this Board, and in addition to those gentlemen, the shareholders were very fortunate in having Mr. Cluxton, Mr. Stevenson, Mr. Richard Hall, Mr. Dumble and Mr. Taylor, who were so long, so well, and so favorably known to this community, and whose names were a guarantee of a successful career for the company.

Bulgarian Union.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—The Austrian Government is becoming alarmed at the significant overtures of Russia to Mr. Gladstone in the matter of holding the Bulgarian union, and is stimulating Servia to renewed action. It is not likely, however, that Servia's assertion of her real or imaginary rights will again assume an aggressive aspect.

A FLOURISHING FINANCIAL INSTITUTON.

In other columns will be found a full report of the second annual meeting of the Central Central Loan and Savings Co. The financial statements presented gave a splendid showing for so young a company—only just completed its second year. The amount of investments has already reached the splendid figure of, over eight hundred thousand dollars ($813,996), a circumstance which shows that the company has in its directorate, gentlemen representing private possessions amounting to millions, the elements of absolute security to investors. To this example of public confidence, the result of deposits in the Savings Bank department may be added. Though that department was not opened till late in the year, the balance at the credit of depositors is $223,650.59. To the members of the farming community, this institution presents a grand opportunity for the safe and profitable investment of the fruits of their toil. Thousands of dollars belonging to this class, are now lying in the local banks, drawing the merely nominal interest of three per cent., while the Central Canada gives, on security—"as good as the bank"—four per cent. on call deposits and five per cent. on funds left for a term of not less than a year. Besides, farmers or other persons in need of funds can negotiate loans with this company on terms, whose conditions are liberality itself compared with the rapacious terms and stringent conditions exacted by outside loan associations. Moreover, the borrower can have the satisfaction of personally arranging the terms of his loan, and he personally knows that the directorate with which he is dealing, will treat him fairly and leniently. A careful perusal of the report will satisfy investors that for purposes of investment or negotiations of loans the Central Canada has the strongest claim upon their attention. It has all the elements necessary to commend it to the confidence of the public—solid security, able financial management and handsome returns.

WILLING TO DO JUSTICE.

We have received a communication from R. C. Strickland, Esq., Reeve of Lakefield, in which he complains that the EXAMINER, in its "County Council Comments," did not do him justice, and it looked as though he were singled out for hostile comment. It was not our intention to do the worthy reeve of Lakefield any injustice, or to withhold any credit, but we found that the review we had undertaken, grew on our hands beyond the space we could devote to the subject, and many matters well worth referring to, could not be dealt with. THE EXAMINER is willing to give Mr. Strickland full credit for his acts and we shall specify now, which we had not space to do in the article complained of, several acts of Mr. Strickland for which he deserves credit. He is to be credited with active endeavour in respect of the attempt to secure a grant for the Agricultural Society, for the Peterborough Collegiate Institute and for the Norwood High School, and in another session, for his liberal course in reference to the Court House Park grant, and we are willing to give him credit for securing a grant for the Lakefield bridge—quite as soon at least, as it was needed. Mr. Strickland cannot be accused of neglecting local interests. His natural anxiety to have Mr. Golborne appointed Police Magistrate, argued a desire on Mr. Strickland's part, to have as much money as possible spent in the vicinity of Lakefield, but Mr. Mansfield's proposal harmonized better with the popular demand to have the Scott Act enforced rigidly, since the majority of the people had decided in its favour.

Mr. Strickland cannot accuse THE EXAMINER of singling him out for hostile comment, when his acts, brought himself so prominently into notice and placed him in such an objectionable position, that even his warmest friends in the Council, both political and personal, could not help but decidedly condemn his introduction of the Colonization Roads resolution, and the Riel resolution. These questions were entirely partizan in character and object and, no matter what the political complexion of the Council was, the unwisdom and folly of their introduction, received the prompt condemnation from the Council they deserved.

We do not wish our readers to accept our estimate of the political character of the Riel resolution, and will therefore submit it so that our readers may judge for themselves. On the last hour of the last day of the late session, at a time when there was a minimum attendance of members, and when those present were anxious to get released from duty, and would not, therefore, as closely scrutinize, any motion as at any other time, Mr. Strickland sprung the following motion on the Council:

"Moved by Mr. Strickland, seconded by Mr. Brown,—That the Council desire to express its thankfulness that the rebellion in the Northwest, which was threatening the peace and happiness of that portion of our Dominion when the Council was last in session, was shortly after brought to a successful close by the bravery and energy of our citizen soldiers, and that this Council further wishes to express its approval of the Government in allowing the law to take its course in the case of Louis Riel, the murderer of poor Scott in 1869, and the leader and cause of the rebellion in 1885, whereby many valuable lives were lost and property destroyed.

No unbiassed man living will not say that this motion is not of a purely political nature, with a purely, or rather, impurely political object."

If Mr. Strickland feels that he has any fault to find, he should call the Council to account, for that body treated his resolutions even more summarily and with less of respect than the EXAMINER has done.

It will be observed that political questions are never introduced into the Town Council, [illegible] manner in which the County Council has condemned the importation of political matters into its deliberations, will effectively prevent any attempt at a repetition of the offence. For it is a grievous offence against the public interests to insinuate the bickerings and bitterness of partizan strife among the harmony that has, in the past, characterized, and should continue to mark, the deliberations of our minor legislative bodies.

Lakefield.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The patrons of the Pine Grove cheese factory, Douro, were entertained at an oyster supper at the residence of Mr. Jas. Jory on Wednesday evening last. After supper Mr. Pilkie, superintendent of the factory, was presented with a well filled purse as an acknowledgement of his zealous efforts in furthering the interests of the patrons and factory and as a token of esteem. The report of the season's work was presented, showing that 487,940 lbs of milk had been received at the factory. The amount of cheese made was 48,076 lbs., the average being 10¼ lbs. of milk to 1 lb. of cheese. The amount realized for the season's make was $3,802.93. The prospects for a good season next year are very favorable. Matters pertaining to the factory were discussed until a late hour.

A grand concert will be given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Canada Presbyterian Church, in the P. C. A. Hall, Lakefield, on Thursday, Feb. 18th. The best local talent will take part, assisted by Mrs. Geo. Jaffray, soprano, and Mr. J. B. Coulthard, baroitone, also an eminent elocutionist, both of Toronto. An attractive programme may be expected. Tickets 25c., may be procured at the stores of Messrs. Wallace, Henderson, Bird, and R. Graham & Son. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Doors open at 7.30, concert to commence at 8, precisely.

The Royal Baker and Pastry Book.

A Royal addition to the kitchen library. It contains over seven hundred receipts pertaining to every branch of the culinary department, including baking, roasting, preserving, soups, cakes, jellies, pastry, and all kinds of sweetmeats, with receipts for the most delicous candies, cordials, beverages, and all other necessary knowledge for the chef de cuisine of the most exacting epicure, as well as for the more modest housewife, who desires to prepare a repast that shall be both wholesome and economical. With each receipt is given full and explicit directions for putting together, manipulating, shaping, baking, the kind of utensils to be used, so that a novice can go through the operation with success; while a special and important feature is made of the mode of preparing all kinds of food and delicacies for the sick. The book has been prepared under the direction of Prof. Rudmani, late chef of the New York Cooking School, and is the most valuable of the recent editions upon the subject of cookery that has come to our notice. It is gotten up in the highest style of the printer's art, on illuminated covers, etc. A copy will be sent as a gift to every reader of this paper who will send their address to the Royal Baking Powder Co., 106 Wall St., New York, who are the publishers of the book, stating that they saw the notice in this paper.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Fifth Parliament—Third Session.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 8.

To-day's sitting lasted about ten minutes. Besides routine the only important matter was the introduction of a bill by Mr. Waters to confer the franchise for legislative elections on women and a bill of the Provincial Treasurer to change the method of auditing the public accounts.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 9.

At the sitting of the Ontario Legislature to-day a number of petitions were presented, the more important being from 185 citizens of Hamilton praying that incomes under $1,000 be exempted from taxation; from the county council of Huron against the formation of the proposed County of Lansdowne, and from the county council of Middlesex to obtain release from the law which compels county councils to provide fuel, light and furniture for Law Associasions.

On motion of the Attorney-General the House ratified an order-in-council authorizing the Treasurer of the Province to pay over to the Home for Aged Women in Toronto the sum of $3,378, realized from the estate of Elizabeth Neal, who died intestate in that institution.

Mr. Carnegie obtained some information as to timber limits he was looking up, and Mr. Ermatinger was getting from the Attorney-General a statement of the position of the Government with regard to the abolition of exemptions, when Mr. Meredith objected to any extended statement, and the matter dropped.

Mr. Fraser, in answer to Mr. Young, said the wage-earners entered as voters could not be assessed for income under $400.

Mr. Ross (Huron), in reply to Mr. Brereton, said there was no butter in hand at the creamery, but that some of the new season's manufacture might be sent to the Colonial and Indian Exposition.

Mr. John Morley says that a fresh coercion policy for Ireland means having "the whole honeycombed with secret societies," midnight drillings, and a secret press that "will pour furtive poison far more deadly and virulent than any now poured."

AN OLD SALEM CUPBOARD.

A most delicious odor came forth when the door was opened; a hint of the spiciness of rich cake, a tingling sence of preserved ginger, and a certain ineffable sweetness which no other closet ever possessed, and which I know not how to describe. It might well have proceeded from the walls and shelves of the cupboard itself, for they were indeed emblems of purity. The paint was varnished to a high degree of glominess, and was so exquisitely kept as to look like white porcelain.

The china here, as in all genuine Salem cupboards, was chiefly of the honest old blue Canton ware. There were shining piles of those plates which, while they are rather heavy to handle, always surprise one by being so thin at the edges. These were generous teacups like small bowls, squat pitchers with big noses, and a tureen whose cover had the head of a boar for a handle. And in all this the blue was dull and deep in tint, with a certain ill-defined, vaporous quality at the edges of the lines, and the white of the cool greenish tinge of a duck's egg. You can buy blue Canton to-day, but it is not old blue Canton. Such china is matchless now, and in this cupboard there were shelves of it.

Cousin Susan possessed also another set of china, which she valued far above her blue. It was always singularly attractive to us as children, though I have come to believe that it is far less beautiful than the Canton. It was a pure, thin white ware, delicately fluted at the edges and decorated with little raised lilac sprigs. It was used only upon occasions of solemn company tea-drinkings, and cousin Susan always washed it herself in her little cedar dish-tub. We children considered this china so choice and desirable that a bit of a broken saucer, which included one of the pale, tiny sprays, was cherished far above our real doll's dishes. We lent it from one to another, each of us keeping it for one day; but it was always one of those unsatisfactory treasures of childhood for which we could never find any adequate use. We could think of nothing to do with this bit of china which seemed at all worthy of so lovely an object.

At the left hand of cousin Susan's shelves of china was a little cupboard with a diamond-paned glass door. This was the sanctum sanctorum,—a cupboard within a cupboard; and here, as one might have expected, were stored the choicest treasures of all. It was not the domestic preserve closet. Cousin Susan was thrifty, and had good store of home-made dainties, but they were kept in the cool seclusion of a dark cellar store-room. This little glass cupboard held the stock of foreign sweetmeats: the round-shouldered blue jars, inclosed in a network of split bamboo, which contained the fiery, amber ginger; the boxes of guava jelly, hot curry powders, chilli sauce, and choleric Bengal chutney. Here were two miniature casks of tamarinds, jolly and black, cousin Susan's favorites. She had a certain air of disapproval toward most of these strange conserves. "They were not good for little people," she averred; and indeed she always maintained that these ardent sweetmeats were fitter for the delectation of rude men than for the delicate palates of gentlewomen. Of tamarinds, however, cousin Susan did approve. Properly diluted with cool water, they made what she called a "very pretty drink." She was fond of sending a glass to any neighbor who was ill and feverish, and she was always following our cousin the sea-captain about with a blue china bowl of the mixture, begging him to partake of it.

"Susan, I hate tamarind-water," our cousin would protest.

"It will cool your blood, William," his sister would urge.

"But I don't want my blood cool. I want it warm," the captain would reply.

As a general thing, however, cousin Susan came off triumphant. The captain grumblingly partook of his dose, and was always most generous in sharing it with us children. The beautiful little brown stones also fell to our lot, and we hoarded the useless things with great care, although it always seemed to us a great oversight on the part of nature that tamarind seeds did not have holes through them, that one might string them as beads.

Cousin Susan's cupboard also contained stronger water than tamarind, for side by side sat two corpulent cut-glass decanters, of which one was half filled with madeira wine, and the other with honest rum. A variety of sweet cakes was near by, to be served with the wine to any chance visitor. There were black fruit cake in a japanned box; "hearts and rounds" of rich yellow pound cake; and certain delicate but insane little sponge biscuit, of which our cousin spoke by the older-fashioned name of diet—or, as she chose to pronounce it "dier"-bread. She always called the sponge cakes "little dier breads." Pound and fruit cakes were forbidden to our youth, but we might have our ladylike fill of "dier breads," and also of delightful seed-cakes, which were cut in the shape of an oak-leaf, and were marvels of sugary thinness.—Eleanor Putnan, in February Atlantic.

Mr. Ruskin writes to the Pall Mall Gazette on the Irish question the following characteristic letter: "Would it not be well to take some account of the following ineradicable virtues of the Irish race in our schemes for their management: First, they are an artistic people, and can design beautiful things and execute them with indefatigable industry. Secondly, they are a witty people and can by no means be governed by witless ones. Thirdly, they are an affectionate people, and can by no means be governed on scientific principles by heartless persons. Permit me to observe further that, as Scott is authority for Scotch character, Maria Edgeworth is authority for Irish, and that her three stories of 'Ormond,' 'Ennui,' and 'The Absentee,' contain more essential truths about Ireland than can be learned from any other sources whatsoever."

To some men the matter of an inland Sea of Sahara is still a live issue. An estimate just made by a French engineer puts the probable cost of making such a sea at $30,000,000, the bulk of the cost being in canal cutting.

J. R. STRATTON.

In the Long Evenings.

True independence consists in the possession and improvement of resources within one's own self. There is a sense in which self-sufficiency is a laudable trait of character. It is far different from self-assertion, which may be Ishmaelitish, turning the hand against every man. And it is just as far removed from that weak dependence upon others which leads one to look for aid at all times, and for constant society and companionship in occupation and in amusement. Social intercourse and conversation are a part, and a very large part, of all our lives. Both improvement and pleasure depend upon our well-selected friendships. Still, he is a poor companion for others who can do nothing for himself. He who has nothing in him has nothing to impart to his friends. He has no capital to go upon in the social exchange which promotes the intelligent life of man.

The long winter evenings are now at hand. The caterers for amusement are preparing their bills of fare. The attractions of society are presenting themselves, and plans are everywhere forming for the round of entertainments. But we have something more to do in this world than the passive employment of being amused. Among all benefactors of the race of man, those well deserve the gratitude of human kind who minister to the independent intellectual formation of character. The book, the magazine, and the journal are benefits which, by their very abundance, seem to be underrated, and are certainly not utilized to anything like their full advantage. It is a flattering and common assumption that Americans are a reading people; but when the results of their reading are looked for, it is somewhat humiliating to discover how superficial is much of the knowledge gained by it.

It is not to be supposed that a newspaper article, or that dissertations in all the newspapers, will make a reality out of this semblance of knowledge. But every man can act for himself. Any man or woman can determine that leisure shall be spent, and that time shall be found for the culture of the mind. Under favoring circumstances, we can get help from others. But he is best served who serves himself. He only is independent who can vary his social intercourse by the society of books. Reading is a pleasure within the reach of all save the few who cannot read, and those few could find no better employment than learning. It is the best occupation, and is, withal, the cheapest. In the winter arrangements, a liberal space for reading should be set apart, and something like a regular plan determined on. Yet even desultory reading is better than none. The young, especially, should acquire a habit which will make their homes pleasant, and save them from some temptations to folly, or worse. Of all house furnishing, books pay the best profit. And of all evening entertainments, they furnish that which is the safest to go to bed upon. There follows no morning dullness or headache, no rebuke of conscience, and no beggarly account of empty pockets.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Monitors.

The characteristic difference between the American type and the English type of sea-going Monitors may be stated in a single sentence, viz., the elevation in the English ship of the turret breastwork deck to a height of eleven or twelve feet above the sea's surface, and the raising of the upper deck generally, or of a considerable part of it, to at least that height, by means of lightly built superstructures. Over these again, and many feet above them, are built bridges and hurricane decks, from which the ships may be commanded in all weathers. Lofty as these ships are by comparison with American Monitors, it is only gradually that they have acquired the confidence of the naval service, so freely do the waves sweep over their weather decks when driven, even in moderate weather, against head seas. —Sir Edward Reed, in Harper's Magazine for February.

He Saw the Sign.

It was on the piazza of a Tucson hotel. Three men sat there in the warm and drowsy afternoon. They had uncovered their heads for comfort, and they were all bald. A little streak of sunlight gilded the skulls, and as the men sat there another came up and looked at them. Then he slowly took out his revolver. A simultaneous movement took place on the part of the three men, but the stranger waved his hand for peace, and, holding up his weapon, asked the middle man:

"How much will you give me on it?"

"What do you mean?"

"How much will you give me on it?"

"Sir! Do you take this for a pawnbroker's shop?"

"Well, I didn't know. I see the sign there—three balls." And every man put on his hat as he took in the situation.—San Francisco Chronicle.

In Ohio there are 761,223 horses, 24,302 mules, 536,489 milch cows; other horned cattle, 1,251,691; sheep, 5,421,165; hogs, 1,923,903.

Fortunes in Scrap-Iron.

"You'd never think it was much of a trick to sort out scrap metal," said a dealer in old iron, as he stood in the middle of a yard heaped up with piles of rusty scraps of every description, without any apparent order or method. "As a matter of fact, though, there is quite a knack in it. It requires a good deal of experience if you don't want to get taken in, as the profits of the business all lie in a man's ability to tell at a glance what is good material and what is not. The greenhorn will go and buy a wagon-load of stuff in a lump, and when it is sorted over he will find he has paid probably double what the lot is worth."

"How are the scraps assorted?" asked the reporter.

"Well, you see here is a separate pile for the best scrap. It is nearly all in small pieces—bolts, nuts, screws, pieces of horseshoe, nails, and such as that, all of the best quality of malleable iron. It commands the highest price, except for that of the whole horseshoes, of any iron that is bought by us. We pay from 60 to 80 cents a hundred for it; horseshoes are worth from $1 to $1.20 a hundred pounds. We pile the small pieces together so that the scraps can be shoveled out into barrels or sacks, while the large pieces, such as broken shafting, boiler iron, and metal of that sort, are stacked up separately. There are the steel and cast-iron piles over there, you see, and here are the borings and turnings from the machine-shops."

"Of what use are those scraps of tin?" asked the reporter, pointing towards a huge heap of cut and twisted pieces of the shining metal.

"O, that goes to the smelting-works. You see it mainly consists of the clippings and fragments of tinned iron and worn-out tin vessels. These are sometimes dipped in hydrochloric acid to dissolve the tin coming from the iron. The muriate of tin so formed is of commercial value for dyeing purposes."

Hanging up on the walls all about were cog-wheels, cranks, and other pieces of machinery, while in one corner was a collection of pick-axes, axes, and pitchforks.

"Everything that we find of value in the masses of scraps that come in here every day by the wagon-load," remarked the dealer, "or that can be used in the shape it is received in, is preserved from the scrap heaps and sold separately. There are people who if they want a lot of pick-axes, for instance, never think of going to a hardware store for them, but come direct to the scrap-iron dealer, where they can generally find serviceable articles of the second-hand class. Nearly all of these cranks and cogwheels will come into use in their present shape some day.

"Scrap iron," continued the dealer, consists of any kind of iron that will serve the purposes of remelting, but more especially that of the malleable quality. We work in all the old ship iron that can be made serviceable, and there is one firm in the city that makes a specialty of that branch of the business. They have broken up several old vessels during the past year and taken out tons of good scrap-iron. They are now tearing the Mohongo to pieces over in Oakland, and selling her plates and sheeting to the nail manufacturers. There is a good deal of money in that kind of trade if one understands it."

Of late years the scrap-iron business has increased to such an extent as to make it an important feature of waterfront trade. Several good-sized fortunes have been made in the business. Large lots of vacant land are covered with heaps of the rusty metal, for which there is always a brisk demand during the busy season at the iron-works. The smaller scraps make the best kind of shafting and pipe material, as the fibers of the finished product are so twisted and intertwined as almost to defy an attempt at breaking, while for ordinary use it will last for years.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Push or Being Pushed.

As we have said repeatedly, there is nothing in the world like energy. In order to succeed, it is required that the aim in view be pursued with unwavering determination. It is the persistent effort to advance which we commonly designate by the term push. A business man without push might as well shut up shop and save his money, for sooner or later he will be swamped by the irresistible onward rush of progress.

Quite different, however, from this faculty of push, exerted in a particular direction for individual advancement, is the being pushed by others. He who is awake to his own interests, who is possessed of push, needs no pushing from others, and, on the other hand, no amount of pushing will benefit the weak and the laggard. Constant spurring will only induce stubbornness and sulkiness, and we all know how the mule will act if urged against his will.

We believe that he who does not feel that diligence and earnestness and a constant striving for improvement (be it in his own business or in that of another, if he is not his own master) will pay best in the end, cannot be brought to it by compulsion.

Compulsion, force, driving, moreover, is unworthy of the spirit of our age. Let him who will not move his arms and legs to keep himself afloat go to the bottom, the sooner the better. It is a deed of charity to such a being and in the best interests of others.

We have no patience with men who are like dumb, driven cattle and who work solely because they must have their earnings in order to fill the stomach, whose chief prayer is

"Come day, go day,
God send pay day."

They are not men, but machines, and in the case of machines we expect a certain amount of work from the expenditure of a certain amount of fuel, and we take steps to get it. But a man, be he employer or employe, will do his best; what he may lack to-day, he will make up to-morrow. He will have push, but will object to being pushed.

Push is absolutely a requisite in this world; pushing is unnecessary, and may result in the very opposite of that which it was intended to accomplish.—Lithographer and Printer.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is [illegible] it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $600 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through subagents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

The Toboggan Races Postponed.

The toboggan races which were to have taken place yesterday were again postponded, this time the weather being too fine. The slide was rather damp. If the weather will permit, Mr. Calcutt will give a carnival at the park next week when the races will come off.

Medal Matches.

In addition to the thirteen point match for the President and Vice President's medal, the local curlers are playing a series of games for four medals subscribed by the members of seven rinks which have entered the competition. Each rink plays all the others twice making in all fourteen games. The members of the rink winning the largest number of games become the possessors of medals. Several games in this competition have been played.

A Daring Rescue.

A boy named, Dan McCabe, of Ashburnham, when on his way home from school yesterday afternoon walked out on the ice under the Otonabee bridge and rescued a large walking stick which an Ashburnham artist dropped through a hole in the bridge. A large number of McCabe's companions watched him as he picked his way over the water-covered ice, and cheered him when he secured the cane and swaggered back to terra firma with an artistic swing.

Solid Enjoyment

And real amusement may be had by going to listen to Burdette, the celebrated writer on the Burlington Hawkeye, who lectures in Peterborough on the 15th. Tickets only 25 and 50 cents, may be had at the stores of Taylor & Macdonald, Salisbury Bros., A. L. Davis & Co., Hartley's and Macfarlane Wilson. Plan of hall at A. L. Davis' bookstore. One of our exchanges says of him:—"As a humorist and lecturer, Mr. Burdette is simply immense and nothing too good can be said of him.

Last Night's Fire.

Last night about half-past eight an alarm of fire was sounded. A brick house belonging to Mr. Jas. McNamara, opposite the Stove Works, was found to be all ablaze, lighting up the whole South Ward. Although the fireman turned out promptly, the main part of the building was destroyed before anything could be done to save it. The efforts of the firemen were handicapped by the distance the water had to be brought. The damage done was fully covered by insurance in the National of Ireland. The fire attributed is to a defective chimney. The house had been unoccupied for some days and Mr. McNamara had a stove put up, and a fire started, as he intended to move into the house in a few days.

Again the Victors.

Yesterday afternoon the local curlers added another to their now respectable list of victories, by defeating the Keene curlers by fourteen shots. The Keene rink skipped by J. Giving the Children a Drive.

A score or more of the children from the Hazel Brae Home were taken out for a pleasure drive yesterday evening by Mr. Duff in a large side-seated vehicle of Mr. Fitzgerald's. They formed a very happy party and all expressed themselves much pleased with their drive around town.

The Extinguishers on the Market.

Just before the fire last night, an agent for hand grenade fire extinguishers, gave an exhibition on the market square. A board fence was erected and covered with oil, etc., and the whole set on fire. When it was all in a blaze, one of the grenades was tossed over the flames, which were completely extinguished almost immediately.

The programmes have been issued for this great concert on Friday night and the public can now judge of the grand musical treat in store for them. All arrangements are complete and there will be no disappointment. Among the attractions will be Mr. R. C. Gardner's phenomenal cornet playing, Miss Howden's finished vocal selections; and violin solos, duets and trios by Prof. Doucet's pupils. More Information Wanted.

The following letter, which was sent to Mr. Rogers, Postmaster, explains itself:—

10 SAINT MARTIN STREET, MONTREAL.

DEAR SIR,—Fifteen years ago, in the summer of 1871, died Charles Lupton, farmer. Although he had lived many years at Newtown, it has been reported to his relatives in England that he died at Peterborough, or in the County of Peterborough, in Canada. Will you, sir, kindly inform us if there is a Newtown in Peterborough County: also, please enquire for us concerning the death of Charles Lupton. His relatives in England formerly addressed his letters: "Charles Lupton, farmer, Newtown, North America, Upper Canada." But when news of his death reached them it was reported he had died in Peterborough. Therefore, they have thought it possible that Charles Lupton changed his residence, or else he died whilst travelling on the railway, or else, possibly, there is a Newtown in Peterborough County. It is [illegible] great importance to his relatives in England that they should know the particulars of his death. Charles Lupton and his son Thomas Lupton left Stanley, near Ripon, Yorkshire, England, from 30 to 40 years ago and settled at Newtown, North America, Upper Canada. Early information is very much desired. We shall be very grateful for any and every information and suggestion you give us.

I am, sincerely,
ABRAHAM SHERR,
10 Saint Martin Street, Montreal.

The Socialist leaders—Burns, Champion, Hyndman, and Williams—had an interview with Mr. Joseph Chamberland and went away thoroughly dissatisfied.

Mr. Giffen and Home Rule.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Mr. Robert Giffen, F.S.S., is preparing a statement showing that Ireland is actually contributing nothing to the Imperial treasury, and being therefore obviously incapable of sustaining herself alone, absolute Home Rule would prove a curse rather than a blessing. He further argues that Home Rule—under the omnipotent control of the Imperial Parliament—would be equally devoid of benefit, a fact which was clearly pointed out by Mr. Sexton in his recent great speech in the House of Commons.

Distress and Irish Disorder.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Mr. Michael Davitt sees an opportunity to use the riots as a means to his ends, and expects that the occurrences of yesterday and to-day will assist him in fastening attention upon his theory that distress is the real cause of disorder in Ireland, and that Irish disorder effects the workingmen in English cities equally with the Irish farm labourer. Mr. Davitt will leave London to-morrow, and will speak at Flintshire on Thursday and at Merioneth on Friday on the Welsh land question.

Great Riot in London.

The Streets in Possession of a Mob—A Six Hour's Reign of Terror.

The cable despatches of the 8th report the most serious demonstration in the English capital that has occurred during the present decade. A crowd estimated at from ten to fifteen thousand, nominally composed of "starving mechanics," but largely consisting of and controlled by Socialists, assembled in Trafalgar square, where violent resolutions were passed denouncing the Government and calling upon Parliament to provide immediate work for the unemployed of the city. The police were utterly powerless to disperse the immense gathering, which rolled like a wave of the sea along Piccadilly to Hyde Park, leaving destruction in its track. Club houses and private residences were wrecked; hotels were broken open and food demanded and taken; saloons were raided and the liquor consumed, inflaming the passions of the rioters; tailors' shops and jewellery establishments were entered and the contents thrown out to the eager mob, and along the entire route robbery and destruction were paramount, and no lives were taken only because no resistance was offered.

The mass meeting, while primarily called together as a labor demonstration, was completely under control of the Socialists, a new and dangerous element in a London outbreak. There is terrible distress prevailing at present in the capital, and the political foes of all social order took advantage of this to further their own ends of terrorism. The demonstration was a serious one, and to prevent its repetition with even more disastrous results the Government will be forced into making at least some effort to relieve the trade depression existing through the length and breadth of the United Kingdom.

The leaders of the Socialists, especially Burns, Hyndeman, Williams and Champion, the last named of whom is an ex-captain of artillery, will probably be prosecuted. The most violent acts were committed on North and South Audley streets and Oxford street. Probably 500 shops and a dozen club houses were [illegible] damaged and about fifty shops were pillaged, including jewelers, bakers, butchers and wine shops. Hundred of inoffensive people were maltreated. The police were powerless at first, but they ultimately succeeded in restoring order by breaking up the ranks of the rioters into small squads. The military were kept under arms all the evening while policemen patrolled the streets.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—In anticipation of another demonstration to-day, small crowds of roughs poured into Trafalgar square from different points of the city. Few of the leaders, however, of yesterday's disturbances made their appearance.

Every precaution was taken to prevent the reassemblage of any mob. Many of the rioters were arrested. Some of these were fined and discharged. Others were remanded for trial, while a number were sentenced to imprisonment for terms ranging from one to six months.

WEATHER NOTES.

At the beginning of winter it is a general remark that the Indian would say, we will have a mild or severe winter; others again have great faith in fur-bearing and other wild animals, some in muskrats building their houses high or low, and some in hornets and yellow-jackets making their nests in the ground or on bushes, but I am always of the opinion that we can tell the weather correct the day after. At the commencement of the present winter, and in the fall we were often told that this would be a mild, open winter; it has, indeed, been open enough, if seeing a clear, star-studded sky is meant but for mildness, it scarcely deserves a name. Twelve mornings and eight evenings has the thermometer been below zero, from 29° on the morning of the 12th to 1° with an average for the month of only 13°, being the lowest for any month, of which I have record. Our downfall for January has been about the average, rain falling on five days to the depth of 1 inch and 60-100 of an inch; snow fell on 19 days and only to the depth of 20½ inches; our severest gale was on the night of the 22 according to reports both in Europe and the American continent, is has been the coldest, stormiest January in a quarter of a century. During the month, the wind at sunrise was blowing from the different points respectively, namely, south west, 7 days, east, 4 days, south east, 5 days, south west, 3 days, north, 3 days, north-west, 4 days, north east, 2 days, south, 2 days, and west 1 day.

The incoming of February has treated us to another cold wave; on the 1st at sunrise, the thermometer stood at 14° below zero, on the 2nd at 2° below, on the 3rd at 23° on the 4th at 27°, and on the 5th at 33°, being the coldest day of the winter as yet.

EGAN'S IMPERIAL TRUSS.

Read the following extract from a letter of a well-known citizen of St. Catharines,—hundreds like it:

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 30th, 1885.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, I looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two springless trusses made in York State, costing me $40. Nothing would retain my Hernia. I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down. It holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. B. KING.

This new Spiral Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child sure; and 90 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. When writing please mention this paper. Address,

T. V. C. Convention.

A Large and Enthusiastic Gathering of Delegates from all Along the Route The Governor-General to be Memorialised and a Deputation to be sent to Ottawa.

A convention of representatives from the Midland District of those interest in the construction of the Trent Valley Canal was held in the council chamber yesterday. The object of the meeting was to decide upon what action should be taken to urge upon the Government the early completion of the Trent Valley Canal.

This meeting was largely attended by representatives of the municipalities all along the the canal route, and the highest interest was manifested.

The representatives were as follows:

Trenton.—C. W. Ostrom, Mayor, and councillors T. Cornwall, John Belch, J. A. Orr, of the Advocate, Thos. H. James, M. Morrison, B. E. Bell, H. O'Rourke and O. H. Bonter, and also the following citizens, R. D. Murphy, T. McCable, Thos. German, Dr. Day, R. Weddell, W. H. Austin, J. H. Peck, H. Myers and Jas. Stevenson.

Frankford.—Wm. Farley.

Belleville.—Alexander Robertson, M.P.

Rawdon.—Jas. Duncan.

Campbellford.—C. S. Gillespie, G. Snyder and J. W. Dinwoodie.

Lakefield.—Mr. R. C. Strickland, Reeve.

Peterborough County.—Messrs. J. Moloney, of Douro, and J. Burnham, M. P., Reeve of Ashburnham.

Midland.—Mr. W. H. Bennett, Reeve and Councillor Murphy.

Coboconk.—Mr. E. B. Leroy, clerk of the municipality.

North Ontario.—Mr. Cockburn, M.P.,

The Town was represented by Mayor Stevenson, the councillors, and a large number of influential citizens.

Mayor Stevenson was elected chairman, and Mr. A. E. Peck, Secretary.

Mayor Stevenson said he was pleased to see so many present. The reason the meeting was held in Peterborough was because it was the most centrally located point on the canal. He expressed sorrow at not being able, on account of a severe cold, to meet the representatives in the morning and show them around town. He would not have been present at the meeting had he not thought it his duty. He would be pleased to show the visitors the attractions of the rapidly increasing town after the meeting was over. The object of the meeting was well known, viz: to decide on what steps should taken to urge the government to proceed with the construction of the Trent Valley Canal. Peterborough was unanimously of the opinion that the work should be pushed forward. He then intimated that a telegram had been received from Barrie, stating that the Barrie representatives were unable to be present, and signifying their sympathy in the matter. Also from Henry Bird, of the same place, stating that the representatives were willing to do all in their power to further the project, but did not think it necessary to be present. Also urging the advisability of proceeding with the Balsam Lake [illegible]. He was pleased to see Mr. Murphy of Trenton, who was the chairman of the last deputation which pressed upon the government the importance of proceeding with the canal.

Mr. Strickland said he looked at the canal route as a talent from the Creator, given for the purpose of perfecting. If it had been one unbroken course it would be too good. As it was now there were a few interruptions in the course which could be removed with comparatively little cost of the [illegible] of the Dominion. He thought it advisable to move and urge the government to construct the canal as soon as possible. He hoped to live to see the canal completed. His father had dreamed that the canal was open and that he saw the vessels and barges pass up and down its waters. He hoped it would be like the dream of King David, who dreamed that he saw the temple, but which was left for his son Solomon to see. He hoped to see the grain and produce of the Northwest and Western States brought to seaboard via the T. V. C. The waters of the route could drive mills enough to grind all the grain of the Northwest, and give an industry not second [illegible] matter what [illegible] could not oppose the work. He did not care what government built it, and he would not support a government which would be opposed to it. The voice of this meeting would be the voice of the people of Central Ontario. Ontario had not opposed grants to the other Provinces, and why should the other Provinces oppose a grant to Ontario. The canal would benefit the Northwest, Ontario and Quebec. It would be beneficial to the lumber interests also, as now they had to pay a heavy duty, whereas if shipped over the canal to Montreal the duty would be saved. He hoped to see the canal completed in five years.

Mr. R. C. Strickland then moved, seconded by Mr. Ostrom, Reeve of Trenton, that the following memorial be presented to His Excellency the Governor General in council:

To His Excellency the Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada in Council:—

The memorial of the delegates representing the different municipalities along the route of the Trent Valley Canal, convened at a public meeting held in the town of Peterborough, on the 10th day of Feb., 1886.

That the Northwest is universally recognized as one of the great wheat fields of the future, and if it continues to be developed as rapidly as it has been for the past two years, the Canadian Pacific Railway will be totally inadequate to carry the produce to Montreal. Careful examination of the several proposed routes has established the fact that the Trent Valley Canal is the best and most natual, especially for the carrying of grain.

That the experience of the Erie Canal notwithstanding the disadvantages under which it has labored and continues to labor, proves that grain can be carried cheaper by barge than in any other way, and that such a canal has the effect of building up towns and villages along its route which would otherwise not have sprung into existence.

That vessels sailing from ports on either Lakes Michigan or Superior for Buffalo or Oswego have to encounter the dangerous navigation of the St. Clair and Lake Erie and lower portion of Lake Huron, which might be entirely avoided were an outlet for their cargoes provided from the Georgian Bay eastward, equal to and competing with the Erie canal.

That the distance to be travelled by vessels from the Sault Ste. Marie or the Straits of Mackinaw, or the south east corner of the Georgian Bay is about 500 miles less than to Buffalo, and over a course free from the dangers to be encountered in reaching the latter point.

That the entire distance from the south east corner of the Georgian Bay to Montreal by the Trent valley route would be about 440 miles, as ocmpared with 515 miles from Buffalo to New York.

That between the south east corner or the Georgian Bay and the St. Lawrence exists a chain of lakes and rivers which are now navigable for barges of a larger capacity than those used on the Erie canal for about four fifths of the entire distance between those points, and in constructing the connecting links sufficient water power will thereby be made avilable to do the milling for the surplus produce of the North-West.

That the ample supply of water exists for the efficient working of what is commonly know as the Trent valley canal.

That from the eastern terminus, on the Bay of Quinte the barges which would be used on the Trent valley canal could pass direct too and from Montreal.

That in addition to being a most important factor in developing the North-West the completion of the Trent valley canal would be the means of securing to the Canadian route the lion's share of a trade which appears to be only in its infancy, and of developing the interests of a very large and important section of the Province of Ontario.

That as the export of lumber from Montreal is rapidly developing, the increase from year to year being about 100 per cent., as this would be still further developed by the constructing of the canal, enabling the lumber merchants of Ontario to make Montreal the chief market, instead of being compelled to seek a market in the United States, thus being saved a duty of $2 per thousand, it is evident that the early construction of the canal is of vast importance to the lumber interests.

That the construction of this canal would be the means of shortening the water route between Chicago and Duluth, and Montreal, by 400 miles, besides materially reducing the present per mile cost of transport between these two points.

That the completion of the internal navigation to the St. Lawrence is of such vast importance as to justify the country in incurring the expenditure required, it being an enterprise only second and forming an adjunct to the Canadian Pacific Railway, its construction is not merely an act of local or Provincial importance, but one seriously affecting the interests of the whole Dominion.

Your memorialists would therefore earnestly pray

Mr. C. W. Ostrom, Mayor of Trenton, said he had much pleasure in seconding Mr. Strickland's motion. He was in perfect accord with the sentiments of the memorial. It seemed on all hands that the canal should be proceeded with. He did not think the government could refuse to build the canal now. He did not think it was a political question. When he was at Ottawa with a former deputation, both parties expressed themselves as in favor of it. The objection that there was not trade enough to warrant so large an expenditure was easily overcome. It was admitted that those were the cleverst statesmen act in anticipation of coming events. Commerce did not often change its route, and if the canal once got the Northwest commerce, it would not look it again. All would agree with the sentiments of the memorial, and could look forward to an early response from the government.

Rev. Mr. Logan, of Fenelon Falls, said he was pleased to hear that the matter would be strongly urged upon the government. This plan would be to get a money grant. A promise of three millions yearly, which would be sufficient to ensure the speedy completion of the canal, and overcome the necessity of going to Ottawa yearly for a grant. Get the ministers in power, to pledge the carrying out of the scheme. In addition to the Northwest products, a sufficient amount of grain from the Western States could be relied on to make it pay. There was not a bushel of grain shipped from Chicago to seaboard, but what touched Trent waters. Five million bushels of grain was now carried yearly from Midland to Belleville. There were some men here who had been to Ottawa when the question had been pressed upon Sir John Macdonald. Sir John had said the canal was a mistake. By subsidizing this canal they would be trying to make one right of two wrongs. The speaker said it had been an eyesore to him to see the water going to waste. As a former speaker had stated they had lots of power for mills. They had power enough to grind what enough to supply two worlds if they had them. He would be in favor of stating some sum. He thought an appropriation which would secure the completion of the canal in six years, was what was required.

Mr. Hilliard took objection to the clause which spoke disparagingly of the Hudson Bay route. These people in the Northwest were sensative, and by speaking against that route they might lose their sympathy, which they might be in need of. While speaking about the dangers of Lakes Erie and Michigan, Huron should be included. In his opinion the southern part of Lake Huron was the most dangerous part of the route.

Col. Deacon, Mayor of Lindsay, said he was pleased that Mr. Hilliard had taken objection to the clause condemning the Hudson Bay route. He knew from experience that it was a route deserving of support. While willing to take all they could get for themselves they should not try to injury others. The people of England are bound to get communication with Liverpool via. the Hudson Bay route as it was shorter than by New York. The force of the memorial would not be lessened by leaving out the clause in question.

Mr. Strickland said he [illegible] would be left out. When at Ottawa he had noticed how united a delegation from Manitoba was. They could teach the people of Ontario a lesson. If the public debt was bound to be increased why should Ontario not have her share. If they went in for a grant as one man they would get it. Unity was required.

Mr. Logan said he thought it was a great national work. He complained of the lack of interest shown by the Toronto papers in this important question. It devolved upon the local papers to discuss the question. He thought the Globe and Mail should discuss the matter and bring it before the public, and should not guage everything from a Toronto stand point. He never missed an opportunity to speak of the canal. When in Toronto he spoke to a prominent citizen on the subject. He said Toronto was prepared to oppose anything that would take a bushel of grain from Toronto harbor.

Mr. Dumble said he had the pleasure to be in the deputation which was sent to Ottawa some time ago, to press the question of completing the canal. He thought the matter was settled then. The ministers agreed that it was the largest and one of the most influential deputations ever before the House. The scheme had met with approval, and the desired action had been taken. When young he had lived at Trenton. He had seen the massive rocks which were intended by the Government to build the locks for the canal, and since then had always had Trent Valley Canal on his mind. He thought the men of those days who had intended to build the canal were wise in their generation. The railways had had a great deal to do with preventing the completion of the canal. Canals to-day were competing favorably with railways in carrying heavy freights long distances. In the States, canals had the lion's share of heavy freights, and in England there was more freight carried this way than at any previous time. In France the government grant for canals was two to one in comparison with the grant for railways. If this canal were opened it would not be like many—which were mere ditches, lined with tow-paths. It would be like the Hudson river, on which a small tug can take a large flotilla of barges laden with grain down to the seaports. A small tug could take a flotilla of a dozen barges, one of which would carry as much grain as a train of cars, from Bobcaygeon to Buckhorn, and so on. The tonnage which passes through Sault Ste. Marie is greater than that of the Suez canal. The most of this could be secured for the Trent Valley Canal. Grain from Duluth would also go by the canal. With regard to the Hudson Bay route, it would not be advisable to say anything against it. All sympathies should be concentrated. The present government had commenced the canal. The Reform papers say this was done for political capital. That was one way of looking at it. He was not prepared to take away all credit from the Government. We should perfect what nature had gone so far with. Whatever government was in power should be urged to do the work. We should do as Parnell is doing, and force the government so it could not help complying, all go against the government which will refuse to build the canal. Ontario as a milch cow is submitting too gracefully. She has a right to complain, and say we want some of the subsidies. Let Reformer and Tory unite and keep together until they get what they want. The government should be made to commit the country to a policy, so that another government coming in power could not dispute the claim. If they get it well started, it will be hard to stop. They should urge the government to pass an order in council making the completion of the canal, binding upon it for all time to come.

Mr. Murphy, of Trenton, said that those who had inaugurated the meeting deserved the thanks of the people of the whole district from Trenton to the Georgian Bay. He then gave a history of the canal. It had been commenced in 1830, a rebellion had broken out in 1837 and money was required to put down the disturbance and the canal was shut down. It was again taken up a few years ago. Much as it was needed then it was needed more now. The idea of the canal in those days was to assist emigration, now it was required to assist commerce. The marketing of produce was hampered along the route. The people had settled along the course trusting that the canal would be built. The Government had promised it to them and they should carry out their promise. He agreed with Mr. Dumble that grain could be transported cheaper in barges than by rail. He gave statistics showing that there was two millions of bushels of grain brought to the port of New York by the canal to one million by all the railways. The Government and Ministers, including Sir C. Tupper, Sir Hector Langevin and Sir Leonard Tilley had all schooled the people to believe that the canal would be completed. To-day they had met to urge them to keep their pledge. If they keep their word all would be satisfied. He thought the Trenton-Frankford section should be done first, but was of opinion that unity was necessary. He was confident the scheme had the support of both political parties. Sir Charles Tupper had said the routes from the Northwest would be choked with commerce and the canal would be necessary. Why should there be any delay? The Government should be urged to complete the work and keep their pledges.

Col. Deacon, said that although Lindsay would not be benefited as Peterborough, yet they were willing to do all in their power in the cause by giving their entire sympathy. He thought it would be distrable to throw aside all statistics showing that the canal would be benefical, as the government and everyone else knew it would—and press the point home by putting the screw on the government so as to get the money. It was painting a lily to waste time in showing the good that would arise from the completion of the canal. He then gave an idea of the usefulness of the Hudson Bay route, part of which he had traversed when in the north-west. He thought it would be unwise to name a special section, but the difficulty had been overcome by asking the government to build at the same time both ends and the middle.

Mr. John Burnham, M.P., said he agreed

The township auditors, Jas. M. Drummond and Duncan P. McFarlane, in performing their allotted task with the township accounts, found them, as usual, in a most satisfactory condition.

Our townsman, Archie Bryce, has just received word that his brother, Mr. James Bryce, who went west last spring, dropped dead. He had only been out of his house a short time, about fifteen minutes, when his son went out and was just in time to see his father fall dead.

Mrs. Robt. McIntyre is recovering from the serious illness from which she was suffering.

Peter McNeil is still in a very precarious condition. His mother-in-law, Mrs. McNeil, sr., is recovering.

Little Robbie West is still very low also, "the only son of his mother, and she is a widow."

The Bible Society's meeting will take place here on Tuesday evening next, 10th, in the Methodist Church.

The old folks' concert, so long talked of, will be held the next evening, Wednesday, 17th inst., in the town hall here.

The next carnival date is uncertain, so many concerts, socials and dancing parties block the way.

A large number of cattle have changed hands here this past week. Mr. Howden, of Peterborough, is the purchaser.

The Ladies' Aid social in the town hall last Wednesday evening was a great success—the hall was well filled with a most attentive and orderly audience. The programme was a good one, consisting of songs, readings, refreshments, &c., and well carried out. The reading by Mr. Gallon, of Lindsay, "How Horatius Kept the Bridge," by Lord Macaulay, was well received; also a humorous one by Mrs. A. A. McIntyre. A delightful feature of the evening was the singing by the Hiawatha Indian choir, who rendered English and Indian music with a sweetness not often excelled. The ventriloquism by Mr. W. A. Dixon, of Peterborough, was received with shouts of applause, and he kept startling the audience with his wonderful imitations of animals and insects and other oddities till they were overcome with laughter. The tea and cake were almost unnecessary, there were so many good things besides.

The Victoria Skating Rink was largely patronized on Wednesday last to see an exciting obstacle race (on skates.) The course was twice round the rink and through several barrels, Mr. Jas. Murray of Hasting captured the first prize.

Mr. T. Coughlan of the Coughlan House, who is thoroughly alive to the requirements of his numerous customers has purchased a fine Mason & Risch piano, through Mr. McCormick, of Belleville.

Rev. W. Burns and wife of Warkworth, the dominion vice-councillor of the Royal Templars of Temperance, and the Rev. E. D. Lewis and wife of Norham, district deputy of Northumberland, passed through Hastings at three o'clock on Monday morning to catch the early train at Norwood for Guelph, where they are going as delegates to the grand council of Ontario.

On Thursday afternoon about 4 o'clock, a sleigh, with team attached, belonging to Mr. Coavey, and driven by Mr. Pappa, who was showing their trotting abilities on Front street, ran away and ran into the Coughlan House drive-shed, and completely destroyed a cutter, the property of Mr. S. Gibson, who had to purchase a new one to return home with, besides doing other damage.

The next carnival is to be held here on the 19th, and the proprietors promise their patrons a rich treat. The Alnwick Band have been engaged and will enliven the carnival with their music. "Jumbo on ice." Go and see him. Also two valuable prizes, one for ladies and one for gentlemen, for the best costumes.

Mr. J. Anderson, of "G" Company, Midland Battalion, was at Belleville on Monday, to attend the medical examiners from Kingston. He has been suffering from heart disease. The medical examiners report his condition equal to the loss of a leg, arm and eye. So friend James will surely procure a good pension.

We have the sad duty to chronicle the death of one of our citizens who has been sick since Xmas, viz., that of Mr. David Nelson, who passed away on Thursday morning about 10 o'clock, and was interred at the Trent Valley Cemetery on Saturday, followed by a large company of friends.

We see by the Canadian Royal Templar that Bro. E. D. Lewis has proved so efficient and energetic a deputy, his jurisdiction has been enlarged, and now covers the County of Peterborough as well as Northumberland.

Messrs. T. Harvey and M. Downs have made arrangements to have a ball on Friday next. This will be a first-class affair. Supper will be provided at the Coughlan House.

Mr. Wilson, the tailor, has bought a lot from Mr. Fowlds next to Tierney's store, and intends putting up a fine store and hopes to occupy it about the end of July.

Belleghem Scatch, I hape Kirsty; nae lass, he is far ower lang an' lank ta be a Scatchman. A-weel Sandy if am na greatla' mistaen' he has a Scatch wife. "Thrawin' a' jokes aside, Kirsty, its neither him nor the wife being Scatch, that tu'k me there, but because I thoucht his guids were the best an' the cheapest." "Weel, Sandy, allowin' that we agree on that, but that's na the pi'nt, ma man, you want an easy chair, an' I want a side-board; noo, hoo are we ta settle that?" "Weel, Kirsty, let us toss up for't." "Nae, Sandy; draw cuts for't. Nae, ma mon, I'll hae nane o' tha' daft-like ways o' settlen' it." "Weel, Kirsty, I'll tell ye what we micht try; ilk ane o' us ma'k twa verses o' poetry, an' whilk ever ane ma'kes the best gets the articule they want, wul that du?; and we wul leave D. Belleghem to be the judge." "That micht du, Sandy; but du you mean ta tell me that Mr. Belleghem is a judge o' poetry?" "Bless ma stars, Kirsty, did you na' see that grand piece he had in the papers last winter? Why, woman, it reala beat a'. I am convinced that Mr. Belleghem is as guid a judge o' poetry as he is o' furniture." "Well, a' weel, Sandy, let me hear what kind o' poetry ye can make."

I worked baith hard an' sair, lass, for you this forty years';
I hae clathed yo an' fed ye an' kissed awa yer tears;
I spent nae siller fuileshla on neither claes nor drink;
On every pay nicht I broucht you to the last cent o' chink;
Auld age is creepin' on me, lass, ma joints is gettin' stiff,
It hurts ma banes ta sit on wud at nicht ta take ma whiff;
If you hae ha'f the love for me you did in youth declare,
Then you weel gang ta Belleghem's an' buy me an easa chair.

"Ma Certes, Sandy, but ye are a grand poet; I wul hae little chance, but I'll try it."

Sandy, through a' oor married life nae idle bread I've tasted;
I kept ye tidy, warm an' clean, not a bawbee I've wasted;
I washed your sarks, mended yer claes, an' nursed ye in yer illness,
An' when yer temper burst in rage I kept ma tongue in stillness;
If you desire my young love back I'll tell you how to try it:
Slip into Belleghem's an' choose a nice sideboard an' buy it.
Then youth's sweet love shall fondly swell, ma auld arms will entwine ye;
I'll dot on you an' sideboard too, filled with ma claes an' China.

D. Belleghem's a warm side for the tender sex and keen grasp. We await the judge's decision, for the highest-priced article may be in Kirsty's favour.

CARD OF THANKS.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance,

MRS. JOHN ROLAND,

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 30th, 1885.
GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 20 years ruptured, I looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various trusses without success, among others, recently, two sprindless trusses from New York State, costing me $40. Nothing would retain my Hernia. . . . I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down. It holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. E. EGAN.

COOPER'S YOUNG INJUN.

Appointed Municipal Police. He Proceeds Officially Against Old Mr. Hank Ackers with a Club.

An Abbotsford, Wis., correspondent of the New York Sun writes: Col. Cooper, a well-known hunter and woodsman in these parts, has recently had an experience with an Indian boy, which he says will last him through life. He found the lad on the reservation, and on agreeing to do well by him and pay him $5 a month he secured permission to take him with him into camp. The boy, who was called Sam, was a bright-eyed and muscular chap, who had never seen any other evidences of civilization than those to be witnessed along a railroad running through the wilderness. It was the colonel's aim to make the boy useful, but at the same time he wanted to teach him something.

Before the colonel and his Indian had been in the woods a week the former discovered that the boy had no conception of the restraints of civilized life, and it became his duty to teach him the fundamental principles on which society rests. The colonel had books in his cabin, and when the weather was bad or when he was tired of the chase he would sit down with the boy before the blazing fire and endeavor to explain some of the things that he found in them that he thought might be of interest to the descendant of the savages. To all this Sam made no objection. He would listen attentively by the hour, grunt occasionally as if he saw the point, and once in a while he would ask a question or make a remark, which was accepted by the colonel as an indication that his instruction was striking in.

The white man passed easily from books to newspapers, and from newspapers to lengthy dissertations on cities, and when he struck this topic Sam was all ears. After describing a big town for the lad's edification, the colonel was gratified to hear an inquiry as to the method of government, and with that as a starter he branched out upon a long explanation of municipal authority, describing the mayor and common council, the police and fire service, and the hosts of employes. To illustrate the police system, in which Sam appeared to take the greatest interest, the colonel told the boy that they would organize a city of their own in the woods. He (the colonel) would be the mayor, and Sam would be the police force. He then instructed the lad in the duties of the police, telling him how they were armed, what they did, and how under certain circumstances they would shoot and kill men who were violating the law or who threatened to take the life of others. In like manner he described the practices of burglars, sneak-thieves, and footpads, and the methods adopted by detectives in ferreting out guilt. In all these things the boy took an absorbing interest, and the colonel began to feel that he was shedding some light on the youth, and might possibly hope to resume the books with him before long.

A light fall of snow made the prospects for hunting pretty good, and the two were so busy with deer and bear for a week or two that they had no time to study the science of government. In their search for game they had gone many miles away from their cabin, and as the trail was fresh, the colonel had no desire to return. But, being short of supplies of all kinds, he concluded to send the boy back, and with many injunctions to make haste, the lad started out. The next day he returned almost breathless with excitement, bearing two or three heavy pouches, and throwing them at the colonels' feet, he exclaimed:

"Me do 'em up."

The colonel was too busy assorting the ammunition to take in the remark, but after a few minutes' silence he asked, as if the thought had just occurred to him:

"Do up what?"

"White man—burglar," said Sam, proudly.

"Where 'bouts?" inquired the colonel, getting interested.

"In cabin. Shoot him, kill him, arrest him. Eat biscuits. Bust him with club. Shoot him."

The colonel's brow became a mass of wrinkles and the perspiration stood out on his face in great beads as he drawled out:

"Well, by thunder it you wa'n't an Injun I'd take your word for it and jump the country, but, seeing you are an Injun, we'll go home."

This took Sam by surprise, and, although he plainly felt hurt, he said nothing for an hour or two. At length, as if he feared he had not made himself understood, and that the colonel was wasting a great deal of time, he said:

"Oh, me kill em."

"Shut up, confound you!" roared the colonel. "That's just what I'm afraid of. I'll bet you a thousand dollars, you scoundrel, that you've been firing away at old Hank Ackers. He was due up here just about now, and I suppose I ought to have told you about him."

"No use go back," continued Sam with some reticence, and they trudged along together without another word until they reached the cabin. The day was a fine one, and sitting in front of the little house in a very sour frame of mind was Hank Ackers. What he saw they with Col. Denison, that those who had gone over statistics. All were satisfied that the canal would be a national benefit. He could not agree that the three sections should be taken up at once. It would be asking too much. The surveys could not be got ready for one thing. The pressure should be brought to compel the government to go on with the work, but not to specify any section. Let them choose that themselves. He thought Mr. Cockburn, member for north Ontario would be able to give some light on the subject.

Mr. Cockburn said he was much pleased to see so much interest manifested in the scheme. The interest manifested in north Ontario was slight. All would agree that canals required more backing than railways. He always took more interest in waters. He thought it would be a good policy to begin at the north section (Balsam Lake), as it would rouse the people who were almost indifferent now. The ball should be kept a rolling and the Government could not ignore it after awhile. He would give all the assistance in his power to further the scheme. He felt obliged to the people of this section for taking such an active part.

Mr. A. Robertson, M. P., Belleville, said he was pleased to be present and show that he was in sympathy with the meeting. The action proposed to be taken was the proper one. He did not know much about the canal, only from statistics, but he believed it was only second to the C.P.R. as a national highway. He thought it would be unwise to ask too much. He felt sure it was the intention of the Government to complete the canal. He was not in favor of naming any section. The city of Belleville was not on the route. Trenton would be greatly benefitted by the canal.

Mr. Dumble said he thought Belleville was in the water way. (Laughter.)

Mr. Robertson said he did not think the railways would be able to compete with the canal. He would give his assistance in trying to get an appropriation.

Mr. Logan said he thought it would be unwise to name any particular section. It should be left to the Government to decide.

Mr. Strickland again urged the necessity of asking for a large appropriation. He showed how the Erie Canal had increased the debt of the state of New York, and by the assessment of the cities which sprung up along the route, paid of the debt in a short time. The Trent Valley Canal would do the same. If the government would borrow five or six millions, it would not increase the public debt much. If they asked for little driblets they might never get it done.

Mr. Hilliard spoke of the opposition of shipping and railway interest, and also those who were of opinion that the days of canals had gone by. The more firmly the project was pushed, the stronger the opposition would object. By a careful calculation he showed the immensity of the Northwest grain trade. He was in favor of moderation or a piece-meal plan. They should petition the government as an individual and get all the sympathy they could. He showed that it was impossible for railways to compete with a canal in carrying heavy freights, and pointed out the greatness of the canal. He was in favor of giving the government no peace on earth till the canal was finished. It would be better to ask for another appropriation, and let the government decide what section it should be applied to. They would do as they pleased with the matter any way.

Mr. Dumble said the little was being done was good enough as local work. He was in favor of asking the government to commit itself to complete the canal, by an order-in-council or a statutory enactment, the same as in the case of the C. P. R. Ontario would only derive incidental benefits. The Government would never be more favorable than at present.

Mr. Hilliard said that he considered that the Government was committed.

Mr. Murphy said according to the word of the Ministers of the Government, the Government was committed. Sir Chas. Tupper, Sir Hector Langevin, Sir Leonard Tilley and Mackenzie Bowell had all promised at Trenton that it should be completed. He thought if the Trenton section was proceeded with first the opposition of the C. P. R. and lake vessels would be avoided to a certain extent.

Mr. Strickland said it had been shown that they had no opposition to fear from either side of the House. If the other Provinces objected, the sooner Ontario knew it the better. He would favor asking a grant of about $500,000 for each of the three sections.

Mr. Hilliard maintained that the best way to proceed was to consider the Government committed to go on with the work and they could then go to the Government's successors and ask for further appropriations without fear of refusal.

Col. Deacon said he had great respect for the opinion of Mr. Dumble. Mr. Murphy had the assurance of the Ministers. He believed in the saying that "language is given to people to conceal their thoughts." He would sooner see an order-in-council or a statutory enactment.

Mr. A. P. Cockburn said that the Ottawa vessel route had been abandoned after an order-in-Council had been passed declaring that it should be completed. He was in favor of getting all the money possible and shoving the work, and also get an order-in-Council if they could.

Mr. H. T. Strickland showed that the C. P. R. authorities were in favor of the canal and not opposed to it as had been pointed out.

Mr. Murphy moved, seconded by Col. Deacon, Mayor of Lindsay—That this meeting hereby appoint a delegation to be composed of the mayors of towns, wardens of counties, reeves of villages and townships, members of the House of Commons, on the T.V.C., Messrs Murphy, Dumble, Carnegie, M. Boyd (Bobcaygeon) and Armstrong, and any others which the municipality may name, to proceed to Ottawa at an early date to urge the Government to give sufficient sum to begin active operations on the following sections of the T.V.C., namely, between Balsam Lake and Lake Simcoe, between Lakefield and Peterborough, and between Trenton and Chisholm's, so that these sections may be placed under construction at the same time.

The motion to adopt the memorial was carried unanimously, as was also the motion appointing delegates.

On motion of Col. Deacon, Mayor Stevenson vacated the chair, which was taken by Mr. R. C. Strickland.

A vote of thanks was then tendered the Mayor for the courteous and gentlemanly manner in which he had presided over the meeting.

The Mayor replied, thanking the meeting for the expression of kindness. He was sorry he could not perform the duties of chairman more worthily. He felt sure that the canal would have been much further advanced this year, if it had not been for the rebellion.

Mr. McCabe, of Trenton, thought it was important that the deputation which would wait upon the government should press Ontario's claim for a subsidy.

On motion of Mr. Murphy, the Peterborough executive committee were empowered to arrange when the deputation should meet and to give the necessary notice.

The meeting then adjourned.

The delegates present came forward and signed the memorial.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Reliable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, on its MERITS. An article having a large and ready sale, over 100 per cent Profit. EXCLUSIVE TERRITORY, and on which the agent is protected in the exercise of his duty by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $300 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explaining everything, and terms we want to send to every one out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

A RED LETTER DAY IN PETERBOROUGH

"BEWARE THE IDES OF MARCH"

Said the grave soothsayers to Julius Cæsar as he passed in triumphant procession to the Sacred Lupercalia; and within a month Julius lay dead at the base of Pompey's Pillar. But we do not fear the Ides of March, and all the lovers of Good Clothing in Peterborough may well hail this month of March, 1886, for it will witness such a revolution in the Clothing Trade as the County of Peterborough has never seen before.

GOUGH, THE WONDERFUL CHEAP MAN,

Is now with you, and presents for your inspection the Most Beautiful and Complete Line of

READY-MADE CLOTHING

in Mens' Boys' and Childrens' wear, between Montreal and Toronto and at prices that will make them all hunt grass.

No enumeration of prices made here could give an adequate idea of the IMMENSE BARGAINS MR. GOUGH is now giving in his New store. But as seeing is believing, call and see for yourself.

I may add that I will clothe any Father and his five big Sons with a Splendid All-wool Suit each, for $30, or $5 per single Suit. Remember, six for $30, or one for $5. Same six elsewhere would cost you $60, or just double.

And this is not all. I will give you the Choicest Worsted Suits to be had in the market, for $9, and I guarantee the same will sell at other places for $18.

Nor is this all. Bear in mind, for with every suit I give a guarantee that it is just as I represented, or I will refund the money to the purchaser within one week from day of purchase.

For Big Bargains try GOUGH

he will greatly improve your personal appearance, without draining your pocket

NEWS OF THE TOWN.

Try the "Ten Cent" Store for fine plush articles for Holiday Presents. Toys and fancy goods by the car load.

Local Law Cases.

Judgment will be given in the Queen's Bench Divisional court in Toronto on Saturday next in the cases of Sheridan vs. Pigeon and Reynolds vs. Roxburgh.

The Golden Horseshoe.

This great clothing house will, for the next two weeks, give the biggest kind of bargains in clothing and gentlemen's furnishings. Mr. LeBrun has in contrast with the practice of other dealers, taken stock before holding clearing sale, so that he knows exactly what surplus stock he has, and he has decided to clear it out the next two weeks at tremendous bargains. He is well satisfied with the results of the past year's business as shown by his stock taking, and he feels inclined and will deal generously with his customers. Come and be astonished and enriched with the bargains the Golden Horseshoe will offer for the next fortnight

A Mint of Money.

There is a mint of money for purchasers of clothing, in the enterprise announced in the advertisement of "Gough, the Wonderful Cheap Man." The month of March will be signalised by Gough opening out in the Arcade buildings, next south of the Town Clock grocery, a mammoth stock of immensely cheap clothing. No description can approach the reality of the immense bargains in clothing, which will be afforded when Gough's "Red Letter Day" dawns on Peterborough. The customer will have to call for himself and be stunned by the bare mention of the sacrificial prices Gough puts upon his clothing. Don't take our word for it, but carefully study Gough's advertisement and try for yourself. You will find his prices fifty per cent. lower than the usual prices for clothing. Don't forget the name and place—Gough, the wonderful cheap man, Arcade buildings, south of Town Clock Grocery Store. "Beware the Ides of March."

Window Washing.

Merchants around town availed themselves of the opportunity afforded by the soft weather and are having their windows brightened up. The junior clerk says it's a good window that never needs washing.

Our New Serial Story

In next Thursday's weekly edition of the EXAMINER will be found the opening chapters of our charming new serial story, "The Maid Forlorn" by the "Duchess" whose delightful stories are always full of interest, captivatingly complex in plot and replete with charming personages and brilliant character and word painting. The story will be found to thoroughly repay reading. Secure the opening chapters and you will be sure to follow up this capital story.

Revival Services in George Street Church.

The Evangelistic services now in progress in the Lecture room of George St. Church, were largely attended last evening, the large room being well filled. Rev. Mr. Tovell delivered a short sermon based on the narration of blind Bartimæus being restored to sight. The points made were that Bartimæus felt his need of sight, embraced the opportunity of getting Divine aid, simply asked, and asked in faith, then being blest, he followed Jesus. Several persons gave evidence of a desire to be saved. An interesting feature of the services, is the singing of some sacred songs, as found in the collection used by the Whyte brothers. The meetings hereafter will commence at 7.30 p.m., instead of 7.45 p.m., as previously announced.

Serious and Almost Fatal Accident.

Mr. Owen McCarthy, who owns lot No. 16, 10th concession of Otonabee, met with a very serious and almost fatal accident when returning home yesterday afternoon. He had been in town during the day and when he had finished his business started for home about four o'clock. He had just passed Downers' Corners, a short distance ahead of which is a very dangerous crossing on the Grand Trunk Railway, the line at this point being screened both ways by high board fences to such an extent that an approaching train cannot be seen, when, it is asserted by a witness the, horses became frightened by the whistle of a train coming from town. They became unmanageable and bolted, and a race for the crossing, between the train and horses followed. The train reached the crossing first, while the horses in their mad career dashed at full speed into the quickly passing coaches. The shock that followed was terrific. The horses were thrown around into the cattle guard while the sleigh was smashed into splinters against the cars. Mr. McCarthy was thrown violently to one side, bruised and stunned, miraculously escaping being crushed and mangled by the carwheels. One of the horses had a fore-leg broken near the body, and all the harness completely stripped off, even to the bridle. The other horse escaped uninjured. Mr. Edward Braden brought Mr. McCarthy to town, taking him to Cavanagh's Hotel. Drs. Bingham and O'Sullivan were called in to attend to the injured man. It was found he had received a concussion of the brain from the effects of a blow. No bones were broken, and the only marks of the accident were a few cuts and bruises about his head. Mr. McCarthy remained unconscious until this morning. His condition was very low last night, but he improved considerably towards morning. He is well and favorably known in the district. He has a wife and six children. The doctors entertain hopes of his early recovery.

Brand of cigars. Try them. Very choice. S. DAVIS & SONS, Factories, Cote St., Montreal. Toronto Branch:—34 Church St.

Another Canal.

The Street and Bridge Inspector had a man at work this afternoon digging a canal down the east side of George Street. The Inspector has not had an order-in-council passed allowing sawdust to be thrown in the stream. Parties are notified to act accordingly. This has nothing to do with the T. V. C.

A Curiosity.

Mr. Ruf. Stevenson, while delving among the dusky diamonds in the office coal bin, unearthed a treasure in the shape of a miner's lamp. It is a curious little arrangement like a small tin teapot. The wick which runs through the spout, while what would be the handles is a hook to attach the lamp to the miner's hat. Verily the dealer gets light weight whether the consumer does or not. Mr. Stevenson proposes to present the lamp to a friend.

Another Applicant.

A strange, brass-buttoned, blue-coated policeman appeared on the streets this morning. Loafers moved away from lounging around corners and the general public looked upon the good looking stranger as the new chief of police. Enquiry showed, however, that he was Mr. Charles Thompson, of the Kingston police force, who is now another of the many applicants for the position of Chief of Police. Mr. Thompson has been on the Kingston force for over twelve years and has the reputation of being an efficient officer.

Hazel Brae Breezes.

First, the net proceeds of the "Hazel Brae" concert, held in St. Paul's school room last Thursday evening, amount to $43.30, and the "Home" staff are specially grateful to the St. Paul's officials for the use of their beautiful school room for that occasion. Second, only those who enjoy the delights of a sleigh-ride for the first time can understand the pleasurable sensations of the rosy-cheeked lasses, big and little, last Tuesday evening, when, through the kindness of Mr. T. Fitzgerald, a well-packed sleigh load from the "Home" did the town, under the escort of Mrs. Duff, Miss Millar and Miss Wallbridge, who enjoyed the fun as much as the juveniles.

A Great Treat

is in store for Peterborough and vicinity. Burdette the celebrated Humorist and Lecturer is to address a Peterborough audience in the Opera House, on the 15th of Feb. Subject, "Advice to Young Men." Secure you tickets in good time. Plan of the hall at A. L. Davis & Co's. The Philadelphia Press says of him:—"Like Artemus Ward, he worked quietly up to each percussion point, and then pulled trigger, causing a universal shout of merriment by some quaint joke or comical grouping of circumstances, so naturally as to hit every intelligence plumply, and yet with such delicacy as not to give the slightest offence. The foibles of the period were criticised in a jocund manner, and so contrasted with the sentimental strains that the effect was always pleasing, though the lecturer made no attempt at impressive declamation. His conversational mode of delivery and rapid utterance enables him to speak a volume in an hour's time, and the people rose from their seats last night with a manifest appetite for more—a compliment, always, and a note for Burdette's memorandum book to which he can refer with gratification when he comes this way again."

In the Opera House.

Remember the entertainment in the Opera House to-night, Dore's celebrated views, illustrating Coleridge's "Ancient Mariner," and many other interesting scenes will be presented. Admission 25c.

Self-Explanatory.

A Port Arthur correspondent writes. "As there is no other paper so well worth subscription as the EXAMINER, you will find enclosed one dollar ($1.00) the price for another year's reading."

Information Wanted.

The public are looking for information at all times, and especially of late since a discussion, that the people are interested in, somewhat, has taken place in regard to assurance matters recently. We therefore direct the attention of those whom, we believe, take an interest in such affairs, to the advertisement of Mr. E. K. Henderson, the general agent of the British Empire Mutual Life Assurance Company. Mr. Henderson has represented this thoroughly substantial company, in Peterborough, for the past three years, during which time the business has steadily increased, a proof that the general public find advantages in this company; evidence is submitted that, as a matter of fact, the company have declared larger profits than were represented by the agent, and it is further asserted that they furnish insurance cheaper than any assessment society. A perusal of the advertisement will repay any one seeking information.

Victory for Peterboro' "Junior" Curlers.

The Peterborough "junior" curlers succeeded yesterday afternoon in defeating their opponents from Lindsay by a score of 10 shots. A number of the juniors on both sides were "not so young as they used to was some twenty years ago." The game was an exciting one from beginning to end and at the close of the game a rink on each side claimed a victory, although the united scores of Peterborough's curlers gave them a lead. The scores were as follows:—

The Port Hope papers state that "Miss Clara Claxton, Peterborough's most accomplished vocalist," will sing at Mr. Shepherd's Trinity College school concert on Feb. 18th.

I had so much demand for Giles' Liniment Iodide of Ammonia, and people who were benefited spoke so much in its praise, that I was induced to write to the Doctor for a supply. I was delighted; it made cures in the family and in the stables, and no article that I ever handled gave such universal satisfaction. GEORGE W. BERNUM, Georgetown, Del. Sold by J. McKee. w6-d32-6d

Don't be Duped.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brand of cigars, which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pay them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby.

CARD OF THANKS.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance,

CANALS NOT OBSOLETE.

We have received from Mr. R. C. Strickland, two newspaper clippings, which go to show that the people of Ontario are not the only agitators of canal extension and that other nations besides Canada do not consider canals obsolete and out of date. The proposed German canal to connect the North Sea and the Baltic seems to have wakened up France to active interest, in a canal project to connect the Great Mediterranean seaport, Marseilles with the mouth of the Rhone, thus completing a system of inland navigation. The virtual object of this canal is to make a more direct and cheaper route from the Mediterranean to the English channel.

Senator McMillan, has introduced into the U.S. Senate resolutions declaring the importance of the Erie and Oswego Canals, and recommending an expenditure of $5,000,000 for their improvement. The canals are also to be made free of tolls. It is probable that the cry that canals are out of date, arises from interested parties—railway corporations—who do not view with favour any form of competition which will diminish the practical monopoly they enjoy, or in other words, give the public cheaper grain routes. It is not the progressive spirit of the age that denounces canals as "out of date," it is monopoly, anxious respecting a certain decrease of munificent profits, which a canal such as the Trent Valley would be sure to produce and of which the public would reap the advantage.

The London Rioters.

Not Decent Mechanics, But Anarchists Roughs and Ex-Convicts.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—As each hour passes the riotous demonstrations assume more and more the characteristics of an anarchist outbreak and less and less those of a labor movement. A correspondent visited Deptford district yesterday during the excitement. All business was suspended and but for the groups of yelling ruffians, who passed here and there, all apparently making toward the city, one might have thought it Sunday or a holiday. The shop-keepers and members of their families could be seen now and then peeping apprehensively from the second floor windows above the barricaded doors of their places of business. From a scrutiny of the crowds as they moved about it was easily observable that there were very few mechanics or laborers in the streets. A detective from Scotland Yard, who recognized and conversed with the reporter, pointed out at different times several hard-looking fellows, and remarked that they were ex-convicts and desperate characters, who had for some time been keeping out of the way of the police. "They come out like rats from their holes on occasions like these," he added, "and the captain sent a few of us down here to-day to keep our eyes open for them. We won't molest them to-day, as it would only add to the disturbance, but we know where to find them now, and will nab them inside of a week." I looked me for some evidence of the real state of mind among the honest poor. From what I had read in certain organs about the events of the past few days, I was prepared to see repeated in London the terrible Parisian scenes so vividly described in Dicken's "Tale of Two Cities," but there was a notable absence of that grim despair among the unfortunate poor which gave the event of one hundred years ago in the French capital their fateful significance. A stalwart young weaver whom I met and interrogated, assured me that, like myself, he was merely out to see was going on. "I have been without work seven months," he added, "and I'm lucky when I don't have to go to sleep hungry, but how will I better myself by smashing somebody's windows?" "You might get bread by breaking a baker's window" suggested the reporter. "Yes," he replied, "and so I can get bread from the parish if I want to apply for it, but we workmen stick together and share with each other all we can, and we haven't got down to starving nor stealing yet. We resolved at a meeting of our union last night to keep out of the streets and not help those blood-tubs to make a riot;" he added, pointing to a murderous-looking crew who wore red cloths around their hats and brandished clubs as they strode along.

Asphodel.

Mr. Jas. Bibby, of Asphodel, sold his farm of 100 acres to Mr. John Ilss, of the same township, for $47.50 per acre. Mr. B. contemplates moving to Clinton Co., Mich., about the middle of March.—Register.

Capt. O'Shea, Home Ruler, was yesterday elected for Galway, Ireland.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Fifth Parliament—Third Session.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 11TH.

In the Assembly, yesterday, Attorney-General Mowat stated that doubt as to the competence of the Legislature to enact it was the reason for not enforcing the Factory Law for the protection of workmen. He stated that he had failed to get the Dominion Government to agree to the submission of a case to the Supreme Court, and hinted that if some agreement were not soon arrived at he might make the application to the Court on behalf of Ontario alone. On motion of Mr. Graham, of Lambton, the House ordered a return showing the total number of male and female voters on the voters' lists of each municipality and the total number of each sex who voted in 1885 and 1886.

Mr. Gladstone's Land Scheme.

A Bill that is to Precede All Other Irish Measures.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—Mr. Gladstone is preparing a bill providing for the expropriation of land in Ireland by means of state funds. This bill will precede the other Irish measures which the Government intends to present to Parliament. The discussion of the Home Rule question has been postponed until next session.

Belleville.

BELLEVILLE, Feb. 11.—A further slight decline is noticeable to-day in the streams of water which still overflow Coleman, Everett, and Front streets. The ice in the bed of the river has sunk two feet at the foot-bridge. The work of cutting a channel to the lower bridge progresses rapidly and gives promise of success, as the water runs strongly, and the anchor ice as it is loosened is carried out to the bay. The water now overflows the ice at the lower part of the channel.

Mutiny in the Mounted Police.

Several Arrests Made—The Affair Being Greatly Exaggerated.

OTTAWA, Feb. 11.—In reply to inquiries made in the department to-day regarding the mutiny among the mounted police at Edmonton, Mr. Fred. White, comptroller, said he thought the report was greatly exaggerated. Some half dozen men, at the outside, had been guilty of acts of insubordination, the exact nature of which he did not know, and they had been arrested and were awaiting trial by court-martial. With regard to the rumored continuation of the mutiny and the locking up of the commanding officer, he had not received any information and believed it to be a fabrication.

Indian Insurrection Imminent.

The Deputy Sheriff at Batoche Fearful of an Indian Rising.

MONTREAL, Feb. 11.—Mr. Adelard Forget, deputy sheriff at Batoche, writes to his brother in the recorder's court here a letter, in which he makes the following remarks regarding the much-talked-of Indian rising in the spring: "Speaking of Indians, you may tell the brave Canadian volunteers to keep their arms clean and their powder dry. The only way to prevent an outbreak in spring is by the immediate despatch of at least 2,000 men to the south to prevent the hordes from crossing over into the Northwest. I can tell you things are not at all reassuring here, and I feel very much afraid myself. The Indians don't like me very much since I took part at the execution of the Indian murderers last year. I take pretty good care, but at the same time I don't feel any too secure."

Riots at Leicester.

Strikers Smash Widows and Assault the Police.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—A despatch from Leicester says the hosiery operatives here are out on strike. They are parading the streets and smashing windows. The police in endeavouring to disperse them met with some personal violence.

A later despatch states that the police charged the strikers but were unable to disperse them. Four arrests have been made.

Placards have been posted in Birmingham calling a meeting of the unemployed workmen for Monday next. The placards are headed: "Come, you thousands. Why starve amidst plenty? Justice to the starving poor!"

A large meeting of unemployed workmen was held at Norwich last night for the purpose of urging the authorities to give to the unemployed laborers and mechanics work on the new barracks, schools and jails, instead of employing convicts. The meeting was orderly. Similar meetings were held at Jarrow and elsewhere.

Another Bigamy Case.

A Cruel Case of Desertion and Neglect—A Woman's Story of Her Wrongs

A woman giving her name as Mrs. Anna Whiteman walked from Trenton to Belleville on Wednesday, to lay a complaint against her husband, whom she had not seen for the past seven years, of bigamy. The woman states that she is a native of Camden township, Lennox County, and was married at that place about 24 years ago to a man named Whiteman, with whom she lived for 18 years, raising a family of five children. When the youngest child was a year old the husband and father left the family to provide for themselves as best they could and was not heard of until recently, when the woman, who is broken down in health, learned from her husband's sister that Whiteman had been married for the past three years and was living at Peterborough. For the past three years Mrs. Whiteman has supported herself and family by her labor, her places of abode having been Hay Bay, Northport, Trenton, and other places. She is a woman of middle age, slight in figure, and completely broken down in health. Her clothing, though neat and comfortable, was poor. The story, as she tells it, and her general appearance, impress one with her truthfulness and excite sympathy, as her life has been made up more of shadow than sunshine.—Intelligencer.

It would seem that this is the lady who wrote the letter, addressed to the legal profession in Peterborough, recently published in the EXAMINER, and that here is a case of real hardship.

Patriotic Londoners.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 12.—The chances that the London, Ont., field battery will go to England to take part in the celebration of the Queen's jubilee are now said to be very good. Leading citizens have come forward with assurances that if $6000 or $4000 is necessary to take the battery there and back it will be subscribed.

Moose v. Horse.

TORONTO, Feb. 11.—Alex. Scott's moose, which has been wintering at the Humber, trotted a mile on the ice track against Charlie Telford's mare Nellie, Wednesday, beating the mare easily in 2:20, at least that is the time shown by an ancient chronometer that never was known to tell a lie. Scott believes the moose can, with a little careful training, trot faster than any horse in America. Evidently he is a man of great expectations.

Trustworthy Information.

Another lively child has been heard from. This one is dangerous, however. She has upset the peace of a household. She has estranged her father and mother. She has ruined the reputation of a most estimable young school teacher, and she will probably never know anything about it. It was in school. The school teacher, wishing to test the intelligence of her little pupils, asked them: "How many of you know my name is Daisy?"

They were silent. Perhaps their intuition told them that to acknowledge the fact would be to exhibit undue familiarity. At last one little thing held up her hand. "I know your name's Daisy."

Having made this bold statement, she felt she must save herself by an explanation. "I know your name's Daisy, 'cos every day when I go home papa asks me, "How's that daisy school teacher of yours?"—San Francisco Chronicle.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

Recognizing the importance of this great water way we devoted considerable space to a report yesterday of the meeting held here in its interests. While such a meeting could add nothing to the popular feeling as to the urgent necessity of the work, it was important as shewing how the people concerned were in earnest. Representatives of every possible interest involved, in the district between Bellivelle and Lake Simcoe, were present; and as a whole the meeting gave no uncertain sound on the subject, though there were some who showed a disposition to run with the hare and hunt with the hounds. As regards its part dealing with the scheme of the general drift of opinion tended in the direction of throwing the blame of the delay that had been caused in the past, upon the present Dominion Government. It was pointed out that the Government was committed to the work; that minister after minister had made specific promises, in respect of vigorous prosecution of the work; that these promises had not been kept and that it was high time to bring the government to the point and force them to do justice to the Midland district. If the Parliamentary representatives present had showed a more pronounced inclination to kick more vigorously to secure the promotion of the scheme, a much more encouraging feature would have been introduced; for nothing can be so effectual in bringing the Government to its senses. It is universally recognized that the Government has in the past, regarded the Trent navigation scheme as a mine, inexhaustible in resources, which could be worked to great advantage for political capital, and it is to the representatives of this district, who support the Government, that we must look for a solution of the problem. The Government may suavely and blandly receive deputatien after deputation, and surfeit them with fair promises, to be forgotten the moment their backs are turned, but nothing, except a decided and unanimous kick on the part of the dozen or more representatives of the district interested, will have any effect. It is folly to trust any longer to fair promises—they have proven to be merely a "refuge of lies." The policy of petition has failed and must necessarily continue to fail; the policy of coercion must next be tried, as the last resort. The proposed deputation to Ottawa may have some effect—it will, certainly have the effect of extracting more promises. But promises will not close contracts; promises will not furnish funds: promises will not dig the canal. In the present condition of affairs, it is plain that the matter rests almost entirely with the supporters of the Government from the Midland District. Most of these owe their elections to the pretended friendship of the government to the Trent Valley Canal; they were elected to support a government committed to the prosecution of the work. They see how the Government has trifled with it, and it is in their power to change its policy of careless indifference, to active interest in the matter. If these gentlemen have the moral courage to place the overwhelming interests of their constituents, before loyalty to their party, there is some prospect of effecting something practical. They have only to say to the Government:—"You have trifled with the most important interests of the constituents, to whom we owe the first duty, and unless you change your policy in reference to the Trent Valley Canal; unless you show an honest intention to redeem your pledges, you must no longer count on our support."

Talk like this followed, if necessary, by corresponding action, would fetch the Government to its senses. At this stage, nothing else promises to be effectual. Deputations may come and go; may coax and threaten, but so long as they have no votes in Parliament they are easily disposed of—by a few glib promises. But, a solid phalanx of fifteen or twenty Parliamentary supporters converted into a hostile array of representatives, loyal to their constituents' interests in case justice were not done to the Midland district, would be too serious a a matter to trifle with.

That, however, this unanimity of action on the part of the representatives is not to be looked for, may be inferred from the conduct and speech of those representatives present at the meeting on Wednesday. Messrs. D. W. Dumble, R. C. Strickland and A. P. Cockburn, North Ontario, were the only ones of the principal speakers, who came out on this line in a manly, straightforward manner, and distinctly demanded that the Government should, on behalf of the country, be committed formally to a positive policy, from which they could not recede. Their remarks were received with loud applause, showing that the popular sympathy with their sentiments might be depended on, when a proper time came for giving its expression. In marked contrast, however, were the milk-and-water, deferential, deprecatory do-nothing-rush, apologetic utterances of Mr. Alex. Robertson, M. P., West Hastings, Messrs. Murphy and Ostrom, Trenton, and Messrs. Barnham and Hilliard, East and West Peterborough, respectively. The latter gentleman, Mr. Hilliard, especially distinguished himself in his anxiety to not hurt the tender feelings of the Government. He was "in favour of giving the government no peace on earth till the canal was finished" yet in the next breath, he meekly suggests that it would be better to ask (respectfully of course) the government to make another appropriation and let the government decide what section it should be applied to," and he significantly added—"They would do as they pleased with the matter anyway?" A nice sentiment to be enunciated by a member of parliament. No government can do as it pleases, unless it can count on the thick and thin support of a representative of the people, who will sacrifice the interests of his constituents rather than condemn the action of a government that trines with those interests. Our representatives must come to this point. They must decide between the interest of their constituents, and their loyalty to their party. The time for double dealing is past. A representative may play a double game with rival factions of his own supporters in a local matter, but he is treading on dangerous ground when he feigns a friendship to a scheme of the highest importance to his constituents, yet objects to utter a single protest that may influence the government he so slavishly supports, to do justice.

THE MARRIAGE RING.

Dr. Talmage Talks About a "Husband and Wife in Harmony or Out of Tune."

Practical Suggestions on the Art of Making Home Happy.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Jan. 31.—This morning fully six thousand persons were present inside the Tabernacle, and as many vainly attempted to enter the building, representing the usual attendance when Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D., is at home. The musical exercises were exceedingly interesting. The congregation sang the hymn beginning:

"Joy to the world, the Lord is come;
Let earth receive her king."

Dr. Talmage founded his remarks on the subject, "Husband and Wife in Harmony or out of Tune," on Amos iii., 3: "Can two talk together except they be agreed?" He said:

No, Amos, they cannot. They will be tripping each other up or pushing each other down. Married life under such circumstances will be the sounding of perpetual war-whoop. In this course of sermons on "The Marriage Ring," I will to-day speak of the mutual duties of husband and wife, preparatory to discourses on their individual duties.

A church within a church, a republic within a republic, a world within a world, is spelled by four letters—home! If things go right there, they go right everywhere; if things go wrong there, they go wrong everywhere. The door-sill of the dwelling-house is the foundation of church and state. A man never gets higher than his own garret or

LOWER THAN HIS OWN CELLAR,

In other words, domestic life overarches and undergirds all other life. The highest house of Congress is the domestic circle; the rocking chair in the nursery is higher than a throne. George Washington commanded the forces of the United States, but Mary Washington commanded George. Chrysostom's mother made his pen for him. If a man should start out and run seventy years in a straight line he could not get out from under the shadow of his own mantelpiece. I therefore talk to you this morning about a matter of infinite and eternal moment when I speak of your home.

As individuals we are fragments. God makes the race in part, and then he gradually puts us together. What I lack, you make up; what you lack, I make up; our deficits and surpluses of character being the cog-wheels in the great social mechanism. One person has the patience, another has the courage, another has the placidity, another has the enthusiasm; that which is lacking in one is made up by another, or made up by all. Buffaloes in herds, grouse in broods, quails in flocks, the human race in circles. God has most beautifully arranged this. It is in this way that he balances society; this conservative and that radical keeping things even. Every ship must have its mast, cutwater, taffrail, ballast. Thank God, then, for Princeton and Andover, for the opposites. I have no more right to blame a man for being different from me than a driving-wheel has a right to blame the iron shaft that holds it to the centre. John Wesley balances Calvin's Institutes. A cold thinker gives to Scotland the strong bones of theology; Dr. Guthrie clothes them with a throbbing heart and warm flesh. The difficulty is that we are not satisfied with just the work that God has given us to do. The waterwheel wants to come inside the mill and and the hopper wants to go out and dabble in the water. Our usefulness and the welfare of society depends upon our staying in just the place that God has put us, or intended we should occupy.

For more compactness, and that we may be more useful, we are gathered in still smaller circles in the home group. And there you have the same varieties amongst brothers, sisters, husband and wife; all different in temperaments and tastes. It is fortunate that it should be so. If the husband be all impulse, the wife must be all prudence. If one sister be sanguine in her temperament, the other must be lymphatic. Mary and Martha are necessities. There will be no dinner for Christ if there be no Martha; there will be no audience for Jesus if there be no Mary. The home organization is most beautifully constructed. Eden has gone; the bowers are all broken down; the animals that Adam stroked with his hand that morning when they came up to get their names have since shot forth tusk and sting, and growled panther at panther, and midair, iron beaks plunge till with clotted wing and eyeless sockets the twain came whirling down from under the sun in blood and fire. Eden has gone, but there is just one little fragment left. It floated down the river Hiddekel out of Paradise. It is the marriage institution. It does not, as at the beginning, take away from man a rib. Now it is an addition of ribs.

This institution of marriage has been defamed in our day, and influences are abroad trying to turn this earth into a Turkish harem or a great Salt Lake City. While the pulpits have been comparatively silent, novels—their cheapness only equalled by their profligacy—have taken upon themselves to educate public sentiment in regard to holy marriage, for time and eternity. Oh, this is not a mere question of residence and wardrobe! It is a question charged with gigantic joy or sorrow, with heaven or hell. Alas for this new dispensation of George Sands. Also for the mingling of the nightshade with the marriage garlands. Alas for the vapors of sadness cast into the tankards! Alas for the white frosts of eternal death that kill the orange blossoms. The gospel of Jesus Christ is to assert what is right and to assert what is wrong. Attempt has been made to take the marriage institution, which was intended for the happiness and elevation of the race, and make it a mere commercial enterprise; an exchange of houses and lands and equipage; a business partnership of two stuffed up with the stories of romance and knight errantry, add unfaithfulness and feminine anglehood. The two, after a while, have roused up to find that, instead of the paradise they dreamed of, they have got nothing but a Van Amburgh's menagerie, filled with tigers and wildcats. Eighty thousand divorces in Paris in one year preceded the worst revolution France ever saw. It was only the first course of that banquet of hell; and I tell you what you know as well as I do, that wrong notions on the subject of Christian marriage are the cause at this day of more moral outrage before God and man than any other cause.

WHICH MAKES OR BREAKS

There are some things that I want to bring before you. I know there are those of you who have had homes set up for a great many years; and then there are those here who have just established their home. They have only been in it a few months or a few years. Then, there are those who will, after a while, set up for themselves a home, and it is right that I should speak out upon these themes.

MY FIRST COUNSEL TO YOU

is, have Jesus in your new home. If it be a new home; and let Him who was a guest at Bethany be in your household; let the Divine blessing drop upon your every hope and plan and expectation. Those young people who begin with God end with heaven. Have on your right hand the engagement ring of the Divine affection. If one of you be a Christian, let that one take a Bible and read a few verses in the evening time, and then kneel down and commend yourselves to Him who setteth the solitary in families. I want to tell you that the destroying angel passes by without touching or entering the door post sprinkled with blood of the everlasting covenant. Why is it that in some families they never get along, and in others they always get along well? I have watched such cases, and have come to a conclusion. In the first instance nothing seemed to go pleasantly, and after awhile came devastation, domestic disaster, or estrangement? Why? They started wrong. In the other case, although there were hardships and trials, and somethings that had to be explained, still thing went on pleasant until the very last. Why? They started right.

My advice to you in your home is, to exercise to the very last possibility of your nature the law of forbearance. Prayers in the household will not make up for everything. Some of the best people in the world are the hardest to get along with. They are the people who stand up in prayer meetings and pray like angels, who at home are uncompromising and cranky. You may not have everything just as you want it. Sometimes it will be the duty of the husband, and sometimes of the wife, to yield; but both stand punctiliously on your rights, and you will have a Waterloo with no Blucher coming up at nightfall too decide the conflict.

NEVER BE ASHAMED TO APOLOGIZE

when you have done wrong in domestic affairs. Let that be a law of your household. The best thing I ever heard of my grandfather, whom I never saw, was this: that his children, he himself having lost his patience, and, perhaps, having been misinformed of the child's doings, found out his mistake, and in the evening of the same day gathered all his family together and said: "Now, I have one explanation to make, and one thing to say, Thomas, this morning I rebuked you very unfairly. I am very sorry for it. I rebuked you in the presence of the whole family, and now I ask your forgiveness in their presence." It must have taken some courage to do that. It was right, was it not? Never be ashamed to apologize for domestic inaccuracy. Find out the points; what are the weak points, if I may call them so, of your companion, and then stand aloof from them. Do not carry the fire of your temper too near the gunpowder. If the wife be easily be fretted by disorder in the household, let the husband be careful where he throws his slippers. If he come home from the store with his patience all exhausted, do not let the wife unnecessarily cross his temper; but both stand up for your rights, and I will promise the everlasting sound of the war-whoop. Your life will be spent in making up, and marriage will be to you an unmitigated curse. Cowper said:

"The kindest and the happiest pair
Will find occasion to forbear;
And something every day they live,
To pity, and perhaps to forgive.

(Concluded in to-morrow's issue.)

The Same as Ours.

There is a mother who, working at the problem how to provide the daily meals for a large family, in such a way as not to go beyond the sum the father can afford each week, yet finds time amid her multiplicity of duties, to take down the dainty cup and fill it with the milk that her little Sarah is to drink at breakfast.

"It takes twice as much time to wash that thin china and put it carefully away," said grandmother on one occasion. "Give the child a cup the same as ours."

"No, mother," said the home maker, gently, "nothing I could possibly say would teach Sarah the good manners I desire her to learn so much as the use of this dainty cup. I rather take a thousand times more trouble, if necessary, in its care than not to give it to her." And the grandmother stared, and to this day doesn't see what her daughter meant. Margaret Sidney, in Good Housekeeping.

"J. Randolph Tucker, who was here at the merchants' dinner," says the Boston Post, "is a charming conversationalist and a most renowned story-teller. He and Blackburn used to divide the honors of raconteurship. One evening they had been at dinner at Wormley's and capped each other's stories for several hours. The next day Mr. Tucker went to a member of the House and said: "I've got a good one on Joe. When I came out of the hotel last night Smith came to me and said: "Well, we've had a pleasant evening; but what an old bore Blackburn is!' 'Indeed!' answered the member; 'Smith said the same thing about you, Tucker.' 'Did he?' replied Tucker. 'I always knew Smith was an unappreciative old idiot.'"

COOPER'S YOUNG INJUN.

Appointed Municipal Police. He Proceeds Officially Against Old Mr. Hank Ackers with a Club.

colonel and his companion he grabbed his rifle and began to yell at the boy:

"Stand off there, you varmint! Don't you come any closser or I'll murder you."

The colonel continued to advance, and the boy skulked in the trees at the edge of the clearing. A few words between the two men sufficed to put the colonel's mind at ease, and Ackers made his explanation.

"I came up here," he said, "expecting to find you here, and not seeing of you I just made myself at home, knowing as you would be here pretty soon. Day before yesterday, while I was out for a little exercise, I noticed this young savage approaching the house, and I came to see what was the matter. He got a lot of your ammunition and stuff, and I told him to tell you that I was here, and that I'd just make myself to home until you got back. With that I sat down to the table to eat a biscuit, when the redskin that I thought was on his way back to you crept in and smashed me on the skull with a club so that I couldn't see for four hours, and I guess he fired at me, though as to that I'm not as certain. It's a merciful providence that saved my life at all. Where is the savage till I blow him open?"

Finding that his old friend was not permanently disabled, the colonel regained his spirits, and after both of the men had partaken freely of some refreshment the cause of Sam's ferocious attack was explained. Toward evening the boy was called in and he got a sound drubbing from the colonel, who, after polishing him off, said:

"Now, look here, Sam, from this time on you're an Injun, and nothing but an Injun. This here town is dissolved, and there ain't no more police force here. White man's government is a mighty deep problem, and I'm afraid you'll get hurt if you fool with it."

Since the Ackers episode Sam has developed into a very stolid sort of an Indian. He does as he is told. In all matters of woodcraft he is an authority. In cooking he is something of a success. In detecting the presence of game he is invaluable. But when by chance the colonel or Ackers tells him to do something, or asks him a question which he thinks is beyond his reach, he looks solemnly to the sky, and, pointing his finger at his breast, says:

"Me Injun."

The Printer and His Hens.

We have a printer in this office who has gone into the chicken business for all it is worth. We will call him "Slug Two." "Slug Two" was led to this step by the awful price of eggs. He ordered a dozen hens from a country dealer, figuring that each hen would lay an egg a day. This would be seven dozen a week, which, at the present market price, would be $1,85. As their keeping would cost but 25 cents a week, it would require little figuring to show that "Slug Two" would be the gainer of $1.50 each week that he kept these hens. The chickens were promptly delivered. The first day he did not expect the hens to do anything, as it would take them one day to get used to their new quarters. But the second day he put on a "sub" and stayed at home to gather eggs. Early in the morning the chickens commenced crowing. He straightway repaired to the house.

"My dear," said he to his wife, "do hens crow?"

"Why certainly," said she, "but when they do it is a sign of bad luck."

He watched all day, but there was no increase in the egg output. The second day resulted the same, when he consulted a German lady.

"Hens won't lay in the winter season unless they are kept in a warm place," said the oracle.

Then he brought in a couple of the chickens and put them in the baking oven. Their sufferings were very soon over.

"I believe there is something in the saying that a crowing hen brings bad luck," muttered "Slug Two." Then he was advised to buy them small grain and feed them oats; to feed them meat, and he bought porter-house steak and chopped it up for them. But not a single egg could be got. Worn out, disgusted and about $5 out of pocket, he was about to kill the hens and get the eggs, which he had no doubt they were carrying around through pure perversity, when his wife advised him to sell them. He brought around an intending purchaser yesterday, who no sooner looked at them than he commenced laughing.

"What's the matter?" asked "Slug Two." Have I got them too fat?"

"Mein Gott, no," roared his neighbor, "but dem hens are all roosters."

It was too true. "Slug Two" had been lavishing all his time, labor and a good deal of meat on male specimens of the feathered tribe. He says the next time he goes into the poultry business he'll buy a hog.—Peoria Transcript.

The King of Bavaria will probably marry morganatically Frau Kramer Klett, a young and beautiful widow of a Nuremburg carriagemaker.

William Was Stephstrong.

A father at Sedalia, Mo., discovered, a few days ago, that his only daughter was in love with a New York drummer, and that the wedding-day had been set. He had scarcely seen the man, and his consent had neither been asked nor given. He at once put his foot down and demanded:

"What do you know about this man, anyhow?"

"Why, father, he gets a salary of $100 per month and can beat the firm in expense account so as to bring it up to $125. He is just as nice as can be."

"But he may have a wife already. Have you ever asked the question?"

"I never thought of it."

"Well, I've heard he had one at St. Joseph, and I'm going to see. No man can play bigamy on my family if this court knows herself."

In due time he reached St. Joseph and began his inquiries, and in a few hours was directed to a woman who acknowledged she was Mrs. Blank.

"Married for sure, and got a certificate?" he asked.

"O yes. We have been married most a year."

"And do you know that he is engaged to my daughter and wants to marry her next month?"

"No, I did not," was the reply. "I never seek to pry into his affairs."

"Well, I'm telling you facts. The infernal scoundrel wants to marry my daughter! Just think of his cheek!"

"Yes, William was always singular," she remarked.

"Singular! Why, how can you take his conduct so coolly? I expected to see you faint dead away. You don't seem to care much about it."

"Well, to be frank with you," she replied, "William had a wife in Kansas City and another in Chicago when he married me, and I have no right to complain. I think he means well, but is rather headstrong."

"And you won't do anything to prevent this new marriage?"

"I can't under the circumstances, as I have concluded to leave him and marry a Philadelphia drummer and go east with him. I will write to William and advise him not to marry your daughter, but he is very headstrong."

"Great heavens!" gasped the father.

"Please don't. I have a headache, and you might upset my nerves. As I was saying, I will write to him, but I presume you will go home to find that she has already eloped with and married him. William prefers elopements to all other styles, and I presume that was what he wanted of the last $25 I sent him."

The old man rushed to the telegraph office and wired home the inquiry: "Is Mary home?" In about half an hour, as he walked up and down with the sweat gluing his undershirt to his spine, the answer came back:

"Slid with the drummer two hours ago!"—N. Y. Star.

Mexico.

There is little doubt that if the beauty and grandeur of nature are sought by the traveller, the means of enjoyment that he had not suspected are open to him. So constant and so great are the achievements of enterprise that they are almost unobserved by us. Thus a recent address of Colonel Nelson, lately Minister in Mexico, recalls the immense changes in the condition of that country and the facility of reaching it. You may take the train in New York and roll steadily along, and in much less time than our fathers devoted to the journey from Massachusetts to Virginia, you may reach, undisturbed, and in perfect comfort, another zone and civilization, another fauna and flora, a new world. "It is now easy for us," says this modern Marco Polo, "to leave our homes in Indiana in a palace-car, and reach the city of Mexico within a week, and also to visit in the same manner eight or ten of the most interesting cities of the republic."

If it is magnificent scenery that you seek, here at hand, with no intervening ocean, no distant pilgrimage to Alpine valleys or Norwegian fiords, is the railway from Vera Cruz, two hundred and sixty miles, to the city of Mexico—a marvellous feat of scientific skill, crossing the mountains at a height of 8500 feet, and bearing you through every climate, amid unimaginable luxuriance and brilliancy of vegetation, changing into temperate hues of hardier growths, with awful mountain abysses between, and snow-clad peaks beyond against the deep blue sky. This is the land which has seemed to us so long politically, religiously, and socially hopeless, ruined at the very outset by the worst form of human degradation, the old Spanish oppression. But as you are lifted over the mountains, and swept along the teeming valleys and plains with a security, comfort, and speed which are themselves proofs of a radical change in the land, which within the century has doubled its population while it has lost two-thirds of its territory, it is pleasant to hear from Mr. Nelson, who is our authority, that Mexico will now remain a republic, that the injurious clerical influence is gone forever, that the political capacity of the people has been educated to the point of successful control of the situation, and that there is no disturbing question threatening the country.

Mexico was never before shown in a light so rosy. The country of mixed races, of ignorance and superstition, of revolutions and of earthquakes, appears in this reviving view to promise to be indeed a sister republic, and of this happy hope the railway seems to be the spring. These parallel lines of iron and of steel have worked many miracles, of which the United States are the witness. But the wonder of wonders, the greatest triumph of the railroad, will be the regeneration of Mexico.—George William Curtis, in Harper's Magazine for February.

At one of the large retail clothing stores of Washington street an old lady, accompanied by a six-footer of a boy, both fresh from rural parts, appeared. The old lady inquired: "Have yew an ulcer overcoat tew fit this lad?" "Yes, ma'am," replied a pert salesman, "we have ulcers, varioloids, typhoids, and all the fashionable styles." "Dear me," remarked the aged woman, "I think I have made a mistake. Ain't this the General Hospital? Come, Nathan, let us go taw some clothing store." And away they greet to the chagrin of the would-be witty clerk.—Boston Budget.

Male Hysteria.

The medical journals are having a discussion on male hysteria. A correspondent of the Medical and Surgical Reporter gives the following case:

A prominent physician of Paterson, N. J., was arrested a short time since under very curious and amusing circumstances. The physician was summoned to attend a person who was said to be suffering from cramps, and the following is the statement made subsequently to the Police Justice by the patient of the treatment he received: "When the doctor arrived I was on the lounge in great misery. He felt my pulse, and then began to cuff me, first on one side of the head and then on the other. Then he hit me in the eye and knocked me off the lounge and wiped the floor with me. I want him arrested."

"Perhaps it was some sort of treatment the doctor was giving you," suggested Recorder Greaves.

"What! Knock a man on the head and hit him in the eye for a pain at the pit of the stomach? No, I guess not! I want him arrested."

The warrant was after a while issued, and the doctor, on his arrest, made a statement of the affair: "Why," said he, "I found the man suffering from hysteria. His pulse and condition showed that he really had no such cramps as he described. No doubt he thought he had, but it was a purely nervous trouble. I tried to engage his thoughts and get them off the apparent seat of pain, but, being unable to do so in any other way, I had recourse to the old-fashioned method of making him angry; I slapped his cheeks and rubbed his ears. As soon as he got angry he experienced a change of the current of his thought, and the attack of hysteria was over. That ended the pain. That is a frequent remedy in a hypochondriacal attack."

What the result of the arrest was does not appear, but the physician was probably discharged.

Pot Calls Kettle Black.

It is the regulation thing to laugh at an Englishman's accent. A traveler of a statistical turn of mind, who has just been all over this country, asserts that he found at least fifty fully developed dialects. "We smile," he said, "at the Britishers' 'nahsty' and 'cahnt' and forget the 'wa-al' that the Delawarean says when he means 'well.' I fancy it is another case of six versus half a dozen. It is a common occurrence in western towns to say 'kehf' for 'cafe.' 'Keow' for 'cow' happens every day. Well-educated people say 'noo' for 'new.' The affected drawl, which is supposed to be peculiar to the Englishman, can be heard almost anywhere. It is generally used by people making dogmatic statements of whose truth they are not quite certain."—Philadelphia Press.

No, young yachtsman, no: I do not know who invented sea-sickness nor do I know of any preventive, but I am inclined to think you will learn all about it in William Black's work on this subject, entitled "The Beautiful Retch."—Burdette.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $300 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $165 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

The story will be found to thoroughly repay reading. Secure the opening chapters and you will be sure to follow up this capital story.

Peterborough Board of Trade.

A meeting of the defunct Peterborough Board of trade was held in Mr. Wm. Loch's shop yesterday afternoon, as advertised. There were present, Messrs. Wm. Cluxton, President; Adam Hall, T. Menzies, John Erskine, Jas. T. Stenson, members, and Mr. Bannel Sawyer. The sum of $40 50 was reported on hand, having remained in the bank for about eight years without interest. Accounts for advertising the meeting were presented as follows:—EXAMINER, $1.80; Review, $2.40. Mr. Bannel Sawyer urged that the Board should be re-organised. The meeting did not agree with his views. On motion of Mr. Adam Hall, seconded by Mr. Menzies, the balance, after paying the advertising accounts, amounting to $36.30, was ordered to be handed to the Protestant Home. The Board then dissolved.

West Riding Agricultural Society.

A meeting of the West Riding Agricultural Society was held on Wednesday afternoon, all the directors being present except Mr. Strickland, who was attending the Trent Valley Canal meeting. A deputation consisting of the Board of Directors was appointed to confer with the East Riding Agricultural Society to see if an amalgamation of the two Societies could be brought about so as to secure the $600 voted provisionally by the County Council. Mr. W. Hill, owing to pressure of business, resigned the position of Secretary, and received the usual vote of thanks for the services rendered. Mr. D. D. Galletly was appointed to the position of Secretary and Messrs. Garbutt, McWilliams, Vance, McClelland and J. R. Stratton were appointed a committee to draft a basis of amalgamation to submit to the Board of the East Riding. Mr. Vance, who was elected to the position of representative to the Agricultural and Arts Association, thanked the Society for electing him to the position. It was decided to hold the usual spring show for horses and bulls on Saturday the 1st of May. The following amounts contributed last year towards the erection of buildings were omitted from the published list of the President at the last meeting:

Daily Rev.	$5 00	John Craig	$1 00
J. J. Lundy	5 00	Mercer & Co.	1 00
B. Morrow	2 00	H. Rush	1 00

G. W. Rubidge	2 00	Geo. McKee	1 00
A. L. Davis & Co.	2 00	W. J. Morrow	1 00

The meeting then adjourned.

Concert at Lakefield.

A repetition of the concert given in St. Paul's church school room last week by the children of the Hazel Brae Home, assisted by local talent, and under the leadership of Mr. Duff, will be given in the P. C. A. Hall, Lakefield on Tuesday next, February 16th. Mr. E. C. Strickland, Reeve of Lakefield, will occupy the chair.

Severity of Sinners.

The very idea of the appointment of a Chief of Police seems to have had a repressive effect upon the law-breaking element of Peterborough. Not a single [illegible] vag., has taxed the clemency or exercised the judicial functions of His Worship, this week.

Early Closing.

The druggists have unanimously agreed to close their stores each evening at 8 o'clock, commencing on Monday evening, 15th inst., (Saturday excepted). The public are requested to kindly bear this in mind, as the druggists find it very necessary to have a little relaxation from the very late hours to which they have been keeping open their shops.

The Carnival.

The second masquerade carnival of the season which will be given under the auspices of the Fire Brigade Band, on Friday, February 19th, will undoubtedly be the grandest ever held in Peterborough. In addition to the usual evening carnival, there will be one for the children in the afternoon, at which four prizes will be given for the best costumes—two for comic costumes. In the evening a beautiful gold chain and seal will be given for the best representation by a gentntlemen of any of Shakepear's characters. Now is the time to make preparations.

A Pleasant Evening.

All who go to hear Burdette on the 15th of February, Monday next, are sure to say they have spent a pleasant time. His lectures are always appreciated. The Pittsburg Despatch says of his oratorical efforts: "Some of the sentimental passages were literary gems, and the humor came in so unexpectedly, and so unaffectedly natural, as to make it very enjoyable. The lecture was an entertainment which might have been expected from one of the most genial humorists of the age." Get your tickets at Sailsbury's, China Hall, or Taylor & McDonald's. Plan of hall at A. L. Davis & Co's. Admission, 25 and 50 cents.

Social Entertainment.

The social entertainment in aid of the building fund of the proposed St. John's South Ward school room, at the residence of Mrs. Shaw, Stewart Street, yesterday evening, was a very happy event. Although the attendance was not as large as it might have been, a very enjoyable evening was spent and an addition was made to the school fund. During the evening Miss D. Shaw, Messrs. S. Craven, H. B. Carter, C. H. Geale, and W. Blackwell contributed songs and Mr. Hooper gave a reading. Refreshments were served and a social chat indulged in. All who attended enjoyed themselves thoroughly.

The Golden Horseshoe.

This great clothing house will, for the next two weeks, give the biggest kind of bargains in clothing and gentlemen's furnishings. Mr. LeBrun has in contrast with the practice of other dealers, taken stock before holding clearing sale, so that he knows exactly what surplus stock he has, and he has decided to clear it out the next two weeks at tremendous bargains. He is well satisfied with the results of the past year's business as shown by his stock taking, and he feels inclined and will deal generously with his customers. Come and be astonished and enriched with the bargains the Golden Horseshoe will offer for the next fortnight.

The Grandest of the Season.

To-night the grandest concert of the season will be given in the Opera House, under the management of Prof. Doucet. The first piece on the programme is an overture, "Seige of Paris," by an orchestra of twenty instruments, led by Prof. Doucet. Miss Howden and Miss Begley, both charming vocalists, will sing their sweetest songs. Miss Delaney will contribute two piano solos. Little Maud Darcey will give a violin solo. Miss M. Edmison, Miss Hurley, W. Bradburn and Miss A. Edmison will give an instrumental quartette. Mr. Geo. Joseph will sing a couple of comic songs and produce music from a coffee-pot. Mr. R. C. Gardiner, the celebrated New York cornetist, will blow his harmonious horn to the tune of "Sancho Pedro Polka," etc. The concert will conclude with the National Anthem by the grand orchestra. Admission, reserved seats, 35c; back seats, 25c.; gallery, reserved for boys under 16, 15c. Plan of hall at Smart's music store. Doors open at 7.30 o'clock—to commence at 8.

Personal.

Mr. J. R. VanNorman, General Freight Agent of the C. P. R. was in town to-day. He registered at the Grand Central.

Mr. R. H. James, chief agent for Central Ontario, of the Federal Life Assurance Company, Hamilton, is in town in the interest of this company. Mr. G. H. Howson is the Peterborough agent. The representative's card says: "The Hesmans plan offered by this company, gives life insurance in the Simplest and most Perfect Form."

The Massey Strike Over.

Satisfactory Settlement Between the Company and Their Men.

TORONTO, Feb. 11.—Late last night it was learned that the Massey Manufacturing company and their striking employes had settled the differences which caused the trouble on terms satisfactory to all concerned. The men, 200 of whom went out on strike, will resume work Monday morning.

London's Unemployed.

Efforts of the Lord Mayor to Relieve the Prevailing Distress.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—Three hundred unemployed workingmen called upon the Lord Mayor to-day to urge upon him the necessity of doing something to relieve the distress among the unemployed of London. The Lord Mayor courteously received the deputation, and promised to personally assist the distressed people, so far as his means would permit. He added that the Lord Mayor's fund for the relief of the distressed poor of the city, which had been started on Tuesday, already amounted to £6,000.

The Government has caused circulars to be sent to officials throughout the country inquiring into the extent of the distress existing among the working people out of employment, and inviting suggestions as to the best measures for the relief of the sufferers.

The movement for the relief of unemployed workingmen stimulated by the success in in London is spreading to the provincial towns.

Two thousand rations and a large quantity of clothing are distributed in Glasgow daily. That the existence of the distress is owing to the severity of the winter is undisputed.

Hugh C. Childers, the Home Secretary, assured a deputation of tradesmen who waited upon him to-day, that efficient measures would be taken to secure order and restore public confidence.

Northwest Winter Ploughing.

THE Canadian Northwest has a greater range of temperature than any portion of the Dominion. According to the Winnipeg Free Press, the lowest temperature on Wednesday of last week, as recorded at St. John's College, was 41.6° below zero. On Saturday it was 37° above—a range of 78.6° in three days. It would seem that Winnipeg is not beyond the influence of the Chinook. The change at Medicine Hat was even greater. On Wednesday the thermometer registered 30° below zero, on Monday, according to our despatches the farmers had begun to plough!

Toronto Topics.

TORONTO, Feb, 11.—A painful accident occurred at Half-Mile Hill, near the Necropolis, last night. Three ladies and three gentlemen were going down the hill on a bob-sleigh and did not, in the darkness observe, till too late, a waggon coming up the hill towards them. To save themselves they ran the sleigh against a post, all escaping with slight injuries except a young lady, Tillie Henderson who had her leg broken at the thigh.

David Kelly, Claremont street, was charged at the police court this morning with endeavoring, while drunk, to roast one of his children alive at 1 o'clock this morning. His wife succeeded in wresting the child from him, and he then chased her and the other children out of the house and kept them in the street till a policemen appeared on the scene and arrested him. He was remanded till morning.

Ottawa Intelligence.

OTTAWA, Feb. 11.—A son of Mr. Joliffe, Classical Master in the Collegiate Institute here, was run over by a sleigh yesterday and killed.

It is remarked that there is a strong similarity between the labor riots which have lately taken place in England, and the demonstrations which were got up here in 1877 and 1878 by Mr. C. H. Mackintosh and others with the view of annoying and embarrassing the Mackenzie Government. There is more distress in Ottawa now than there was in the year mentioned, but the disturbers are now fattening at the public crib and we have no "demonstrations." In 1878 the Tories proclaimed that it was the duty of the Government to spend public money providing work for the unemployed laborers, but now they only carry out their professed policy so far as laborers of Quebec are concerned. Unemployed workingmen of other places must take care of themselves. The Tory organ here, acting no doubt under Sir John Macdonald's instructions, has also raised the "bloody shirt," hoping to excite prejudice against the Reform party in Ontario while its masters are trying to purchase political support in Quebec with public money. In a few weeks, however, Sir John and his organs will be crouching before the French Canadians, apologizing for not falling in with their every request.

Lakefield.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The second masquerade carnival of the season took place at the skating rink here, on the evening of Tuesday, the 9th inst., and was in every respect a great success. The ice was in good condition. The rink was very tastefully decorated with evergreens, mottoes, chinese lanterns, etc. Masquerades in great numbers and varied costumes, glided over the smooth surface in grotesque and fantastic shapes and forms. Everybody, both skaters and audience seemed well pleased and enjoying themselves. There were many Peterborough skaters present. The success of the carnival was greatly due to the untiring energy and accomodating spirit of the popular manager, Mr. B. M. Eden, and we hope that this may not be the last of these entertainments. Owing to quite a number neglecting to hand in their cards, we cannot give the complete list of those in costumes:

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 30th, 1885.

GENTLEMEN.—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, I looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two spring-less trusses made in York State, costing me $40. Nothing would retain my Hernia. I have worn your Truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down. It holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. B. KING.

This new Spiral Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child sure; and 80 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. CARD OF THANKS.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim.

t the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance,

THE MARRIAGE RING.

Dr. Talmage Talks About a "Husband and Wife in Harmony or Out of Tune."

Practical Suggestions on the Art of Making Home Happy.

(Concluded from Yesterday.)

I advise, also, that you make your chief pleasure circle around that home. It is unfortunate when it is otherwise. If the husband spend the most of the nights away from home, of choice and not of necessity, he is not the head of the household; he is only the cashire. If the wife throw the cares of the household in the servant's lap and spend five nights of the week at the opera or theater, she may clothe her children with satins and laces and ribbons that would confound a French milliner, but they are orphans. Oh, it is sad when a child has no one because mother has gone off to the evening entertainment! In India they bring children and throw them to the crocodiles, and it seems very cruel, but the jaws of New York and Brooklyn dissipation are swallowing down more little children to-day than all the monsters that ever crawled up the banks of the Ganges.

TO SAY ITS PRAYERS TO

I have seen the sorrow of a godless mother on the death of a child she had neglected. It was not so much grief that she felt from the fact that the child was dead as the fact that she had neglected it. She said: "If I had only watched over and cared for the child I knew God would not have taken it." The tears came not; it was a dry, blistering tempest—a scorching simoon of the desert When she wrung her hands it seemed as if she would twist her fingers from their sockets; when she seized her hair it seemed as if she had, in wild terror, grasped a coiling serpent with her right hand. No tears! Comrades of the little one came in and wept over the coffin; neighbors came in, and the moment they saw the still face of the child, the shower broke. No tears for her. God gives tears as the summer rain to the parched soil; but in all the universe the driest and hottest, the most scorching and consuming thing is a mother's heart if she neglected her child, when once it is dead. God may forgive her, but she will never forgive herself. The memory will sink the eyes deeper into their sockets, and pinch the face, and whiten the hair, and eat up the heart with vultures that will not be satisfied, forever plunging deeper their iron beaks. Oh, you wanderers from your home, go back to your duty! The brightest flowers in all the earth are those which grow in the garden of a Christian household, clambering over the porch of a Christian home.

I advise you also to cultivate sympathy of occupation. Sir James Mackintosh, one of the most eminent and elegant men that ever lived, while standing at the very height of his eminence, said to a great company of scholars, "My wife made me." The wife ought in every firm. She ought to be interested in all the losses and gains of shop and store. She ought to have a right—she has a right—to know everything. If a man goes into a business transaction that he dare not tell his wife of, you may depend that he is on the way either to bankruptcy or moral ruin. There may be some things which he does not wish to trouble his wife with, but if he dare not tell her, he is on the road to discomfiture. On the other hand, the husband ought to be sympathetic with the wife's occupation. It is no easy thing to keep house. Many a woman that could have endured martyrdom as well as Margaret, the Scotch girl, has actually been worn out by house management. There are a thousand martyrs of the kitchen. It is very annoying, after the vexations of the day, around the stove or the table, or in the nursery or parlor, to have your husband say, "You know nothing about trouble; you ought to be in the store half an hour." Sympathy of occupation! If the husband's work cover him with the soot of the furnace, or the odors of leather or soap factories, let not the wife be easily disgusted at the begrimed hands or unsavory aroma. Your gains are one, your interests are one, your losses are one; lay hold of the work of life with both hands. Four hands to fight the battles; four eyes to watch for the danger; four shoulders on which to carry the trials. It is a very sad thing when a painter has a wife who does not like pictures. It is a very sad thing for a pianist when she has a husband who does not like music. It is a very sad thing when a wife is not suited unless her husband has what is called a "genteel business." So far as I understand a "genteel business," it is something to which a man goes at ten o'clock in the morning, and from which he comes home at two or three in the afternoon, and gets a large amount of money for doing nothing. That is, I believe, a "genteel business;" and there has been many a wife who has made the mistake of not being satisfied until the husband has or the turning of the banisters, or the building of the walls, and put himself in circles where he has nothing to do but smoke cigars, and drink wine, and get himself into habits that upset him, going down in the maelstrom, taking his wife and children with him. There are a good many trains running from earth to destruction. They start all the hours of the day, and all the hours of the night. There are the freight trains; they go very slowly and very heavily; and there are the accommodation trains going on to destruction, and they stop very often and let a man get out when he wants to. But genteel idleness is an express train; Satan is the stoker and Death is the engineer; and though one may come out in front of it and swing the red flag of "danger" or the lantern of God's word, it makes just one shot into perdition, coming down the embankment with a shout and a wail, and a shriek—crush, crush. There are two classes of people certain of destruction: first, those who have nothing to do; secondly, those who have something to do, but are too lazy and too proud to do it.

I have one more word of advice to give to those who would have a happy home, and that is, let love preside in it. When your behavior in the domestic circle becomes a mere matter of calculation; when the caress you give is merely the result of deliberate study of the position you occupy, happiness lies dead on the hearthstone. When the husband's position as head of the household is maintained by loudness of voice, by strength of arm, by fire of temper, the republic of domestic bliss has become a despotism that neither God nor man will abide. Oh, ye who promised to love each other at the altar, how dare you commit perjury? Let no shadows of suspicion come on your affection. It is easier to kill that flower then it is to make it live again. The blast from hell that puts out that light leaves you in the blackness of darkness forever.

Here are a man and wife,

THEY AGREE IN NOTHING ELSE,

but they agree they will have a home. They will have a splendid house, and they think that if they have a house they will have a home. Architects make the plan and the mechanics execute it; the house to cost $100,000. It is done. The carpets are spread; lights are hoisted; curtains are hung; cards of invitation are sent out. The horses in gold-plated harness prance at the gate; guests come in and take their places; the flute sounds; the dancers go up and down; and with one grand whirl the wealth and the fashion and the mirth of the great town wheel amidst the pictured walls. Ha, this is happiness. Float it on the smoking viands; sound it in the music; whirl it in the dance; cast it on the show of sculpture; sound it up the brilliant stairway; flash it in the chandeliers. Happiness, indeed. Let us build on the centre of the parlor floor a throne to happiness; let all the guests, who come in, bring their flowers, and pearls, and diamonds, and throw them on this pyramid, and let it be a throne, and then let Happiness, the queen, mount the throne, and we will stand around, and, all chalices lifted, we will say, "Drink, O queen, live forever." But the guests depart, the flutes are breathless, the last clash of the impatient hoofs, is heard in the distance, and the twain of the household come back to see the Queen of Happiness on the throne amidst the parlor floor. But, alas, as they come back, the flowers have faded, the sweet odors have become the smell of the charnel house, and instead of the Queen of Happiness there sits there the gaunt form of Anguish, with bitten lip and sunken eye, and ashes in her hair. The romp of the dancers who have left seems rumbling yet, like jarring thunders that quake the door and rattle the glasses of the feast, rim to rim. The spilled wine on the floor turns into blood. The wreaths of plush

HAVE BECOME WRIGGLING REPTILES.

Terrors catch tangled in the canopy that overhangs the couch. A strong gust of wind comes through the hall and the drawing-room and the bedchamber, in which all the lights go out. And from the lips of the wine-beakers come the words, "Happiness is not in us." And the arches respond, "It is not in us." And the silenced instruments of music, thrummed on with invisible fingers, answer, "Happiness is not in us." And the frozen lips of Anguish break open, and seated on the throne of wilted flowers, she strikes her bony hands together and groans, "It is not in me."

That very night a clerk with a salary of a thousand dollars a year—only one thousand—goes to his home, set up three months ago, just after the marriage day. Love meets him at the door; love sits with him at the table; love talks over the work of the day; love takes down the Bible, and reads of Him who came our souls to save, and they kneel, and while they are kneeling right in that plain room, on that plain carpet—the angels of God build a throne, not out of flowers that perish and fade away, but out of garlands of heaven, wreath on top of wreath, amaranth on amaranth, until the throne is done. Then the harps of God sounded, and suddenly there appeared one who mounted the throne, with eye so bright and brow so fair that the twain knew it was Christian love. And they knelt at the throne, and, putting one hand on each head, she blessed them and said, "Happiness is with me." And that throne of celestial bloom withered not with the passing years; and the queen left not the throne until one day the married pair felt stricken in years—felt themselves called away, and knew not which way to go, and the queen bounded from the throne and said: "Follow me, and I will show you the way up to the realm of everlasting love." And so they went up to sing songs of love, and walk on pavements of love., and to live together in mansions of love, and to rejoice forever in the truth that God is love.

Minority Rights.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—John Morley, chief secretary for Ireland, speaking at Newcastle last night said he would never propose that military garrisons be removed from Ireland nor allow the interests of the minority to be placed at the mercy of the majority. Whatever the Government proposed to do would be submitted to the full blaze of public criticism.

Treasure Shipped to China.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 12.—The annual report of the Chamber of Commerce shows over ten million dollars treasure have been shipped to China during the past year from this port in excess of the amount remitted in payment of the balance of trade against the port, which amounted to $2,3000,000 during 1884.

I had so much demand for Giles' Liniment Iodide of Ammonia, and people who were benefited spoke so much in its praise, that I was induced to write the Doctor for a supply. I was delighted; it made cures in the family and in the stables, and no article that I ever handled gave such universal satisfaction. GEORGE W. BERRIUM, Georgetown, Del. Sold by J. McKee. w5-d32eod

A Most Successful Concert.

The concert given in Bradburn's Opera House last night was a great success. To begin with, there was a full house, in which the best citizens of the town were abundantly represented. A first-class programme was presented in a very creditable manner, and its hearty appreciation may be judged of, when it is stated that every number except one or one or two was encored and repeated. The orchestra, composed of local talent, performed the first overture, the "Siege of Paris," very creditably indeed. The singing was of the highest order. Miss Annie Howden presented her two numbers in a very excellent manner, and Miss Annie Delaney though successful in her vocal numbers was triumphantly so in her piano [illegible] herself admirably. Mr. Joseph's coffee pot solos and character songs were loudly applauded and he was repeated recalled. Mr. Gardener's cornet solos were most acceptably rendered. But the chief interest centred in the violin performances of Mr. Doucet's pupils, and, to say that they acquitted themselves admirably, is faint praise. Little Maud Darcy, who, by the way, is is scarcely taller than a full-grown fiddle, brought down the house with her capital playing of Winner's "Sun light Waltz." Her time, bowing and general performance was worthy of all praise. Equally successful was the quartette, three violins and piano, by Misses. M. Edmiston, Hurley and W. Bradburn, Miss Edmiston, piano. The selection rendered was Mozart's Twelfth Mass, and it was artistically done, especially when it is considered the performers have been under Prof. Doucet's tuition for twelve months and less. The success achieved by the violinists reflects great credit upon Prof. Doucet's capabilities as a careful and painstaking instructor. Altogether the concert was a pronounced success, exceedingly praiseworthy to its promoter Prof. Doucet, who takes this opportunity of thanking the public, who so liberally patronized his first concert.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Fifth Parliament—Third Session.

THURSDAY, FEB. 11th.

Several bills were given their first readings.

Hon. Mr. Fraser introduced a bill to amend the law respecting compensation for persons killed by accidents, by authorizing those beneficially entitled to compensation to bring the action and also to supply lack of machinery for enforcement.

Mr. Graham's motion for a return of the number of Farmers' Institutes held, provoked a lively discussion, in which some dozen members, both Liberal and Opposition, warmly commended the wisdom of the Government in establishing these institutes, and bore testimony to the great benefit they had been to the farmers.

Mr. Carnegie moved for a return showing the names of all persons who were at any time members of the house, or of either branch of the legislature of Canada, who have been appointed by the government of Ontario since 1st January, 1872, to any office, commission or employment, and showing the nature of the appointment or appointments, the date of each, and the emolument, if any, derivable from any source in respect of each such appointment.

Mr. Carnegie prefaced his motion by an attack on the Government in connection with the employment in various Government services of Mr. Irwin, Q. C., Mr. Thomas Hoggins, Q.C., and Hon. David Mills, and of the Government action in reference to various appointments to office. The ground of attack was based on a motion moved by Mr. Blake, when leader of the Opposition in the Legislature, protesting against the appointment to office of members of the House. The chief point sought to be made by Mr. Carnegie was that the Provincial patronage was used to promote the interests of Mr. Blake and the Opposition in the House of Commons.

Mr. H. P. O'Connor mad a rattling speech in reply. He showed how ill the charge of an alliance between the Ontario Government and the Dominion Opposition came from one of Mr. Meredith's supporters. He pointed out that the whole policy of the Opposition was dictated from Ottawa; that Mr. Meredith could not move without the consent of Sir. John Macdonald; and that Riel's coffin was dragged into the Assembly under direct and peremptory orders from Ottawa. He moved in amendment to Mr. Carnegie's motion that the return asked for also include the names of all appointed to office by the Dominion Government within the time and under the conditions mentioned. This threw the Opposition into consternation, but as they could offer no reasonable objection to the proposed addition they had to put the best possible face on the matter and consent to the bringing down of a return which must be the means of resurrecting some peculiar transactions entered into by their friends at Ottawa.

Mr. Hardy roused the enthusiasm of the Government supporters, when he told Mr. Carnegie that when this Government was found distributing the resources of the Province among its supporters, he would have ground for a grave accusation. The Liberals took the point instantly, and made the chamber ring with applause. The allies of the timber and land grabbers entered their customary protest in the shape of a noisy interruption, but it was apparent that they felt and winced beneath the force of the implied comparison.

Mr. Carnegie's motion was of service in showing that throughout the whole history of the Mowat Government it has never been charged with the purchase or attempted purchase of a supporter. The path of the present Dominion Government from the very day it accepted office is white with the bones of destroyed reputations. Two-thirds of Sir John Macdonald's present supporters in Parliament have been bought with the property of the people of Canada. No wonder Mr. Meredith's supporters sadden at the comparison.

The motion as amended was agreed to.

The Provincial Treasurer promised that he would make his financial statement next week, and Thursday will probably be the great field day.

OUR "INDUSTRIOUS" MEMBER.

"Some are born great, some achieve greatness, some have greatness thrust upon them," but the "indefatigable" member for West Peterborough digs for greatness, and he does not consider it infra dig to do so either. His strong point is not legislative originality, and he resorts to digging amongst the records of the House to arrive at—not any important or beneficial results, but to secure a spurious reputation for industry, and to unearth, perchance, something that will tell "agin the Government." No member in the present House, nor of any previous House, nor in any possible future House, has had or can have the in ordinately omnivorous appetite for returns, which the member for West Peterborough possesses This appetite must feed upon itself, for as yet, it has found nothing in the returns, so eagerly sought for, which could possibly sharpen its edge. During the whole course of the present Parliament, Mr. Carnegie has been firing off, on the "load and fire at will" principle, motion after motion for returns, and, to any less "industrious" and presistent delver after governmental shortcomings, the result would be disheartening. He has kept the whole civil service staff sweaty with research, and dusty with burrowing amongst old records, yet he has discovered next to nothing. Yes; he did make one astounding discovery. He brought to light the damaging fact that great extravagance reigned in the Colonization Road expenditure. One gang on a certain colonization road, ran out of tea, and five pounds were purchased on the spot, at a few cents advance per pound on the wholesale price, at which it could have been bought in Toronto. Only that and nothing more. The thousands of dollars expense which has been incurred by Mr. Carnegie's motions for returns, has amounted to nothing further. The Tory journals are complaining of the length of the session, and of the cost of legislation. This latter the Mail estimates at $5,000 per day. Taking the organ's figures, Mr. Carnegie spent during the past two sessions, some $50,000 in trying to fix a grievance against the government on the single item of the management of the Agricultural College, and, at the pace he has struck this session, his "industry" will cost the country something in the neighborhood of $100,000. Nobody objects to the freest and fullest inquiry, or to the production of the fullest possible information, but the country does object to frivolous, and, as far as the public interests are concerned, objectless, meaningless and fruitless motions for returns. Mr. Carnegie's motions for returns do not involve the eliciting of any information that can assist in the intelligent discussion of any question before the House, actually or prospectively. In that case they would be justifiable, but they are for the pure purpose of serving his personal ends and of manufacturing political capital. The member for West Peterborough has been selected by the Opposition for a style of work which no other self-respecting member would undertake. He fills the place exactly. He was not thought worthy of a place in the Cabinet which Messrs. Meredith, Buntin, Meek, Williamson and Shields were to form on the ruins of the Mowat administration, and he has been cast for a role he is better fitted to play—a grumbling grubber after grievances. The member for West Peterborough is wasting the public funds for the double purpose of winning notoriety for himself—of gaining a counterfeit reputation for industry and shrewdness—and of unearthing something that can tell against the administrative methods of the Mowat Government. So far he has signally failed in the latter respect. He has not been able to bring a single instance of malfeasance or crooked dealing to light and his prospects for future success are as hopeless as his past efforts have been futile. He has failed to "strike oil," and, to borrow a metaphor of the late lamented Josh Billings, Mr. Carnegie "is either boring in the wrong place or he has a mighty poor auger."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Tory reaction in Britain rolls on. Three more bye-elections have taken place. The first of Attorney-General Russell, (Lib.) for South Hackney, and the second of Capt. O'Shea, (Liberal Home Ruler) for Galway city; and the third of O'Brien, (Home Ruler) for North Monaghan. There have been over a dozen bye-elections already so far, and the Tories have held two seats and not gained one.

History in a Nut Shell.

In an age like the present when everybody is in a hurry and time counts a desideratum for the busy man of whatever calling, is a good reference book of general history. Such a work is Prof. John Clark Ridpath's Cyclopaidia of Universal History which we purchased last week. It is comprehensive, as its title implies, covering the whole field of the world's history from the dawn of civilization in the great river valleys of the East, 4000 B. C., down almost to yesterday, and at the same time it is concise, presenting in paragraphs, what in the more ponderous works like Gibbon Knight or Bancroft is spread out over pages.

In its authorship it is radically different from other so called universal histories.

This work is not a mere compilation hastily made with paste pot and scissors by some hack writer of little reputation and less knowledge of his subject, but is carefully and graphically written by a competent historian, who brings to his task a ripe scholarship, a life-long study of history, many years' experience in teaching history and rare abilities as a writer. As a natural consequence, we find the work scientific in its method, systematic in its arrangement, scholarly in its treatment of events, showing their causes and sequences, as well as setting the events themselves be- [illegible] statements and impartial in its tone. While the work is so carefully and fully indexed that it possesses all the advantages of the ordinary cyclopaedia, the history of the various countries treated, is not broken up into fragments but is presented as a continuous narrative, thereby pressing and interest and a unity that the strict cyclopaedia lacks. The work is comprised in three Imperial Octavo volumes of over 800 pages each. Vol. I deals with the Ancient World. Vol. II with the Mediæval World, while Vol. III is devoted to modern affairs, the fruition of the past.

The diction of the author is remarkably pleasing. Throughout the work so copious free is his vocabulary and so well chosen his phraseology that the narative is pregnant with interest, even in those parts usually considered dull and dry, while the work abound s with descriptive passages, personal sketches and even whole chapters which cannot but be read with enthusiasm. Scattered throughout the work are more than 1,200 engravings on wood and steel, accurate in design and very superior in execution, which, not only possess a rare attractiveness in themselves, but light up the text with a clearer meaning and a fresher zest. These engravings make this preminently a book for the home, causing as they do a complete panorama of the world's history to pass before the eye of the beholder, they cannot fail to impress the minds of the young and quicken an interest in that "knowledge of the past" which Ruskin has well said "is the best inheritance of mankind."

Besides the engravings the work is illustrated with nearly 100 maps charts and diagram, of rare excellence. The volumes are bound not only handsomly, but so strongly as to promise durability for a life time, while the materials used in its construction are of the best. It is a handsome ornament for any table as well as a store house of information for young and old. It is seldom that one sees so good a book. Canadian Publishers,

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every house-owner, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $100 to $200 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through subagents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in

A MAID FORLORN.

BY THE DUCHESS.

CHAPTER I.

"But, what will your uncle say?" asks Mrs. Rivers, nervously.

"My uncle will say just what the Major says," replies Ronnie, shrugging her shoulders.

"Wouldn't it be a comfort if the Major died?" says Cecil, from her low chair in the chimney-corner—her own special corner, in every house wherein she may go. As she makes this charitable speech, she sighs profoundly.

"My dear," says her mother in a tone that is meant to be full of rebuke, but is only fond.

"Well, I know that," returns Miss Cecil, saucily; "I am perfectly aware that I am dear to you. What's the good of telling me the same thing over and over again? Only that it would be naughty to one's own sweet mother, I would give you a pinch for stale news."

"I suppose even Uncle Gregory can't expect us to live in London all the year round," remarks Ronnie, a frown darkening her pretty little baby face. It is the funniest little frown, and certainly has no right whatever to be in its present resting-place. "I suppose he can't control our every action."

"He can, however, keep us comfortable or reduce us to absolute want—at least, to something very near it," answers Mrs. Rivers, in a trembling tone.

"My mind is made up," says Cecil, lightly. "Rather than be reduced to absolute want, I shall marry a marquis—a duke even—if need be. Let nobody try to dissuade me; I shall do it, or die."

"Then, I'm afraid you will die," returns Ronnie, who is the least bit of a cynic.

"You sha'n't discourage me," says Cissy, gayly. "Even down in the 'deserted village,' where you and mother are bent on burying yourselves, I dare say I shall meet my fairy prince."

"I hope he will be a prince worthy of you!" says Mrs. Rivers, somewhat wistfully gazing at the lovely face smiling up at her from the chimney-corner, out of its tangle of golden hair.

"You hope for too much," replies the owner of the golden locks merrily. "The prince was never yet born, I am convinced, who would be worthy of such peerless charms as mine."

"But really, mamma, when we are all so tired of town life, why should we not go into the country, and especially to this pretty place the Freres have written to us about?" asks Ronnie.

"I am sure Uncle Gregory ought to think better of us, for preferring the dullness of a country life to all the glittering dissipations of the town," observes Cecil laughing.

"Your uncle likes nothing he doesn't suggest himself," says Mrs. Rivers.

"Then make him suggest it. Let us go to him in a body and tell him how we are enjoying ourselves here, and ten to one but he will order us into solitary confinement, without delay. He is such a perverse old dear."

"Cecil, you talk too much," murmurs her mother, mildly.

"I'm like the brook," says Cecil, unabashed; "I go on forever. After all, I am better than a stupid girl who can't talk at all. Ronnie, how silent you are! Don't you like this country scheme?"

"Yes," returns Ronnie, very deliberately. "It is my greatest desire to leave town forthwith."

As she says this, her mother raises her soft eyes and regards her curiously—nay, indeed, sadly. But Ronnie's face, whatever she herself may be thinking, is stanch to her, and betrays nothing.

"Yes, yes—country air will be good for us all," says Mrs. Rivers, hastily. "It must be arranged. I wish the Major could be brought to speak to your uncle about it."

"If you mean that I am to conciliate, and play up to the Major, I simply sha'n't," answers Cecil, with a vicious little nod. "I detest him. It is my belief he wants to marry that daughter of his—Maria, to Uncle Gregory!"

"Oh, no!" says Ronnie, quickly. "He only lives in the fond hope that Uncle Gregory, growing disgusted with us and our frivolities, will leave Maria the bulk of his property; but I know he intends her to marry a much younger man. Lady Marsden told me all about it the other day. It did not interest me, so I have forgotten the minor details, such as names and places. But I know this young man has been abroad for years; that he has a tremendous amount of money; that he lives somewhere in the country, in a house beautiful as a dream; and that the Major was a friend of his father's, and has been a sort of agent over his estate for years."

"You remember a great deal considering your want of interest," observes Cissy. "Well, if it comes off, I wish this poor young man joy of Maria!"

"This poor young man, as you call him, will probably not marry to order. But the Major has quite made up his mind to it; and he is a man of many resources."

"How I should like to frustrate Maria!" exclaims Cecil. "If ever I meet this misguided youth she intends claiming as her own, I shall make violent love to him."

"Cecil!" says Mrs. Rivers again.

"Well, then, I shall let him make violent love to me. Is that better?"

"It is not amiable either way. I am sure, darling, you would not like to interfere with any other girl's lover."

"Well, fortunately, I can't," says Miss Cecil, in a tone of resignation, "as I have made up my mind to marry a duke. Therefore this excellent young squire will be beneath my notice."

"I think we had better go and speak to your Uncle Gregory about this move," remarks Mrs. Rivers, presently. "You will both come with me, girls?"

This is said so hopefully that neither girl can find it in her heart to refuse.

"Oh, yes, of course, dearest!" replies Ronnie.

"Well, I do hope, mamma, he will not be primed and loaded with evil thoughts of us this time," says Cecil. "Do you remember our last visit—how he stormed and raved until Ronnie and you were nearly in tears, and I was in a wicked rage? And all about a very innocent little trip to the Kensington Museum with Sir Sydney Walcott?"

"I remember," answers Mrs. Rivers.

Ronnie grows a shade paler, and beats her fingers impatiently against the edge of the table near her.

"He is burdened with a terrible sense of propriety," she observes, after a moment or two. "He is a male prude. And the Major is always telling him stories about us in the hope that Maria may be preferred to us at last. You know she is some sort of distant connection, and might be easily magnified into a second cousin with a claim to any loose money that might be going."

"I shall fall upon Maria some day, and rend her in pieces," says Cecil. "I shall, indeed, mamma. There is little use in appealing to what you are pleased to call 'my better self.'"

"Let us go and see Uncle Gregory today, and speak to him, and get it over," says Ronnie, decisively.

"Yes, do let us," cries Cecil

And so it is arranged.

About five years before, the Honorable Mrs. Rivers had been left a widow, with two little girls and inconsiderable fortune. When only seventeen she had married the younger son of an impecunious earl, and, therefore, on her husband's death, found herself possessed of few worldly goods beyond her pension and a small sum bequeathed to her by a maiden aunt. Her uncle, Sir Gregory Growle—an old bachelor holding eccentric views of life generally, and the possessor of a large fortune that had been amassed in India—had come to her rescue, and, though a crotchety, disagreeable old fellow in many ways, had settled upon her a rather handsome allowance, to be continued or discontinued at his good pleasure.

This allowance, however, was imbittered to her by sundry scoldings, delivered at odd intervals, and much uncalled for advice about "the girls," who, as they grew up, were frequently declared by their granduncle to be too much for their mother, who plainly did not go the right way to control them. He furthermore gave it as his opinion that they ought to be kept in subjection.

All these hints and innuendoes did not help to endear Sir Gregory to his grandnieces, though there was still another person, who, if possible, was more objectionable in their sight. This was an old friend of their uncle's—a swarthy Anglo-Indian, named Major Jervis, about sixty years of age. He had been a so-called friend indeed of the whole family for many years, and under that name had managed to make himself particularly obnoxous both to Ronnie and Cecil Rivers, who had taken little pains to disguise their dislike, and, by chilling replies and remarks, which sometimes bordered upon impertinence, had let him know what they thought of him. These signs and tokens of ill-will had of course been noticed by the Major, and treasured up in his memory, to be repaid fourfold should occasion offer. He had one daughter, a certain Maria Louisa, on whom he had centered all his ambitious hopes. She was tolerably good-looking, and to marry her to rank and wealth, or even wealth without the rank, was the dream of the Major's life.

Just at this time he had for her in his mind a partie unexceptionable in every respect, and only awaited the opportunity to throw her in his way. Maria Louisa, who was well known to the Rivers girls, was very distasteful to them, principally perhaps because they attributed to her father the meanness of retailing to their Uncle Gregory all the stories he heard of them—simple stories enough in themselves, but, when distorted and exaggerated, black as Erebus.

To-day, as Mrs. Rivers and her daughters enter the library in the handsome house in Cromwell Road that calls Gregory Growle master, they find their uncle stretched upon a sofa, with one leg well bandaged and a rather sour expression upon his cadaverous countenance.

"Glad you felt it your duty to come to see me, even at the eleventh hour," he says, unpleasantly. "One might be dead and buried for all one's relations would care! Perhaps, indeed, you would prefer seeing me buried. But beware, beware!"

"'Trust her not, she is fooling thee,'" quotes Miss Cecil, in a low tone, to Ronnie, who can hardly suppress a smile.

"Dear uncle," says Mrs. Rivers, who is really distressed, not having heard of his illness, "I had no idea you were laid up again with your old enemy."

She is plainly alluding to the gout, which is a devoted adherent of Uncle Gregory's. Indeed, he is a perfect martyr to it, and it does not help to sweeten his temper.

"If we had known of it, the girls and I would have been here long ago to inquire after you," she continues, in a conciliatory tone.

"That may or may not be," returns Uncle Gregory, uncompromisingly, though somewhat appeased by her gentleness; "I only know you never did come. Well—eh! And what news, eh?"

He is, as every one knows, the most notorious old news-monger in town, and is just now utterly disheartened because he can not attend his club, where the choicest morceaux of scandal are disseminated daily.

"Very little news anywhere just at present," answers Mrs. Rivers, absently. She is anxiously wondering how she shall bring in the subject of the country scheme.

"I hope you have not been letting those girls out again without yourself," says Uncle Gregory, irascibly. "I heard about that Kensington trip from Major Jervis, who saw them there. Wrong, very wrong, my dear Elinor; young women should never be allowed to go anywhere without their mother or guardian."

"Sir Sydney Walcott is such an old friend," responds Mrs. Rivers, nervously, "that I thought they might safely go with him."

"Oh, fool! Seven-and-twenty, I suppose! A boy indeed! And no doubt dissipated too."

Ronnie's eyes flash fire.

"The present generation," pursues Sir Gregory, "knows no boys. They are all grown up from their cradles; and girls should not be trusted out of one's sight. You can't be too careful, my dear Elinor."

"I should wish to be careful, of course," says poor Mrs. Rivers, in a depressed tone.

"Then make Sir Sydney discontinue his visits. I hear from a certain quarter how frequent they are."

At this Ronnie grows pale, and, lifting her blue eyes, fixes them beseechingly upon her mother. Her mother, though she refuses to meet her glance, still feels deeply for her.

"I think any young man who keeps philandering after two girls for months together, without coming to the point—you see, I know everything, my dear Elinor—should be summarily dealt with. I have heard a good deal, and I think Sir Sydney should get his conge. If he is not going to marry the girls, he ought to be forbidden at the house."

"He can't well marry us both, poor soul!" remarks Cecil, demurely. "The law forbids."

"Eh? Eh?" says Uncle Gregory, irritably.

"At all events, he certainly can't marry me," Cecil goes on, suavely, in spite of a warning glance from her mother, which she pretends not to see. "Because the duke wouldn't hear of it!"

"The duke! What duke?" demands old Sir Gregory, raising himself from his recumbent position, to stare blankly at her.

"My duke," replies Cecil, boldly, though her eyes are sparkling with laughter. "Didn't you know of it? I have made up my mind at last, and nothing under strawberry-leaves will content me!"

"It is only Cecil's nonsense," says Mrs. Rivers, in an agony.

Her dearest Cecil, she tells herself, is so inconsiderate, and so thoughtless; and if the old man should be offended—

But the old man is not offended. On the contrary—strange to say—he is amused, and gives way to a prolonged chuckle.

"Eh? Eh?" he says again. This is his favorite ejaculation. "So you are flying high, are you? Well, I wish you luck. But"—with a relapse into his former tartness, and a glance at Ronnie, who is sitting calm and pallid as an early snowdrop—"don't have your duke dangling after you for months, making you a laughing-stock for all your friends."

Ronnie sighs, and grows even a shade paler. Her mother, seeing this, turns hastily to Sir Gregory.

"I agree with you," she says, though the words almost choke her. "And to prevent any further nonsense of the sort you speak of I think of taking the children"—they are always children to her—"down into the quiet country, that is, if you approve of the move."

"To the country?" repeats Uncle Gregory, taken aback. Then he tells himself she has taken to heart his advice about avoiding the sullying influence of town-life, and he is flattered.

"Well, I'm sure I'm glad you have at last determined to act on my suggestion," he says, in a gratified tone. "Come to me again to-morrow, and we shall see what can be done about your removal into the country. You are a very sensible woman, Elinor—very sensible indeed."

By which they know he will put no obstacle in the way of their going to the new abode on which they have so set their hearts.

* * * * * *

That night as Ronnie and Cecil are brushing their hair, preparatory to going to bed, Cecil, turning suddenly to her elder sister, lays down her brush, and places her arm around her.

"Dearest," she says tenderly, "how is it you want to leave town now, just when he has returned home again?"

"You mean Sir Sydney Walcott, I suppose?" answers Ronnie, in trembling accents. "I leave town, because—because I want to test him. It is all quite true what they say. He has been coming here for months and months, as you know, and yet he has not spoken to me about—He has not"—with a violent effort—"asked me to marry him!"

"And what of that?" says Cecil, valiantly, patting her shoulder, with a reassuring touch. "He will ask you some day, I know very well."

"And, in the meantime, I am to be a laughing-stock to my friends," returns Ronnie, bitterly.

"Don't mind that cross old man, darling; such a speech as that only meant an additional twinge of gout,"

"Nevertheless, I shall be glad to leave town; I can not bear it longer," says Ronnie, earnestly. "If he honestly loves me, he will follow me to Branksmere; if not—well, then, if not"—with a little heart-broken sob, "I shall know he never loved me at all."

"You will never know that," is the consoling answer—"never. He will follow you, he shows you. Trust it—I know it."

Early Closing.

The druggists have unanimously agreed to close their stores each evening at 8 o'clock, commencing on Monday evening, 15th inst., (Saturday excepted). The public are requested to kindly bear this in mind, as the druggists find it very necessary to have a little relaxation from the very late hours to which they have been keeping open their shops.

A Lecture on Labor.

It should be remembered that Rev. Dr. Tiffany, of New York, will lecture in the George street Church on February 23rd. Subject: "Work and its Worth, or the Social Problem of Labor." The lecture should be of special interest at the present time, when socialistic questions are being so vigorously agitated in different parts of the world.

Market Items.

The outside market was almost a blank this morning, probably caused by the rain which fell continually and the poor state of the roads. A few quarters of beef, and a load of apples made up the outside market. The butter and poultry market was more lively. Prices were: chickens 60c. per pair; geese, 50c. to 60c.; turkeys, 80c. to $1.00; butter, in prints, 20c.; eggs, 20c.

Y. M. C. A. Meetings.

All young men will be welcomed at the young men's meeting to-night, from 8 to 9. The subject will be, "The Lower Lights." Matt. v. 14-16, Phil. ii. 15-16. Those in charge of the meeting are Harry Stephens and F. O. Werden. On Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, Frank Hilliard will give a Bible reading on "Abel," assisted by H. Cross and M. Carton. A cordial invitation is given to all young men from 16 years up. M. Cummings and Jno. S. Hall will speak at the song service on Sunday night at 8.30. This service is open to all.

The Carnival.

The second masquerade carnival of the season which will be given under the auspices of the Fire Brigade Band, on Friday, February 19th, will undoubtedly be the grandest ever held in Peterborough. In addition to the usual evening carnival, there will be one for the children in the afternoon, at which four prizes will be given for the best costumes—two for comic costumes. In the evening a beautiful gold chain and seal will be given for the best representation by a gentlemen of any of Shakespear's characters. Now is the time to make preparations.

The Golden Horseshoe.

This great clothing house will, for the next two weeks, give the biggest kind of bargains in clothing and gentlemen's furnishings. Mr. LeBrun has in contrast with the practice of other dealers, taken stock before holding clearing sale, so that he knows exactly what surplus stock he has, and he has decided to clear it out the next two weeks at tremendous bargains. He is well satisfied with the results of the past year's business as shown by his stock taking, and he feels inclined and will deal generously with his customers. Come and be astonished and enriched with the bargains the Golden Horseshoe will offer for the next fortnight.

Mammie.

The worshipful Master of Peterborough, Lodge No. 155, A. F. & A. M., requests the brethren of the lodge, and any others of the order who may desire, to attend at the lodge room this evening at 8.30 p.m.

Absence Makes the Heart Grow Fonder.

It was noticeable at the concert last night that there was no policeman present. Although the order was better than the average it might be improved on.

Charlotte Street Church.

The pastor, Rev. F. H. Wallace, will conduct both services at the above church to-morrow. The evening service will be one of the series of evangelistic meetings now in progress. Strangers welcome.

Revival Services.

During the week the revival services in George Street Methodist Church have been well sustained. Last evening the meeting was devoted chiefly to the interests of the young people, there being a large number present. It is the intention of the pastor and others to continue these services next week. The meeting to-morrow (Sunday) evening will be of an evangelistic character. Rev. Mr. Tovell will deliver a prelude to his sermon dealing with the custom of late closing of business-houses on Saturday nights.

Accident near Apsley.

On Thursday afternoon a young man met with a serious accident at Connors' shanty, about 10 miles from Apsley. While passing a companion who was chopping a log, he was struck on the forearm with the blade of the axe, which cut to the bone, severing the arteries of the arm. Messrs. Hamilton and Gordon, employes of Mr. J. M. Irwin, who happened to be present, bound up the arm above the wound. Mr. Gordon, then took his team and drove to Apsley and returned with Dr. Campbell, who dressed the wound. Had prompt action not been taken the young man must have died from loss of blood. He is now out of danger.

Sudden Demise.

The sudden death of Mr. John W. Alford, contractor and builder, at his residence, Reid Street, yesterday, was a shock and surprise to his many friends and acquaintances. Though his last illness was serious enough to arouse apprehension, it was not thought that it would prove so suddenly fatal. Deceased was about forty years of age, a native of Devonshire, Eng. As a contractor and builder he was exceedingly successful, giving good satisfaction to his employers and being popular with his workmen. A wife and large family are bereft by his death. The funeral takes place Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Big Fire at Lindsay.

This morning about two o'clock, Mayor Stevenson was aroused from his slumbers by a messenger from the G. T. R. station, who conveyed the intelligence that the town of Lindsay was on fire, and that Mayor Deacon, of that town, had telegraphed for assistance. The mayor hastened down to the station and was informed by telegram that the Lindsay roller rink and the temperance hotel adjoining were in flames, and that there was danger of the whole town going, as the water had given out, one of the water mains having burst, and that the pressure was not strong enough to throw the water a yard. It is affirmed that a Lindsay burgher put his mouth over the nozzle of the hose, drew a mouthful of water and spurted it on the devouring flames, with better effect than the hose. Mr. S. sent back word that it would be impossible to get the Fire Brigade together, and the engine out and up to Lindsay before half-past eight o'clock, and expressed surprise that the water supply should run short at a temperance hotel. An answer was returned, stating that the danger was now almost over and was not as great as at first supposed, and intimating that the assistance of the Peterborough brigade would not be required, also thanking the mayor for the kind offer. The rink, hotel and sheds were destroyed, and now all is again serene on the Scugog.

Police Court.

A charge of larceny was preferred against John O'Connor by Francis Tully, before Police Magistrate Dumble this morning. It seems that in the execution of some right O'Connor had taken buffalo robes from Tully. Tully had a search-warrant issued and the goods were found in Connors livery office where the defendent, O'Connor, had left them. Tully stated that on Wednesday last O'Connor had driven his horse from Snowden stable to Connors' livery stable. When he arrived at the stable O'Connor had the horse partly unharnessed. He told Tully the harness and robes belonged to him, as he took them in payment for some debt. He took the robes into Connors' livery office for safe keeping. Tully drove home without the robes and the next day took action to recover the goods. Mr. M. Connors corroborated the statement of Mr. Tully. Tully identified the robes, which O'Connor had left in Connors' office as his. The Magistrate said he could not give Tully the robes until he heard O'Connor's side of the story, and enlarged the case until Monday morning. A warrant was issued to compel O'Connor to appear.

A charge was preferred against Mr. J. M Irwin, by Timothy Crowley for the recovery of wages, amounting to $40. Mr. C. A. Weller appeared for Mr. Irwin, and Mr. A. E. Peak for Mr. Crowley. Mr. Weller pleaded that Mr. Irwin had not sufficient notice, and pointed out that evidence from Haliburton would have to be produced. Crowley and a number of others had left the shanty at Haliburton without just cause, fearing an epidemic of diptheria, and Mr. Irwin considered they had no claim for wages, as they had demoralized the shanty. On these grounds he asked an adjournment for a week, to give time to produce evidence. The Magistrate thought Mr. Irwin would be able to give sufficient evidence, but as Mr. Irwin was not present, and could not be found at his office, the case was enlarged till Wednesday next.

Gathering Statistics.

Mr. John Leckie, assistant secretary of Ontario Bureau of Industries, Toronto, has been in town for the past few days gathering statistics respecting the town's industries.

Legal Decisions.

In the Queen's Bench Division yesterday, decision was given in two cases. In Reynolds vs. Roxburgh, tried at the last assizes here, the decision was reversed with costs. In the case of Sheridan vs. Pigeon, the appeal was sustained with costs.

Students in the Gallery.

Mr. B. Sawyer has reserved the gallery in the Opera House for students of the Peterborough Business College, on the occasion of Burdette's lecture on Monday evening. A wholesale appropriation of seats, like this, speaks well for the popularity which Mr. Burdette enjoys, which his lecture on Monday evening will no doubt justify.

At the annual meeting of the Toronto Industrial Exhibition Association, Messrs. Jno, McClelland and J. R. Stratton, Peterborough, were appointed on the special Committee on Poultry.

Mr. M. Hall, Toronto, is registered at the Oriental. He is adjuster for "National of Ireland," and is adjusting loss re McNaughton, for Geo. A. Morrison, the agent.

Don't be Duped.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brand of cigars, which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pay them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby.

RUPTURE CURED

IN FROM 20 TO 90 DAYS BY WEARING

EGAN'S IMPERIAL TRUSS.

Read the following extract from a letter of a well-known citizen of St. Catharines,—hundreds like it:

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 28th, 1885.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, I looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two spiralless trusses made in York State, costing me $40. Nothing would retain my Hernia. * * I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down. It holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. B. KING.

This new Spiral Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child sure; and 80 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. When writing please mention this paper. Address,

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Fifth Parliament—Third Session.

FRIDAY, FEB. 12th.

After routine in the Ontario Legislature to-day a large number of bills were read a first time. Mr. Carnegie obtained an order of the House for a return showing the number, concession and acreage of the lots in the township of Livingstone placed under license to cut timber to John Ludgate in August, 1884; the township, number, concession and acreage of the lots in lieu of which the license of 1884 was issued; the date when the last-named lots were taken out of Ludgate's license, and the disposition made of the timber thereon, with copies of all correspondence, reports and orders-in-Council relating to the exchange of territory thus effected.

Mr. Wood moved for an order of the House for a return showing the timber districts set aside for local mill purposes, the extent of each district, and the conditions under which such districts are held by the parties to whom granted, the parties holding the same, with the rate of dues charged by the Department of Crown Lands, such return to comprise that section of the Province lying to the east of the Bobcaygeon road.

Mr. Pardee explained that prior to Confederation the whole district mentioned was placed under license, and that no timber districts were then set aside for local mill purposes. Since that time an order-in-Council had been issued setting aside certain qualities of lumber for each local mill. The motion was amended so as to give the information sought, and was passed.

Mr. Wood also obtained an order of the House for a return showing the school sections in the Province which received aid from the poor school fund during the year 1885; the sum paid to each section from said fund, and any further aid given by the township or county municipalities, with the regulations of the Education Department as to the distribution of the poor school fund.

The House adjourned at 4:10 p.m.

Items of Interest to Working Men.

GENERAL.

The Crane Iron Co., Allentown, Pa., has agreed to a 10 per cent. increase for which its employees struck.

The restriction in the production of coke as the result of the Pittsburgh strike is causing furnace men to offer almost any price for the article. The supply has been almost exhausted, and iron men are willing to pay more from the fact that many furnaces which cannot be banked would be ruined, and could not be put in blast again in less than four months.

Forty members of the New York Car Drivers' Association are in Philadelphia organizing a strike of the street car drivers.

The moulders employed by the McCormick Reaper Works, Chicago, threaten to strike unless certain concessions are made to them. A strike would throw fourteen hundred men out of work.

It is computed that during the past year, Worcester, Mass., operatives have lost more than $1,000,000 through the action of the cotton manufacturers in the United States in curtailing production during the summer months.

Three Hungarians, who went to Gas Valley to take the places of strikers, at Wellsville, Ohio, were frozen to death in a barn a few days ago. The bodies were found Friday.

Thirty-six carters of P. Burns, coal delivery, Toronto, went out on strike Wednesday afternoon. The men used their own horses and carts, and trouble has arisen about an order making them haul a full ton of coal up the dump, which the men say would soon kill their horses. They have been in the habit of hauling up from 17 to 18 cwt.

Seattle, city Washington territory has become a military camp, and every corner is guarded by a sentry. Military rule is supreme, and there has been not effort on the part of the anti-Chinese rioters to interfere, nor even to hold a meeting. They are without recognized leaders, and are utterly powerless to do anything.

The Home Rule Question.

A Scheme to be Submitted to Parliament.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—The most trustworthy sources, give a forecast that a Home Rule Policy will be definitely announced by a resolution when the Commons meets. A small committee will be appointed to report upon the general question of the union of England and Ireland, meanwhile the land question will be dealt with. Mr. Morley's great victory at Newcastle yesterday, where he received 1,010 votes more than before, steadies the political ship wonderfully. I am able to state that when Parliament meets Mr. Parnell will draw attention to the distress and imminent danger of famine in the Western Islands on the coast of Ireland.

A Whipping Post for Wife Beaters.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 12.—The State Senate yesterday passed a bill establishing the whipping post for wife-beaters.

The British in Soudan.

SAUKIM, Feb. 12.—In an outpost skirmish on Wednesday the rebels were defeated. The reinforcements of the Soudanese rebels are advancing.

Destructive Floods.

Alarming and destructive floods have been caused throughout the New England and Central States by the rapid thaw and heavy rains of the past few days. Millions of dollars of damage has been done.

Poor Missions.

The Church women's mission aid society, Toronto, have already sent out over $13,000 worth of clothing to the poor in Toronto and Algoma district this winter.

Mr. Parnell on Galway "Unity."

GALWAY, Feb. 12.—At a meeting last evening, Mr. Parnell, who was loudly cheered, congratulated the electors upon the unity they had displayed and thanked them for the confidence they had shown in him. This tribute, he said, was the noblest he had ever received, and was an unerring indication of the speedy triumph of the National cause. Mr. O'Connor, M. P., also spoke. He predicted that an Irish Parliament would sit in Dublin within two years.

The latest society sensation in London is "High Tuks," an organization patronized by the Prince of Wales and other leaders of fashion. One of its novelties is to be dramatic performances, beginning every Saturday night at twelve o'clock.

Belleville.

In 1861 Brignall & Thomson, of Belleville, succeeded to the dry goods business of Barber, Brignall & Co., having a branch at Napanee. Some months ago, when taking stock, they showed, it is said, a surplus of $20,000. Their assignment was announced this week, no figures being given. They carried a stock of over $50,000 and did the largest trade in Belleville.

In Albuquerque, N. M., a company is organizing to explore the ruins of a vast ancient city, where, it is thought, $30,000,000 worth of plunder may be found.

George Francis Train's new work, "Dives and Lazarus," is coming out in the Tacoma (Puget Sound) Ledger under the head of "Vanderbillian Psychos."

In New York some of the young women of means and leisure are taking lessons in fencing, an art which Moliere said consisted in "touching and not being touched."

From tests made by Dr. Fisher, the German chemist, it appears that in ordinary stoves not more than 20 per cent of the fuel consumed is utilized in warming the rooms.

A prize obituary poem on Gen. Grant is entitled "Y Cadrifog Grant." It is in Welsh and the first line consists of the sonorous sentiment: "Du lwyth dr yr Unol Dalaethian."

"It is noteworthy," says the Paris News, "that in his Gottingen days Bismarck wagered twenty-five bottles of champagne with an American that Germany would be united in twenty years."

The honey crop of San Diego county, California, for 1885, was: Comb honey, 1,107,000 pounds; extracted, 1,284,500; total, 2,177,500 pounds. This is equal to 1,088 tons, or over 100 car-loads of honey. At 8 cents per pound it is worth $178,000.

A movement is on foot among Ohio journalists, begun in Perry and Hocking counties, to erect a monument over the grave of J. A. MacGahan, "the liberator of Bulgaria," at New Lexington, in Perry county, where MacGahan was born and where his body lies.

There has been a bitter quarrel between the Emperor of Russia and his uncle, the Grand Duke Michael; and the latter left St. Petersburg in high dudgeon for his estates in the Caucasus, having previously resigned all his offices, including the presidency of the council of state.

Prince Bismarck's idea of the freedom of debate during his first period of parliamentary service may be gathered from his suggestion that "Half-a-dozen drummers should be placed on the ministerial bench, and that all interpellations should be answered with a roll of their drums."

One of the best collections of birds and insects in America was that of Charles Buettner, a German, at Burlington, Iowa. There were in the collection 60,000 rare bugs, flies, worms and the like. The fire fiend rolled all these like so many dainty morsels under his tongue of flame, and now Naturalist Buettner is disconsolate.

The natives of the southern portion of Africa—the Zulus, Basutos, Swarzies and Bechuanas—are among the best races in Africa. They are exceedingly bright, have regular and handsome features and small feet and hands, and are at all times friendly. They practice polygamy, buying and selling their wives like cattle, but do not allow the whites to mix with them.

A farmer residing some five miles north from Etna, Kan., tells of a great natural curiosity. He says there is on his farm a perfect natural bridge. The width of the archway through which the water threads its way is from 8 to 12 feet. The cavernous archway is some 300 feet long. About 50 feet from the lower end of the bridge there gushes forth a clear spring of cool, soft water.

Horace Bradley, the young Georgian who got the $1,000 commission for a portrait of the late Senator Hill, began while at school to support himself and his brothers and sisters on sign-painting. Having made enough to go to New York, he worked at the Cooper union, got orders from the Harpers, and when the Hill portrait was given him he was able to study painting under Chase.

Mr. James Russell Lowell, in considering the poet Gray at Concord, regarded him as the most conscientious of artists. "If there be any pure well of English undefiled, it is to be found in him and in his master, Dryden. They are still the standard of what may be called classical English, neither archaic nor modern, and so far removed from pedantry as from vulgarity."

A PEN AND INK PORTRAIT.

The Toronto News is running a racy column in which it gives outline portraits of the members of the legislature and works in the details in solid "pica." This is the pen and ink portion of the portrait of Mr. Thos. Blezard, M.P.P., the honored, honest and consistent member for East Peterborough:—"Thomas Blezard, M.P.P., East Peterborough, has represented the people in municipal councils and in parliament for over a quarter of a century, and yet there is no man who takes up less of the time of the house in talking. Not that he cannot speak when the occasion demands it, for I (Pica) have heard him deliver a remarkably good address, but there has got to be a real necessity before he will take the floor. On committee he does good work, and he is ever at his post."

THE DOMINION DEFICIT.

The revenue for the first seven months of the fiscal year 1885-6 is $1,135,902 less than for the same period of the previous year, while the expenditure has been increased by $2,093,675. The deficit at the end of seven months is $6,137,287 in 1885-6, compared with $1,037,710 in 1884-5, so that, calculating on the basis of last year's figures, the deficit at the end of the current fiscal year will exceed seven million dollars. It is to be feared Mr. McLelan's powers of taxation and collection will not be equal to his colleagues' powers of disbursement. The increase of revenue for January over the same month last year is due to the receipts of interest from investments which fall due at the end of the half year. In Customs revenue there has been a decline of nearly $100,000. Not more than two millions of rebellion expenditure are included in the deficit for the past seven months, so that the excess of ordinary expenditure over revenue is more than three million dollars. The expenditure for January shows an increase of $253,232. It is not at all likely that our new minister of finance, Hon. Mr. McLelan will "come up smiling" in the next parliament with his financial statement. Sir Leonard Tilley did wisely to allow the financial conundrum "to be answered by pa."

INCISIVE IRONY.

The Bobcaygeon Independent is an adept in the adaptation of ironical writing to express its ideas and sentiments. The following is a specimen:—"There are few men in the Provincial Parliament more entitled to respect than Mr. Meredith, the leader of the Conservative Opposition. He possesses great intellectual powers, as an excellent speaker, has a keen sence of honor, is ready witted, can grasp any subject quickly, and is above all, a gentleman. He is a very able leader of Opposition, and not the slightest error or step is made by Mr. Mowat or his colleagues without Mr. Meredith perceiving it with lightning rapidity, and hauling it before the House in its naked simplicity. His party are very proud of him, and though this journal in its sublime elevation, is far removed beyond the murky atmosphere of party, it can give to Mr. Meredith the assurance of its distinguished consideration. This being the case it is eminently satisfactory to find that after more than half a year spent in studying the proceedings and policy of Mr. Mowat's Government, Mr. Meredith, at the opening of the new session, can find no item in their past record on which to base an indictment, and the only matter on which he could make a speech in Opposition was relating to Riel and the Northwest and the Dominion management of the Indians. This is a matter in which the Ontario Government are not concerned. They have nothing to do with it. They have no more control over the Northwest than they have over the Soudan, and Mr. Meredith might with equal justice discharge the thunderbolts of his eloquence against Mr. Mowat for the British failure to save Gordon, as for Sir John's failure to keep peace on the Saskatchewan. It would be dealing very unfairly with Mr. Meredith to suppose that he had not discovered any mistakes made by Mr. Mowat; it would be still more unjust to suppose that having discovered the mistakes he would fail to make a direct accusation against the Government. As he has not done so; as he has confined his criticism to their supposed views of the Northwest disturbances; we may fairly conclude that Mr. Mowat's Government has done well for the Province, and has managed its affairs with prudence, wisdom, and honesty. In this, we say, there is great cause for satisfaction, and as Mr. Meredith has no accusation whatever to bring against the Government, neither has this journal, and so we shall not interfere in the matter and just allow the Provincial Parliament to take its own course."

EDITORIAL NOTE.

At a meeting of the Montreal corn exchange the president said that he had strong reasons for believing that at the next sitting of the Dominion Parliament a reciprocity treaty with the United States would be arranged.

The Goderich township council calls attention to the increase of pauperism there. As it is one of the strongest Tory townships in Ontario, it is too bad of the Council to direct attention in such a marked manner to the failure of the scheme which was to make everybody rich.

Mr. M. C. Cameron's mode of dealing with the strictures of Hon. Thomas White on the subject of the timber-limit grabs, authorized by the present Government, is, the Hamilton Times thinks, undoubtedly fair. At St. Thomas, last Friday night, Mr. Cameron produced the official returns, as laid on the table of the House of Commons by the Government, and gave those inclined to accept the statement of the Minister the choice of believing Mr. White or the official documents. Mr. Cameron has Thomas in a tight box. The member for Cardwell cannot wriggle out of it on the ground of "political exigency," but do doubt he will try hard.

Sunday Sermons.

A Short Sermon on Early Closing by Rev. I. Tovell, in the George Street Church.

Rev. I. Tovell delivered in the George Street Church yesterday evening a prelude to his sermon, on the custom of early closing, especially dealing with Saturday night. The object of the movement, he said, was to give the businessmen and clerks an opportunity of doing justice to themselves, to society and to the church. He said he did not intend to refer to any particular business. He was always pleased to see bright clear Saturdays, when he knew merchants did a good business. Wealth, honestly acquired, and properly used was a great blessing. He did not wish to use any influence unbecoming to the ministry. The early closing of places of business was a question which affected all. All were expected to help each other. He congratulated the druggists on having taken the proper steps, in deciding to close their places of business at an early hour. He felt sure they would lose nothing by doing so, and would profit much morally, socially and financially. He would be pleased when all places of business were closed at an early hour. They would lose nothing. Keeping places of business open to a late hour was merely a custom which could be changed without loss to any one. The reason he mentioned it to the congregation was that he felt sure there were many of the congregation interested in it. Several business men and clerks had spoken to him on the subject. He was pleased to see an item in one of the local papers, the Review he thought, on the subject, which stated that Woodstock merchants had agreed on an early closing; and also a clipping from the Globe, asking if the custom could not be changed to the benefit of the merchant, socially, morally and financially. The late business hours were very serious to those who had to endure them. Business men became prematurely old. By early closing they would save money and time. The same amount of business would have to be done

IN MUCH LESS TIME.

In closing an hour earlier every day, and three hours earlier on Saturday, forty days could be saved in time, besides fuel, etc.,—in one year. This time given to rest, sleep, reading, and devoted to the family, would add to length of life and happiness. Late business hours besides being unprofitable were also often cruel. No one was to blame in particular. It was all force of circumstances. He often heard at midnight on Saturdays, the crack of the whip and the whistle of the boy driver, delivering goods or returning from delivering parcels around town. He had thought to himself the boy who could whistle after working that late and driving against storm and wind, was a brave boy. It was also cruelty to the horse to compel it to work all day and so late in the night in the face of a blinding storm to deliver little parcels, which might have been ordered earlier. He hoped these difficulties would be overcome by early closing.

MORALITY WAS ALSO LOWERED.

A man who reaches home about midnight, Saturday, when he goes to his bed cannot throw his thoughts of business aside, and on Sunday morning will be thinking of the good and bad bargains he has made during the day, and will desecrate the holy Sabbath by a thousand and one thoughts of business. There might be some who possessed the wonderful power of throwing all thoughts of business to one side. In the morning they force themselves to church, weary and worn, and not being able to give up all thoughts of business, it takes all the relish from the spiritual service. It is morning at all, far less in time for church. There was great room for improvement in the custom. On behalf of the abused boy, and horse, the overworked clerk and merchant, he would put in his strongest protest against the present custom. The purchasers were as much to blame as any. They came into shops at 9 o'clock on Saturday night from all directions and left their orders. The merchant had to keep open his shop to accommodate the customers. The clerk had to wait on the customers and parcel up their goods; while the boy and the horse had to deliver the parcels all over the town after that hour, when most of these orders might be left on Friday. If these orders were left on Friday the merchant would be left to deal with his country customers on Saturday. The purchasing

PUBLIC SHOULD TAKE THIS TO HEART.

The custom was taking a relish out of the service of the church. There were some cranky individuals who would object to this reform, but they would yet live to learn that it was a wise measure. Some merchants were so much occupied with their business that their families hardly ever saw them. This led to a very bad state of affairs. He hoped and prayed that the desired change would be made to the benefit of families and churches and to social and moral improvement.

Rev. Mr. Tovell then took as his text for the usual evening's discourse the 5th chapter of the Gospel according to St. Mark, verses 41 and 42.

"And he took the damsel by the hand and said unto her, Talitha cumi; which is being interpreted, Damsel, I say unto the, arise. And straightway the damsel arose and walked for she was of the age of 12 years. And they were astonished with great astonishment."

The speaker went to show that the act of bringing this young damsel to life seemed impossible to man. Yet it was not impossible to Christ. When the spirit speaks to a man who is dead in sin and tells him to give up his sin he says it is impossible. Christ is all powerful now as He was then, and can raise the dead in sin as He did Jairus' [illegible] will of his own, [illegible] He has the power to receive and reject. All he had to do was to accept Christ to be saved from sin and death. "I will," in faith, was all that was necessary. He also showed that the blessing was instantaneous. It was not like the curing of a debilitated system, but like taking a growth from the eye, which restores sight immediately. It was not like friendship, but like the marriage tie. It is the marriage of the soul with Christ Jesus. The change was wrought wholly by Christ. There was no ceremony needed; it was simply Christ's word. Moral culture and worth would never save a person. There was no merit in self. "By His grace we are saved." The foundation of redemption is the atonement of the Lord Jesus Christ. He then spoke of the uncertainty of life, and concluded by appealing to the unsaved to say "I will" to Christ's invitation.

A short prayer meeting was held after the usual services.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $600 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $60 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guarantee; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this papre who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

A MAID FORLORN.

BY THE DUCHESS.

At this Ronnie, turning suddenly to her sister, kisses her warmly.

"At all events, this visit to the country will decide all things," she says, with some renewed hope in her voice. "I trust Uncle Gregory will not put any obstacles in the way of our going, at the last moment."

"He won't—Major Jervis is out of town," says Cecil, significantly.

Time proves her words true. Before another week has flown they find themselves established in a pretty, old-fashioned house, in the quiet country.

CHAPTER II.

The snow is falling fast at Branksmere. All the air is full of it. The wintery wind, coming with a rush round the angles of the house, catches it and floats it toward the windows, where it clings to sill and pane. The laurels at the end of the lawn, and all the evergreens in the shrubberies, have lost their individuality, and have changed from green to dazzling white. Far below, in the bay, the sullen ocean rushes inland with a roar, and dashes against the giant rocks, which take no heed of its passion. Above is a sky all dull and leaden-hued, below a world monotonously white—a world in which the trees, bereft as they are of leaves, and gaunt and bare as skeletons, show black against its chilly purity.

Cecil, standing at the window, contemplates this dreary picture with a slightly discontented expression on her usually smiling face.

"Just like my luck," she says, in a plaintive tone.

Presumably she is addressing her mother and sister, who are sitting before a glorious fire, piled high with fragrant pine-wood; but her eyes are fixed with mournful reproach upon the descending snow.

"What, darling?" questions her mother, rousing herself from a pleasant reverie to ask the question.

"I am alluding to the snow," replies Cecil, still in the same melancholy tone. "In my heart I am calling it bad names. Here we have been, for two whole, long, interminable days in this new neighborhood, and I have never yet been able to get out to explore it, as would be my delight. Yesterday it rained. To-day it snows. What bitter lines! I shall go out of my mind, if I am 'cribbed, cabined, and confined' much longer."

"It is hard on you—my 'red rover,'" observes Ronnie, with a smile, glancing up from the piece of coarse ugly ticking she is embroidering.

"No aspersions on my ruddy locks, if you please," says Cissy, putting up her hand to her hair, which is really charming, and of that very rare color where brown melts into amber and amber into a still warmer shade. "To-day my spirits are too low to admit of my taking it amiably. What an irritating thing snow is! So slow and would-be meek, yet so determined. And how brown it makes one look! I feel just like a Zulu or a North American Indian when I compare myself with it."

"Certainly it is not becoming," admits Ronnie, reflectively, gazing pensively at her own dear little face in a mirror near her. "It puts one out of conceit with one's self."

"It is downright spiteful," says Cecil, vindictively.

"Yet I think one never thoroughly appreciates a good fire, until the snow is on the ground," puts in Mrs. Rivers, sleepily, at which remark both the girls laugh in concert.

"I never saw the day or hour you didn't enjoy it," says Cecil, saucily, whereupon her mother laughs too.

Silence follows. Mrs. Rivers dozes. Ronnie stitches. Cecil commences a low-spirited and dismal tattoo upon the window-pane. To say the least of it, it is a depressing noise. Ronnie bears it patiently for many minutes, until indeed her nerves are quite unstrung, and then she says, meekly:

"I dare say it is musical, dear, and that my want of taste is unpardonable, but whenever I hear that noise I feel I want to die."

Cissy foregoes her melancholy amusement, and mourns that even this poor consolation is denied her.

"I really think it is charming," she says presently, with some faint show of animation. "It looks ever so much brighter, doesn't it, Ronnie? After all, it can't hurt much; so I shall put on my things, and get even one small scamper before it grows dark."

"My dear child, do not dream of such a thing!" exclaims Mrs. Rivers, sitting quite upright this time, and looking dismayed. "It is a terrible day, you will catch your death of cold!"

"I wouldn't be guilty of such a thing for worlds," returns Cissy, gayly, "and besides, I shouldn't dream of interfering with Ronnie's special rôle. She catches cold for all the family"—glancing fondly, even regretfully, at her fragile sister, who looks younger than herself, but is really two years her senior. "The village is only a mile away; I shall walk there, and see what is to be seen, and if I am snowed up beyond hope of return, I dare say that fat little woman at the inn will give me shelter."

"You mean the woman who was so kind to us, when one of our horses came to grief the day of our arrival, the day before yesterday?" asks Ronnie. "Mrs. Stilton, they call her. I never forgot it; she did look so like a cheese."

"Yes. Don't look as if this was to be our final farewell, mamma!" cries Cissy, with an irrepressible laugh. "You haven't a chance of getting rid of me so easily. 'I will return; you know me well!' But in case I shouldn't"—she has her hand by this time on the handle of the door, and is looking back mischievously at her mother—"if it be my lot to be discovered stiff and stark and frozen in some picturesque hollow, remember, I leave my debts to Ronnie and my kittens to you. Don't let them starve."

"I wish you would not jest on such horrid subjects," says Mrs. Rivers, in a nervous tone that fills Miss Cissy with delight. "And I wish too—"

But the door is shut before she can disclose her second wish, and Cissy is beyond reach of eyes and ears. Of course she carries the day, and presently comes downstairs, and starts for her walk half-smothered in furs, and with the daintiest of little otter-skin caps upon her head. The whole costume suits her to perfection, and, with a light heart and a quick step, she runs up the avenue through the feathery snow-flakes that fall all around her, and passes the entrance gate.

Oh, the joy of being in the open air again—however cold—after two days' confinement to the house! And the rapture of having "fresh woods and pastures new" before her! All is still unknown. Such a short time has elapsed since Mrs. Rivers and her daughters took possession of this their new home, and as yet their present world is an unexplored territory, full, it may be, of delightful possibilities and golden treasure.

To-day the spirit of adventure is rife within Cecil's breast. She moves briskly, with a buoyant air, up the road; past the wall that bounds her own place, past a gate that leads no doubt to some near neighbor's dwelling, and straight on until she comes to the open highway beyond. Here she comes to a standstill, and ponders a while. A broad road stretches to her right, a large common to the left; yet she has been told that both will bring her to the village, and that the common is the shortest route by a full mile! Which shall she take? After a short but severe struggle with prudence she pushes it into the background, and decides on speed and the common. It looks vast—nay, even vague; but, taking the little well-beaten path that lies through it, she walks on bravely, with her head held high, and a delicious sense of freedom, light, air, youth, pervading her whole being. As she goes, and as the road grows dim behind her, she even breaks into song, and carols as sweetly as any bird that flies the air.

So passes a long hour, and then—then—slowly, and without any undue misgiving—it occurs to her that the village must be further off than she has been told. Surely it is a good mile that she has traveled; and that was the distance specified! At this time she is not frightened; but presently, as the storm rises, and the snow falls ever faster and faster, and she finds she has unconsciously quitted the path, and is walking upon grass, a little feeling of nervousness gains upon her. How can she know where the path may lie, when all is so even, so covered with an unbroken shroud of purest white?

Rough Boreas has awakened, and, ever and anon rushing at her, seizes her in his strong embrace, and, shaking her slight frame with rude violence, leaves her breathless and unstrung. The darkness is growing rapidly. Already a veil of sombre hue is overshadowing the land. Twilight deepens, yet no village is within sight, no road can meet the eye; the bare wide common seems vaster, more interminable than ever. She is alone upon a desolate waste, uncertain where to go, which turn to take!

The horrible thought that she may be lost—really lost, like one of those unhappy people one reads about, but hardly believes in, comes to her with unpleasant force. But she fights against it, and walks on, determined to overcome the sensation of fatigue that, in spite of all efforts to subdue it, is asserting itself.

Another cruel gust of wind, arising suddenly, and sweeping boisterously past her, unnerves her, and reduces her almost to despair, and it is at this moment luckily that she finds herself once more on the edge of the common, with a road on her left hand—a road well covered with snow beyond question, and leading she knows not whither, but still a veritable road.

With renewed hope she quits the unfriendly common, and walks on, wearily but determinedly, for quite another half mile. Her feet are growing painful; an increasing longing to sit down and indulge the miserable drowsiness that is creeping over her, if only for a short while, frightens her. Clenching her poor little frozen hands and forcing back the tears that are dimming her eyes, she still struggles on, though hope within her is again almost dead.

So another quarter of a mile is conquered; and then, when she is least expecting succor, what is that she sees through the gathering gloom? A light—a lodge—a graveled avenue, and two big pillars on which rest dragon's heads that grin defiance on passers-by. Yet never did tender lambs seem sweeter in Miss Rivers's sight than these threatening beasts.

The Colored Sexton.

The sexton of a Baptist church in a large western city was a good colored brother, who rarely took part in the social religious meetings of the society; but when he did, all present held their breath, for it was well known that some one was to be "hit on the head," and great amusement was in store for the others. On this particular occasion the subject of the prayer-meeting was "Christian Humility." Mr. Bascom, one of the wealthiest church members, while leaning on his gold-headed cane and toying with his elegant watch chain, concluded his remarks, with great affectation of humility, by saying: "If I ever should be so favored as to reach heaven at all, it seems to me that a place in the most remote section, the most obscure corner, of that blissful region will be infinitely more than I deserve. And when the call comes to me to 'go up higher,' it seems to me I shall feel like putting my hand upon my mouth and my mouth in the dust, and crying out, 'Unclean! unclean!'"

When he was seated, the colored brother rose in the rear of the room, and slowly advancing, faced the audience, and thus addressed them: "Brudders an' sisters, when I hears the angel Gabri'l blow de trumpet a-callin' me home, it 'pears to me I'll be so powerful glad I'll just call out, 'Hol' on dar, Gabri'l; I hears de trumpet, an' I's comin' mighty quick!' An' it 'pears to me I'll be so bustin' full ob joy I'll jest go shoutin', skippin', leapin' right up to de front ob de throne as fast as I kin git dar. An' dar I'll stan' wid de white robes on, a-wavin' de palm branches, an' a-shoutin' 'Glory! glory! glory! glory to de Lamb dat was slain!' For what do de scriptures say? 'Who are dese in white robes?' 'Dey what come up through great tribulations.' Down here de black skin an' de great tribulations; up dar de white robe an' de joy for ebermore. Now, my brudders an' sisters, what do de scriptures say agin? Dey say 'what though dey be black as ink (or something to dat effec'), dey shall be whiter dan snow.' An' it 'pears to me I'll be so powerful happy up dar dat I'd like to shake han's wid all my brudders an' sisters, widout distinction ob age, color, or previous condition ob servitude—good many on 'em I hain't shook no han' wid here—but 'pears to me I'll be so occoopied a-wavin', an' a-praisin', an' a-shoutin' hallelujah! hallelujah! hallelujah! close up on de right side ob de Lamb, dat I won't hab no time to go peekin' roun' de dark corners ob heaven to find Brudder Bascom."—Lyan Burdette, in Editor's Drawer, Harper's Magazine for February.

Some Aches and Pains.

Back-ache is often a constant complaint with over-worked and delicate people. They get little pity for it. It seems almost a mockery to say, "Remove the cause;" but this should be done as much as possible and an easy position studied while at work. Steel, or steel with quinine, will often do good, and the strength should be kept well up.

As, however, backache is often connected with internal complaints, which may eventually prove intractable or incurable, whenever it occurs for any length of time a medical man should be consulted.

Pain of all kinds is greatly relieved by the use of the hot bath. This is a hint which should not be forgotten.

Head-aches.—There are so many different kinds that I can not spare space to say much about them. Rest, aperients, absence for a time from food, and afterward mild doses of quinine, will be found beneficial. But those who are much subject to them must take the greatest care how they live, and not neglect plenty of wholesome, happy exercise in open air. Those who sit much during the day should be careful to hold the body as erect as possible.

Cold water applied frequently to the head does good in fullness of the head. The last often proceeds from a disordered stomach and liver. The latter may be congested, and, if only transiently so, one or two anti-bilious pills will remove it. The stomach and liver sympathize very much with each other. When the latter is out of order, the former will be acid.

Acidity of the stomach is a complaint with many. I shall treat of it, I trust, at a future day. Let me only here warn those who suffer from it not to trust too much to antacids, which always make matters worse in the long run.

Slight colds and coughs should never be neglected. Unless one actually calls in medical assistance, probably it is better to trust to dietetic treatment, with rest and warmth, than to purchase cough mixtures from the shops, which may or may not be unskillfully prepared. The worst of these is that they so often contain such a quantity of opiates that, even when they do give relief, they leave want of appetite, constipation and general inaptitude for duty, for days to come.

Chlorodyne is often taken for colds and coughs. It is a dangerous remedy, in that weak-minded people are apt to take doses of it so often that it becomes a habit, and nothing could be more dangerous. It leads eventually to chronic ill-health, and is sure to shorten life if persisted in.

A sprain is apt to be neglected. Rest and soothing applications, or even cold water, will be sufficient to bring matters straight very soon; but remember, many a one has become a cripple for life from neglecting a sprained foot or ankle.—Cassell's Family Magazine for February.

Manual Training in the United States.

The progress of manual training in the United States during the last few years has been very great, whether it be considered from the standpoint of the growth of public sentiment on the subject, or from that of its introduction to existing schools, public and private, and the establishment of independent schools. It is in some form in certain of the schools of twenty-five of the States of the Union, and there are at least forty educational institutions in the country where it is made part of the course of instruction. The character of the schools into which manual training has been introduced is varied. The range is from the most noted colleges and universities in the land to the public schools of small cities.—Charles H. Eliot, in Harper's Magazine for February.

Spring Assizes.

The following are the dates of the spring assizes, for this circuit, Hon. Mr. Justice Armour, Peterborough, Thursday, March 25th. Lindsay, March 22nd. The Cobourg assizes will be held March 29th, before Mr. Chief Justice Cameron.

A Fire at Port Hope.

A conflagration occurred at Port Hope last night. The devouring element succeeded in swallowing Mr. J. J. Turner's sail, awning and tent loft, needle, anchor, and all; his dwelling house, and Wallace's storehouse. The loss is heavy.

Advertising Pays.

A well-know New York advertising agent, Mr. J. H. Bates, thus expressed himself:—"As I look back, I do not recall the name of one man who judiciously, perseveringly, and freely pushed good articles, of whatever kind, in the newspapers that did not make at least a fair success, while a great many have gained ample fortunes. I could easily mention names in support of this statement, but the list is long. Indeed, it has been my observation that it is easier for large advertisers to make money than to keep it."

The Last Chance.

to secure tickets for Burdette's lecture. He appears for the first time before a Peterborough audience to-night. Plan of hall at A. L. Davis & Co's. Tickets 25 and 50 cents. Read what the St. John Telegraph says of him: "There were only five or six vacant chairs in the Institute last evening, to hear Mr. Burdette, the famous humorist of the Hawkeye. No greater mark of appreciation of Mr. Burdette's genius could be given in this city, than the gathering of such an audience at this season. There are few men who ever lectured here twice before, as Mr. Burdette has done, who could draw half the audience he did last evening. Every sentence of the lecture was set with its jewels of sparkling humor, and the laughter was general and frequent.

The Lumber Trade.

The Bobcaygeon Independent says of Victoria and Peterborough county that the "prospects of the lumber trade are good." There is some reason to believe that the price and demand in the States for Canadian lumber will increase and there is a very good and hopeful feeling among lumbermen. The production of logs this year will be larger than last year. Mr. Boyd's limits along the Monk Road will be very productive, and yield a large drive of logs for Little Bob Mill, whilst Mr. Petrie, for his mill has bought more logs than he ever before had on hand, and quite as many as he can cut in the season. There is but small demand for hardwood; basswood is in fair request, and elm for furniture is increasing in demand."

Will "Ananias" Explain?

The following is published in the Monetary Times of the 12th inst.: "We have been shown a letter from the well-known actuary, Sheppard Homans, relative to the use made of his name in puffs of an assessment association from New York city. In this letter he writes:—"I have yours of 5th instant, with clipping from one of your local papers. I did not, and do not, endorse the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association. . . . I have yet to see any assessment company with names up to my idea of proper methods and management." The above is in keeping with the many fabrications circulated by such concerns. A few days ago the public were furnished with an elaborate report of the doings of those assembled at the annual meeting of the "Mutual Reserve Fund Association" at New York. In addition, the local agent here added a flourish about "clap trap, etc.," and asserted what is quoted above in reference to the Hon. Sheppard Homans, the eminent actuary—who is the consulting actuary of the Canada Life. When the only part of that report to which any weight might be attached, is shown by the above to be a falsehood, what reliance can be placed on the other part of the report?

Next Friday's is the date of the second of the Fire Brigade Band carnivals. Trim your dresses and be ready for the carnival. Don't forget the children's carnival in the afternoon, and the Shakesperian carnival in the evening. Fourteen valuable prizes are offered. See posters for particulars.

Police Court.

The Tully vs. O'Connors case, held over from Saturday, was again up before Magistrate Dumble this morning. John O'Connor who was charged by Francis Tully with taking some sleigh robes from him, appeared in court. He claimed that the robes were his, he having bought them from John McFarlane. Tully was ill and unable to be present, and the case was further enlarged until Thursday.

Legal Decision.

Our telegram in relation to the case of Sheridan vs. Pigeon, published on Saturday, was misleading. The correct statement is this: In the case of Sheridan vs. Pigeon, the court dismissed the motion to set aside the verdict, with costs. The defendant's counsel asked leave to appeal, but the court would not grant it. It is understood that "the opinion no longer prevails that the motion to set aside the verdict would only be a matter of form."

Acknowledgement.

The following letter shows that Mr. W. Lech, treasurer of the late Board of Trade, has promptly carried out the wishes of the Board, with regard to the balance on hand at the time dissolution.

PETERBOROUGH, Feb'y 13th, 1886.

Mr. Lech, Esq.:

DEAR SIR,—I beg to acknowledge the receipts of $36.30 from the Peterborough Board of Trade, for the benefit of the Protestant Home. Please accept our sincere thanks.

The Golden Horseshoe.

This great clothing house will, for the next two weeks, give the biggest kind of bargains in clothing and gentlemen's furnishings. Mr. LeBrun has in contrast with the practice of other dealers, taken stock before holding clearing sale, so that he knows exactly what surplus stock he has, and he has decided to clear it out the next two weeks at tremendous bargains. He is well satisfied with the results of the past year's business as shown by his stock taking, and he feels inclined and will deal generously with his customers. Come and be astonished and enriched with the bargains the Golden Horseshoe will offer for the next fortnight.

The Valentine's Custom Dying.

Yesterday, the 14th of February, was St. Valentines day, and supposed to be the day on which birds begin to mate. The custom of sending a tender missive containing professions of love and affection has greatly dropped off this year, and any person receiving such tokens may consider "Barkis is willin." Caricature valentines did not sell for a cent, and eccentric persons have not been bothered by receiving a flattering photo of themselves to the extent of former years. The post office clerks have not been over exerted in discharging their duties of distributing valentines. The weather may have something to do with it. This would be a cold day for birds to start housekeeping.

What We May Expect.

Good sleighing again.

And winter to hold its grip a little longer.

To the joy of the coal merchants and wood dealers.

Hawkeye Burdette at the Opera House to-night.

And a crowded house to fatten on the fun.

Prof. Parker's piano Recital at St. Luke's to-morrow night.

A meeting of the True Blues to-night.

Revival services in two churches the rest of this week.

A well known local vocalist to go into the concert business soon.

Tobogganing to revive after being thawed out.

The Gun Club shoot this afternoon.

And if there are no ladies, that there will be good many misses present.

Personal.

Mr. E. B. Edwards, B.A., L.L.B., was present at a special general meeting of the convocation of the University of Toronto, held in that city on Friday last.

Mr. H. H. Burnham of Port Hope is in town to-day, on his way to Keene, to attend the auction sale of his farm and mill property morrow.

Mr. Bob Burdette of the Burlington Hawkeye, who is to lecture in Bradburn's Opera House to-night, on "Advice to Young Men" arrived in town at noon, and is the guest of Mr. J. R. Stratton, of THE EXAMINER. He is accompanied by his sister-in-law, Miss Garnet, and his son, Bob jr. This afternoon, Mr. Stratton, Mayor Stevenson and Rev. W. C. Bradshaw extended our genial journalistic American cousin the hospitalities of the town, showing the chief points of interest.

Mrs. Chambers, Miss Wells, Miss Huston, and Mr. W. A. Dixon, of Peterborough, assisted at the best concert ever given in Fenelon Falls, and delighted the villagers.

Rev. T. B. Angell, closed a year's ministry as curate, last night in St. John's church, by preaching a most excellent sermon. It is understood that he will take up his residence in Cobourg for some time.

Mr. R. T. Hartley whom all the boys around town know well, is now in Quebec. He doesn't forget old times and associations in Peterborough. At a carnival held in that city he revived as far as a single individual could do, the Penty pool Minstrels, appearing in the character of a "Nigger Dude." The Quebec Chronicle says that "an interesting feature of the carnival was the fancy skating of Mr. Hartley,' and speaks very highly of his performance, in which he evidently creditably upheld the skating reputation of the Hartley family.

Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada.

A Great Financial Institution.

Again the Sun Life Assurance Company reviews a year of great prosperity and of largely increased patronage.

The life applications amounted to over $2,600,000.00, against $1,900,000.00, in 1884. The income also increased by over $40,000.00. The assets by $140,000.00: and the life assurances in force by $1,100,000.00.

In every detail,—more insurance was written, more premiums received, more money paid to policy-holders, and a larger increase of assets and of insurance in force realized than during any previous year in the Company's history.

The forth-coming report is thus one which cannot fail to obtain for the Company an even greater share of the confidence of the public.

The Manager must be gratified in being able to tell the patrons of the Company that so far the business of every week of the new year has surpassed that of the corresponding week in 1885—hitherto the largest. The business is over $100,000.00 ahead of 1885 to date.

This statement of facts—backed up, as it is, by official figures—cannot be but satisfactory to the well-wishes and numerous Policy-holders of this universally acknowledged liberal, fair-dealing and popular Company.

Closing the Branch.

It is definitely announced that the Canadian Bank of Commerce will close its branch in Chicago at the end of April next, and withdraw from business in that city. This step will permit of the bank's funds being used more largely in the New York market, which is deemed the most desirable point at which to use the resources of this and other leading Canadian banks. The step mentioned is contemporaneous with the organization of a new National Bank, to be called the American Exchange National Bank of Chicago, for which the greater portion of the stock is, we understand, already subscribed. It is learned that the cashier of the new bank will be Mr. A. L. Dewar, who has been the Chicago manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce for some years and is reputed to be a competent man for the position. The new bank will practically succeed to the business of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, and the relations between the two banks will, it is understood, be close and friendly.

A Sure Remedy for Neuralgia.

Neuralgia is one of the most common and distressing complaints incidental to this climate. It is not confined to any particular season, for whilst most general in the winter seasons, yet many suffer its excruciating agony in the heat of summer. In late years this form of disease has become better known, and consequently the means of relief have become greatly increased in numbers, as well as in efficacy. Among the most powerful and penetrating combinations, placed within the reach of the public for the relief of neuralgia, we can mention no remedy equal to or more certain than Polson's NERVILINE. Its power over pain is something wonderful, and we advise a trial for neuralgia, or any other painful complaints. Nerviline is sold by all druggists at 25 cents a bottle, also trial bottles at 10 cents.

BANKERS—Bank of Toronto and Canadian Bank of Commerce.
SOLICITORS—Dumble & Henry.

TO DEPOSITORS—Deposits are received by this Company both on current account and for periods of one year or longer. The rate of interest paid on amounts deposited on current account and which may be withdrawn by check in such sums as the depositor may from time to time require, is FOUR per cent., either paid or compounded half-yearly, and the rate on yearly deposits is FIVE per cent.

TO INVESTORS—The five and ten year FIVE PER CENT DEBENTURES of this Company which are issued in denominations of $100, $200, $500 and $1000 each, transferable by endorsement, with half-yearly interest Coupons attached, payable at the Head Office of the Company in Peterborough, or at any Branch of the Bank of Toronto in Canada, afford a safe and convenient mode of investment.

The funds of the Company being invested in first mortgages on Real Estate, no better security can be offered to depositors or debenture-holders, they having a first claim or mortgage on the whole Assets of the Company, the shareholders having the second. The annual statement shews that the amount so invested was over $600,000, and on the security of real estate at least double that value.

By the laws of Ontario, Trustees, Executors and Administrators may deposit Trust Funds of the estates which they control in this Company, and are free from all further liability, a privilege of which many have largely availed themselves.

TO BORROWERS—Money is obtainable from this Company on approved Real Estate security at the Lowest Current Rates of Interest.

The Mortgage may be repaid by yearly instalments, or otherwise as may be agreed upon, the interest ceasing at once on all amounts paid on account of the sum borrowed.

Applications may be made either to the Head Office, or to any of the Agents.

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 30th, 1885.

GENTLEMEN.—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, I looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two springless trusses made in Yo . State, costing me $40. Nothing would retain my Hernia. " I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down. It holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. B. KING.

This new Spirial Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. A Clergyman Declares He was Born Four Months After His Mother's Funeral.

RALEIGH, N. C., Feb. 14.—Rev. John Lindsay, now preaching in Richmond county, was born four months after his mother was dead and buried. His mother to all appearance died and was buried in Stewartsville cemetery. The night following her interment persons, for the purpose of securing the jewelry buried with the body, unearthed the remains, when consciousness returned, and she was enabled to return to her home. Arriving at her late residence she rapped at the door and was answered by her husband, who was overjoyed to meet again in life his beloved wife, whom he had mourned as dead. Four months afterwards Rev. Mr. Lindsay was born. The mother survived several years. This statement is made by the Rev. Mr. Lindsay, and is literally true.

Gladstone's Position.

Strength Gained in the Recess.

Parliament will open with Mr. Gladstone in a stronger position than at the last adjournment. The O'Shea affair shows Mr. Parnell's absolute ascendancy in his party to be threatened, and Mr. Morley's re-election by an increased majority indicates the popular confidence in the Premier's course thus far. Therefore, it is quite generally conceded that Mr. Gladstone is in a position now to grant less to Mr. Parnell in the shape of Home Rule legislation, and more to Ireland at large, in the shape of land reforms, than he was safe in doing before, and both these possibilities were necessary to give him the independence that would place his Ministry upon a lasting basis.

The Eastern Warcloud.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—A Constantinople despatch says:—A fresh war anxiety is affecting the mind of the Porte on account of the almost certain renewal of the attack of Sirvia on Bulgaria, in which case Greece is sure to commence hostilities. Great secrecy is maintained respecting the position of the Greek fleet. It is believed, however, it is lurking in the Negropont Channel. A good position both for protecting and for making a descent on Salonica. The international fleet, or a large portion of it, will shortly leave Crete for Salonica to keep a closer watch on Greek naval movements. Great activity still prevails here. The "Mahmoudieh," a large broadside irouclad of seventy guns, and fully equipped in every respect as to guns and torpedo netting, sailed yesterday with sealed orders. It will probably cruise in the Marmora for a few days, and then sail for some port in the Archipelago.

The Empire's Strength.

Nearly a Million Armed Men at the Command of the Queen.

The latest returns of the British army show that there are about 250,000 men available for service of whom 206,900 are with the colors, nearly 40,000 in the first-class army reserve, and nearly 9,000 in the second-class. Of militia, including the militia reserve, there are about 114,000, and of yeomanry cavalry about 11,500 men. The men of the Royal navy, including those on Coastguard service and the Royal marine Artillery of Infantry, number some 60,000 officers and men. The Volunteers at home reckon up 220,000. The Indian native forces, allowing for the additions which have been made lately, must approach 150,000; and the Canadian active militia account for over 45,000 of all ranks. Thus the portion of the military strength of the Empire which may be considered always more or less in training, and certainly always in possession of arms, uniforms and accoutrements, is approximately 880,000—a very near approach to the million of armed men Lord Wolseley recently roughly estimated as at the orders of the Queen or her representatives. But beyond these more immediate resources there are several regiments of militia organized in the Channel Islands and Volunteer corps in the colonies of the West Indies, the Cape, Ceylon, Hong-Kong, Malta, Natal, New South Wales (including a corps of regular artillery), New Zealand, St. Helena, Singapore, South Australia (including what is called permanent artillery), Tasmania, Victoria, Western Australia, and India. The greater colonies, too, have large unascertained stores of the Landsturm character, as, for instance, New Zealand and the Dominion of Canada, whose reserve militia, including men up to sixty years of age, is freely computed at 600,000. Taking in undefined levies of this kind, the resources of the Empire become larger than is often supposed, though it is to be assumed that the organization of the men represented by such large numbers exist mainly on paper only, and the arms and equipment are entirely wanting. Taking the home forces only, there were at recent returns 95,000 regular troops, and these, added to the army reserve, militia, yeomanry, and Volunteers, give a total military force in the United Kingdom of about 440,000.

Importance of the Dairy Industry.

The dairy products of this country are of great proportions and importance. The exports thereof are even larger than those of wheat, being next in importance to lumber, which is the largest. The exports last year were in the neighborhood of 70,000,000 lbs of cheese, and 5,000,000 lbs of butter, and to the value of about $8,000,000. Since 1880 our butter export has decreased about 16,000,000 lbs, in spite of the fact that England imports 60,000,000 lbs more than in 1878. Canada does not export more because 90 per cent. of the butter production is of poor quality.

Port Hope.

This town has also had a taste of the mid-winter flood. An ice jam took place at the viaduct and the whole of Mill street, from the Turner House to the wharf, was flooded. Wright Bro's. coal yard and their stables were under water. Three small houses on Mill street, between Peter street and the viaduct, were several feet deep in water and the families had to vacate them. Mill street is impassible from Peter street to the wharf, and it will cost perhaps a hundred dollars to clear it for traffic, besides the damage done to the sidewalks and the Peter street bridge. At the fire on Sunday night, in the flooded district, the firemen had to work in ice cold water up to their waists.

Oshawa.

A deputation of the striking Oshawa iron makers visited Toronto, to secure funds to continue the fight with the Malleable Iron Works. The deputation returned with the needful funds on Monday.

Licenses in Toronto.

The liquor men are much excited over the proposition to reduce the number of licenses in their city, and committees have been appointed to look after the interests of the trade a future Council meeting meeting. Mayor Howland is going to be a success.

Teachers and our National University.

At a recent meeting of Toronto University Senate, Dr. Wilson gave notice of a resolution declaring it expedient to co-operate with the Education Department in holding local examinations. The scheme contemplated provides that the examinations for the certificating of teachers and for university matriculation shall be held simultaneously; that the university shall examine in Algebra, Geometry, Greek, Latin, French and German, the department taking all other subjects, and that each body shall accept the work of the other. This would enable all successful candidates for teachers' certificates to secure university standing as under-graduates at the cost of a little extra effort.

COUNCIL MEETING.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment on Monday, Feb. 15th, all the members present except the Reeve.

In the absence of the Reeve, who was called away by the death of his mother, Mr. Bronscombe was appointed to the chair.

After routine, the following communications were received and read:

From James Brealy, asking the Council to alter the boundaries of school sections numbers 1, 2 and 3.—No action was taken.

From the same gentleman notice that he intended to apply to the Superior Court, for an order to quash the by-law appointing auditors, as it was contrary to statute.—No action was taken.

An account for flour, etc., supplied to Wm. Close, was ordered to be paid.

A by-law to appoint township officers for the current year received its several readings and was finally passed signed and sealed.

The old officers were re-appointed at the same salaries as last year.

The Council then adjourned to meet on Monday, the first day of March next, to appoint pound-keepers, fence-viewers and pathmasters, and transact other business.

Millbrook.

Some short time ago the members of St. John's Church presented the Rector, the Rev. Rural Dean Allen, with a new surplice and stole, as a mark of their appreciation of his ministerial services. The presentation was made at the Rectory, by several members of St. John's, who drove down for the purpose.—Messenger.

Assessment System.

The Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association.

Hon. Sheppard Homans, in addressing the annual meeting, said: "Mr. President, you have this day paid me the delicate compliment of asking me to a seat at this meeting. * * * I have listened with great interest and advantage to the reports of this meeting, * * * and I will say to you, sir, that while my experience and career has been connected with old line institutions, I have from the first seen the merit, popularity and advantages of your system. * * * We do not look upon you as rivals or adversaries, there is room for us all. * * * You have taught us many things. We shall seek to emulate you. I, in common with many of the old-line officers, think you are doing a missionary work. We hope, gentlemen, that the intercourse between your company and mine, between the associations and old-line companies, will partake of a friendly and honorable feeling, and with that view I wish you success." The very fact of Mr. Homans attending the meeting is proof that he is in sympathy with the company. Mr. Homans is the consulting actuary of the Canada Life, whose Peterborough agent, along with other stockholders, scooped out of the unfortunate policy-holders during the last five years, the enormous sum of $208,780.94, saying nothing of the proprietor's account or the enormous commissions paid to agents, which will be published if this thing is continued, along with Mutual Reserve contracts, so that the public can draw their own conclusions. No wonder the opponents tremble when the M. R. F. L. A. business during the past year has been $5,000,000 greater than the largest old-line company in the world, at the end of its forty-fifth year. TU QUOQUE.

Some of Mr. Carnegie's returns are returns in a literal sense—boomerangs. One of his precious motions was meant to expose the extravagance of the Mowat Government in paying Messrs. Mills, Hodgins and Irving for legal services. By the way the payment to Hon. Mr. Mills were made for services forced on the local government by the attempt of the Dominion Government, assisted by Mr. Meredith and his followers, to deprive this Province of a large area of its territory. Hon. John O'Connor received $5,040 from the Dominion Government for assisting the Dominion against Ontario in the matter of the Boundary Award. And the Opposition has the assurance to complain because Ontario employed a legal gentleman to defend her rights. When it comes to paying legal expenses the local government is left far behind the Dominion Government, yet neither Mr. Carnegie nor any of the Opposition has said a single word against a bill like the following, paid by the Dominion Government for legal services in 1883-4:—

D. O'Connor	$8,943
H. C. Pelletier	4,203
John O'Connor	5,040
W. Graham	4,150
J. A. Macdonell	3,156
Hompas & Bischoff	2,706
A. Ferguson	3,249
L. R. Harrison	2,066
Wm. Wilson	2,500

EDITORIAL NOTES.

There is a pretty heavy responsibility resting on the shoulders of municipal assessors. The assessor of Wolfe Island, near Kingston, made a clerical error in making out the roll, and Mr. Hogan who was elected reeve, has been declared by reason of such assessors' error, unseated.

Several of the warriors of Batoche have "shouldered their crutches, and shown how the field was won." While there is some doubt as to the glory General Middleton is entitled to carry away from the skirmish, there is no doubt that the $20,000 gratuity is safely in his pocket.

The Tory journals hypocritically complain of the delay of business in the local house, when the only avoidable delay was caused by the opposition who introduced foreign matter tending to prolong the debate on the adress. The discussion on Mr. Carnegie's motions for returns takes up a good deal of the time of the house, and if the organs want to find fault they should place the blame on the right shoulders.

The Port Hope Times (Tory), professes to "shudder" at the reiteration on the part of Liberal journals, of advice to voters to get their names on the lists. It does not need to "shudder" on behalf of Tory voters, for Tory revising officers and clerks are paid at the public expense to look after the Tory interests. The Times can look on the struggles of Liberals to secure their electoral rights with the same insolent complacency with which a town-fed pauper regards the labourer, working on the streets for his dollar a day.

The Dominion Government pretends to have moulded its fiscal policy in the interest of the development of manufacturing industries. High taxation has failed to be a successful medium for the accomplishment of such an object, and the one other great expedient for securing the desired end receives but scant alteration. If the Trent Valley Canal were completed there is no doubt that all along its route, thanks to unsurpassed water privileges, manufacturing towns and villages would spring into numerous being. Let us see if the Dominion Government will bestow a little earnest attention to the greatest possible factor in developing the manufacturing resources of Ontario.

"Love's Labour Lost," is suggested by the attitude of the Indians, towards the Dominion Franchise Act, which was framed in this respect by Sir John to add another pliable electoral element, that would respond kindly to his manipulation at election time. Judge Davis, Revising-officer for South Middlesex, recently visited the Indians on the Caradoc Reserve, with a view to their enrollment on the Dominion voters' list. The Judge interviewed all the eligible males in the three tribes, the Oneidas, the Chippewas, and the Munceys, but very few of them manifested any desire for the privilege proposed to be conferred upon them. There are about 250 males of mature years on the reserves, and two-thirds of these under the Indian clause of the Dominion Franchise Act are entitled to vote. But of the Muncey tribe, numbering 123 souls, not one consented to register. Of the Oneidas, numbering in all nearly 800, only three registered. Of the Chippewas, who number over 450; about twenty were enrolled. The general feeling is stated to have been one of utter indifference, or of open disinclination, to assume the new obligation proffered by the Revising-officer.

The London Socialists.

The Ring Leaders in Court.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—The Anarchists having fought their battle in the street last week will fight it in court during the coming week. The disclaimers that have been entered from all sides by the authorized representatives of the genuine laboring classes have, however, deprived the leaders of the disturbances of the only ground upon which they could have claimed any leniency, and they will doubtless be summarily dealt with. It is expected an attempt will be made to martyrize the persons indicted, and the noted Anarchists of the metropolis are arranging to be present in force, but the wantonness of the outbreak is so generally recognised that the magistrate will not be disposed to tolerate any harangues or other nonsense, and the cases will be quietly and ignominiously disposed of.

How to Improve Dairy Herds.

Prof. Berrie the Ontario Agricultural College says:—"It is a well known fact that the cows of the Province produce only one half of the milk that they should. A good cow should give at least 5,000 pounds of milk per season. Select from the best of the common stock and weed out of all the poor cows; keep a weekly record of the yield of each cow, and make frequent tests of the quality of the milk. This can be done in the following manner:—1. Register the number or the name of each cow in a book; twice a week weigh every cow's milk night and morning, and register the weight of the milk opposite the cow's name. 2. Set each cow's milk in glass tubes of equal size, and note the results in quantity of cream. The best cows will give the best average during the longest period of time. Remember that the bull is one-half of the herd. The male largely imparts the milking quality to the heifer calf. Breed from the best cows; use a bull coming from a renowned milking family. Raise only the best heifers and feed them well. From the first calf keep up the flow as long as possible in the fall. Dispose of two or three cows every year, selecting the poorest by record of the year. A good milch cow has a mild, peaceful appearance and a gentle disposition. The frame or structure should be well developed, tapering towards the front or arrow, rather broad about the forequarters. She should have a wide rump, large udder, and clean neck. The milk veins and udder should be large. The escutcheon should be broad and regular in shape. A milk cow is most productive between the ages of five and ten years.

A MAID FORLORN.

BY THE DUCHESS.

Not waiting to summon the housekeeper, with her own trembling fingers she undoes the fastening of the gate; and, forgetful of fatigue and fear, runs swiftly all down the curving avenue, never drawing breath until she reaches the hall-door, and knocks with eager haste.

It is opened by an old man in irreproachable livery, with a pock-marked skin, but a benign expression.

"Can I—see the—lady of the house?" begins Cecil, anxiously, almost timidly. "I have lost my way. I am a stranger here; and—I don't know my way home."

The old man looks concerned; and, stepping back, entreats her respectfully to enter.

"Pray, miss, come in! Dear me, dear me, what a night to be abroad!"—regarding with deep compassion the little woe-begone figure before him, with her furs all covered with snow and her blue eyes bright with tears. "There is no mistress of this house as yet," he goes on gravely; "but, if you will follow me, ma'am, Mrs. Richards, the housekeeper, will do what she can for you. Dear me, dear me, what a night!"

Cecil, hardly knowing whether she is relieved or sorry at the news that she must trust herself to the tender mercies of a housekeeper instead of a chatelaine, follows him through two brilliantly lighted halls, down a corridor, and into a warm, cozy room, where sits an elderly woman, knitting by a fire.

"Beg pardon, Mrs. Richards," says her first friend, in a mysterious whisper; "but this young lady has lost her way in the snow, and has come to ask shelter here."

"Bless me!" exclaims Mrs. Richards, looking over her spectacles. She rises, advances a little, and, having satisfied herself about Cecil's appearance, drops a slight courtesy.

"I'm so sorry to trouble you," says Cissy, quickly, with a rather nervous laugh, beginning to think that, after all, genuine adventures are not quite such enthralling delights as she has hitherto imagined. "But I don't know the neighborhood. I left home intending to reach the village; but I lost my way; and don't know what would have become of me, but that fortunately I found this place. The snow was so blinding, and the wind so strong, and—I am so tired."

Her voice quivers perceptibly, and two tears that will not be repressed steal down her pale cheeks. Sinking into a chair, she looks piteously at Mrs. Richards. That kind-hearted woman is not proof against so much beauty and distress combined. The little break in the voice does wonders—the tears still more; but the piteous, appealing glance makes a conquest of her forever. Then and there she falls in love with Miss Rivers.

"My dear young lady, you are quite worn out!" she cries, coming quickly to her side, and hastily removing the snow-crowned hat and the damp jacket. "Peters, bring some brandy directly."

"Oh, no!" says Cecil faintly.

"But, indeed, my dear, I insist," returns Mrs. Richards, putting up one hand authoritatively as though to prevent further discussion; and Cissy, being too weak to do battle, she has her own way, and soon has her young charge ensconced in a large arm-chair before the fire. She has bathed her feet and hands, and has even unearthed from one old family chest upstairs a tiny pair of quaint black velvet slippers that suit Cissy wonderfully well. Indeed, after a little while, Miss Rivers declares herself quite recovered both in mind and body, and not a bit the worse for her fatigue and anxiety.

"I felt so strange," she says, presently, with a languid smile, "when Peters said there was no mistress in the house. Is there no one here but you?"

"There's the master," replies Mrs. Richards, looking up from her knitting. "But he has been here only four days. I lived with his uncle, the old master, for twenty years, and when he died six months ago, Mr. Craven fell in for the property; but he was abroad then, and only returned to England a few weeks since. I believe he knows about as little of the neighborhood as you do, miss; indeed, I am the only one in the house who does know it, as the old lot except myself left in a body on the master's death, and Mr. Craven brought all his present staff of servants with him from his other place in Kent."

Cissy flushes, and looks distressed.

"If nobody here knows anything about the neighborhood," she says, nervously, "how am I to let mamma hear where I am, and that I am safe?"

"May I ask where you live, miss?" demands Mrs. Richards, quietly.

"At Branksmere. It must be a long way from this. You know it?"

"Branksmere! The Whitleys' old place—and this is Oaklands. My certie, but you have had a walk!" exclaims the housekeeper, lifting her hands in dismay. "Why, it is four miles from here by the common, and eight by the road! And what an evening for such a journey! See—how dark the night has grown"—drawing aside the curtains to peer out. "I fear no human being could find his way to Branksmere this hour, in such weather, unless he knew the road well, and even then it would be dangerous to make the attempt. Hear how the storm rages, and the wind bowls; and the snow comes thick and fast! It is a wild time, I'm thinking, we shall have before the morning. But rest easy, miss; if, as you say, you told your mamma you were going to the village, she will believe you are safe there with Mrs. Stilton of the inn."

"I hope so," says Cissy, with a sigh.

At this moment there is a knock at the door, and somebody, without waiting for permission, opens it and walks boldly in. The new-comer is a young man of about twenty-nine, tall, and finely formed, with a well-shaped head. So much can be discerned in the shadow; and then he comes quickly up to the table, right within the ray of the lamp, so that Cissy can see him distinctly.

He is evidently "the master," the hero of the hour, the one ingredient indispensable if she would throw a touch of romance into the adventure; and therefore it is sadly dispiriting that at first sight Cissy must acknowledge him disappointing. In spite of his fine figure and commanding height, he is like anything in the world but a Greek god. In fact he is decidedly plain. His mouth is large, his nose is long, his eyes—his only redeeming feature—are a dark gray, kindly and honest. His hair does not admit of description, being cropped so closely to his head, in the prevailing fashion of the present day, as to be almost invisible. His forehead is somewhat too square, yet there is a gentleness, a brightness, and withal an amount of strength about his face that redeems its want of beauty.

"May I come in, Mrs. Richards?" says the young man, with a smile that lights his whole face—perhaps he is smiling at the absurdity of his question, delivered from the middle of the room.

Mrs. Richards courtesies and bids him welcome. Then he comes a little nearer, even to the hearth-rug, and addresses himself to his unexpected guest.

"Peters has just told me of your unlucky walk," he says, politely. "I am so sorry about it; but glad more than I can say that you found your way here."

He is gazing with suppressed, but evident curiosity at the pretty girl, who appears half lost in the embrace of the big arm-chair, and who has raised herself and is gazing back at him shyly, with heightened color, but clear earnest eyes.

"I hope you are quite comfortable," he goes on, with increased cordiality, now he has seen her. "I know Mrs. Richards has done all she can for you; but"—hospitably—"dinner is ready, and you must be hungry, you know, and I thought I would come in myself and ask you to dine with me. There is nobody but myself."

This wind-up to his speech is so naive that Miss Rivers has much ado to suppress the smile that lurks in the corners of her mouth, threatening every moment to betray her. This is an adventure with a vengeance! She begins to feel like a heroine in a novel, all but in one point. He is right; she is hungry, disgracefully, most unromantically hungry, and thinks with a pleasure not to be subdued of the dinner beyond.

An hour ago when first she arrived, she had felt too exhausted to partake of anything Mrs. Richards had laid before her; but, now that recovery had set in and warmth and rest have done their work, she can not help remembering she has eaten nothing since two o'clock, and that it is now almost seven. Yet will it not be rather a strange thing to dine tete-a-tete with her unknown host? And yet again, will it not seem prudish to refuse, as evidently he sees nothing in it? In her perplexity she glances appealingly at the only other woman in the room.

Mrs. Richards is equal to the occasion.

"I think, Miss Rivers, some dinner will do you good," she says, respectfully. "You have eaten nothing since you came. And, if you will permit me, I shall have a cup of tea for you here directly dinner is at an end."

Now this last is a master-stroke on the part of Mrs. Richards! It gives Cissy a feeling of protection, a sort of conviction that she belongs to Mrs. Richards, and that—though parted from her for a little while—she will ultimately be expected to return and deliver herself up to her rightful owner.

She smiles at Mr. Craven—Cissy's smile is a "thing of beauty and joy forever"—and, rising, accepts the arm he offers her, and walks away with him demurely to the dining-room. With the utmost gravity, yet with a good deal of pleasant converse, they both get through a capital dinner; and, by the time it is ended, they discover they both know almost everything it is necessary to know about each other.

Cissy has had a little claret, has eaten all the walnuts Mr. Craven has broken for her, and an unlimited supply of candied fruit, when an ormolu clock somewhere behind her tinkles softly. She starts a little, and turning, sees it on the chimney-piece, and that it is half-past eight.

"So late!" she murmurs. "Who could have believed it?"

She glances at her host, her face full of genuine surprise, and he feels intensely flattered.

"I am so glad you haven't felt bored," he says, politely, carefully suppressing the warmth he could willingly have thrown into his tone.

"Bored! No, indeed!" But here memory whispers in her ear. Her expression changes, and she glances involuntarily toward one of the windows. "I could quite say I have enjoyed myself," she says, with a rather pensive smile, "if I were positive mamma is not at this moment enduring agonies of fright on my account."

She rises from her chair; so does Mr. Craven from his; and, as though divining her thought, he goes to the window, opens the shutters, and, throwing up the sash, they both gaze upon the thick darkness without. It is still snowing. Upon the sill the flakes have grown and mounted, until they have reached the first pane. With a shiver he pulls down the sash, and they return to the grateful fire.

"You may be sure she believes you safe in the village, under Mrs. Stilton's care," he says, soothingly, anxious to restore her to peace of mind.

"She may, if she has not sent a messenger to the village to inquire," is the doubtful answer.

"Oh, no! She wouldn't do that, you know, such a severe night. Who would go? I'm quite convinced she hasn't done that," he asserts, earnestly, though it would have puzzled him to give a reason for his assertion.

"You think she has not?" asks Cecil, still doubtfully, though longing to feel as convinced on the subject as he—apparently—is. Some hope revives within her as she remembers that the servants in her house are as ignorant of their way to the village as the servants in this.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its salability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $200 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through subagents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

A RED LETTER DAY IN PETERBOROUGH

"BEWARE THE IDES OF MARCH"

Said the grave soothsayers to Julius Cæsar as he passed in triumphant procession to the Sacred Lupercalia; and within a month Julius lay dead at the base of Pompey's Pillar. But we do not fear the Ides of March, and all the lovers of Good Clothing in Peterborough may well hail this month of March, 1886, for it will witness such a revolution in the Clothing Trade as the County of Peterborough has never seen before.

GOUGH, THE WONDERFUL CHEAP MAN,

Is now with you, and presents for your inspection the Most Beautiful and Complete Line of

READY-MADE CLOTHING

in Mens' Boys' and Childrens' wear, between Montreal and Toronto and at prices that will make them all hunt grass.

No enumeration of prices made here could give an adequate idea of the IMMENSE BARGAINS MR. GOUGH is now giving in his New store. But as seeing is believing, call and see for yourself.

I may add that I will clothe any Father and his five big Sons with a Splendid All-wool Suit each, for $30, or $5 per single Suit. Remember, six for $30, or one for $5. Same six elsewhere would cost you $60, or just double.

And this is not all. I will give you the Choicest Worsted Suits to be had in the market, for $9, and I guarantee the same will sell at other places for $18.

Nor is this all. Bear in mind, for with every suit I give a guarantee that it is just as I represented, or I will refund the money to the purchaser within one week from day of purchase.

NEWS OF THE TOWN.

"El Padre" Cigars.

Universally acknowledged to be the finest 10c cigar manufactured. Don't be persuaded to take other brands. No chemicals or artificial flavoring used.

A Remark By the Way.

A gentlemen returning home last night from Burdette's lecture was heard to remark to a companion: 'Now I' s'pose Burdette got as much as $100 for talking a little while last night, but there were two fellows near where I sat, who did twice as much talking and didn't get a——cent."

Police Court.

Police Magistrate Dumble this morning dismissed the charge against John O'Conner for larceny, made by Francis Tully, with costs to the informant, Tully having intimated that he desired to withdraw the charge. The robes in question were ordered to be returned.

What We May Expect.

Skating and curling to be renewed with fresh vim at the rink.

And a general blockade of country roads.

A creditable civic corps of citizen soldiers to be organized in Peterborough.

And one to be required for home duty if the pugnacity of the Salvationists is further developed.

The town council to arrest a chief of police.

A long term to elapse before we have another feast of humour like that of last night.

The midnight oil to be spent on costumes for the Band Carnival.

Fresh to strong winds from the southwest and west; mostly fair, colder weather, with local snow flurries.

A big bumping jubilee at the "Shallow" barbeiks to-night.

"Queen's Own."

Brand of cigars. Try them. Very choice. S. DAVIS & SONS. Factories, Cote St., Montreal. Toronto Branch:—34 Church St.

Gospel Army Entertainment.

A five-cent gospel entertainment will be held in Bradburn's Opera House, next Friday night.

Young People's Social.

The Young People's Association in connection with the Baptist church, intend holding another of their interesting entertainments in the school room, on Friday evening, Feb. 26th.

On Ice.

A number of fine photos of Mr. E. J. Hartley, champion fancy skater, are on exhibition in the window of Mr. H. LeBrun. The photos are much admired. Mr. Hartley looks well on ice.

Salvation Army.

The local corps, of the Salvation Army is holding special services nightly for the past three days. The greatest excitement prevails in the ranks, and great things are reported. The big bumping jubilee takes place to-night.

The Coming Carnival.

Next Friday's is the date of the second of the Fire Brigade Band carnivals. Trim your dresses and be ready for the carnival. Don't forget the children's carnival in the afternoon, and the Shakesperian carnival in the evening. Fourteen valuable prizes are offered. See posters for particulars.

A Neighberly Opinion.

"The Peterborough Board of trade is defunct. We think this is a pity, as such Boards, if they exclude politics, and devote their attention to the development of local interests, are very useful in any town, situated as Peterborough is, in the centre of a magnificent agricultural country," so the Port Hope Times thinks.

Bob Burdette.

Bob Bardette, the funny man of the Burlington Hawkeye, has delivered his famous lecture, "Advice to Young Men," to a Peterborough audience. The seating capacity of the Opera House was taxed to its utmost. Rev. Mr. Bradshaw introduced the lecturer. The audience said when he appeared, "Well, if Burdette means a small bird, that's him." He is a man about the size and form of Mr. Beavis. His sarcastic upper lip is covered with a fierce, sharply-pointed, black moustache, which materially assists him in pointing his jokes. He has also two hawkeyes that act as exhaust pipes for his surplus stock of wit and humor, set in a sharp featured face; otherwise his appearance is like that of any other mortal. When he commenced his lecture, everybody was ready to laugh at the slightest provocation. They had not long to wait, nor was there much time for intermission until he concluded. His advice was particularly good and not hard to take. Advice is generally the last thing a person wants, but when it is given in the form of a sugar-coated pill, as Burdette administers it, it is hard to refuse. As an exchange has said, his lecture is as full of wit and humor as an egg is of meat, and fresher than most of them. The audience, though of the largest, was also most orderly. Even the immortals in the gallery were as appreciative and orderly as any. Everybody was delighted with the lecture and lecturer, and should Burdette ever come to town again he will receive a warm reception and a full house.

Complaints.

Numerous complaints are made against the nightly parades of the Salvation Army. It is thought George street is not wide enough for the army, with its big drum, and the general traffic.

Town Council.

A special meeting of the town council is called for to-morrow, Wednesday evening, at the usual hour and place, for the purpose transacting general business of importance. The appointment of a chief of police will in all probability be made.

Recovered.

Mr. Owen McCarthy, who was injured by the collision between his team and a Grand Junction train last week, and who has been since staying at Cavanagh's hotel, recovered sufficiently to take the train for his home this morning. He lives about a mile from Keene.

Complimentary.

Bob Burdette in doing the town yesterday visited the Nicholls Hospital, the Hazel Brae Home and other places of interest to be seen, including a drive along the banks of the river to view the grand water power the town boasts of. He expressed himself as delighted with the town, and thought it the liveliest and most city-like he had yet visited in Canada.

A New Dry Good Firm.

The dry-goods firm well known as Fair, VanEvery and Co., has been dissolved and a special partnership entered into between Messrs. Robert Fair and William VanEvery to trade under the name of R. Fair, who assumes the future management of the business. The old firm during their two years in Peterborough have developed a good trade and worked up a large connection and no doubt the new business will be equally deserving of the extensive patronage of the public, which THE EXAMINER hopes may be accorded to it.

Partnership Changes.

The partnership heretofore existing between Messrs. W. J. Morrow and T. O. Rush, under the title of W. J. Morrow & Co., has been dissolved, Mr. Morrow retiring. Mr. H. Rush enters the business in partnership with Mr. T. O. Rush, the firm to be known hereafter as Rush Bros. Both members of the firm are well known and highly thought of. In addition to their personal popularity, the members of the new firm possess a thorough, practical knowledge of the trade and of the wants of the public, and no doubt they will be liberally patronized by the public. The new firm has the best wishes of the EXAMINER for success.

Y.M.C.A. Provincial Convention.

The annual convention of the Young Men's Christian Associations of Ontario and Quebec is to take place at Hamilton on 18th and 19th inst. It is expected there will be a large attendance. Those going from here are the Rev. A. H. Munro, Geo. E. Williams and John S. Hall, with, perhaps, some others. The boys' branch of the Peterborough Association will be represented by Jos. Eastland and Fred. Ratcliff, the president and secretary of the branch. An address on "Our English Bible" will be delivered before the convention by the Rev. A. H. Munro, and the local secretary, Mr. Williams, will read a paper on "What the Associations are doing for young men socially, and what more can be done." A number of practical questions in relation to Y.M.C.A. work will be discussed, and a very beneficial time is expected. The general secretaries will have a conference on the 17th immediately preceding the convention.

Try the "Ten Cent" Store for fine plush articles for Holiday Presents. Toys and fancy goods by the car load.

Y. M. C. A. Bible Class.

The young men's Bible class will be held as usual this evening, at 8 o'clock. In the absence of the Rev. Mr. Wallace, the general secretary will conduct the class to-night.

Prizes on Exhibition.

The prizes to be given at the coming Fire Brigade Band carnival, are on exhibition in the window of Mr. A. McNeil's store. They are undoubtedly beautiful and valuable, and no doubt will be sharply contested for.

What They are Saying.

While all my life connected with the "old time" insurance system, I have from the first seen the merit, popularity and advantage of your system.—The Mutual Reserve.—Sheppard Homans.

Hung Fire.

The meet of the gun club did not go off yesterday afternoon, but hung fire till next Monday, owing to the inclement state of the weather. The gunners hope to assemble next Monday, when they will try to make up for lost time.

Skating and Curling.

Skating and curling have revived at the Charlotte street rinks. The ice is in fine condition and affords excellent sport. The curlers are engaged in playing in the thirteen point game for the President and Vice-President's medal and for the subscribed medals.

A Practical Joke.

A young man strayed into a jeweller's workshop yesterday, to get the latest current gossip. The "Simeon Tappertit" of the establishment having nothing new, thought he would manufacture something. He took a cork rimmed eye-glass, smoked it slightly, and handed it to the unsuspecting gossip-seeker to get a focus on a marriage ring. He took the glass and tried it to both eyes, but could not get the desired focus. The employes of the shop then turned their victim out into the cold street to the gaze of the vulgar public with eyes rimmed with soot. He happily met a good Samaritan at the door who gave him a hint which sent him back to the shop for repairs. He emerged from the place after a time a wiser and a cleaner man.

Street Disturbances.

During the street parade of the Salvation Army last night, a number of lively incidents occurred. Two parties, one from Ashburnham and another from Cavan, attempted at different times to break into the ranks and received every attention from the Army. The valiant Ted Webb belabored the assailants so unmercifully with a torch and cane respectively, that they were forced to beat a hasty retreat. A cornet was also used to quiet an unruly fellow. Excitement ran high and the streets were crowded with a throng of eager spectators. The army marched triumphantly to the barracks with the greatest display of noise, light and color possible, frightening all the horses along the street. During their march they nearly caused a runaway, by shocking a horse that had a good ear for music. Policeman McGinty laid hands on one of the parties who endeavored to break the army ranks. He, however, allowed him to go, on receiving a sufficient security for his appearance when wanted, and a promise from an officer of the army to have the matter ventilated in the police court. No action has been taken yet.

Don't be Duped.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brand of cigars, which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pay them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby.

A Sure Remedy for Neuralgia.

Neuralgia is one of the most common and distressing complaints incidental to this climate. It is not confined to any particular season, for whilst most general in the winter seasons, yet many suffer its excruciating agony in the heat of summer. In late years this form of disease has become better known, and consequently the means of relief have become greatly increased in numbers, as well as in efficacy. Among the most powerful and penetrating combinations, placed within the reach of the public for the relief of neuralgia, we can mention no remedy equal to or more certain than Polson's NERVILINE. Its power over pain is something wonderful, and we advise a trial for neuralgia, or any other painful complaints. Nerviline is sold by all druggists at 25 cents a bottle, also trial bottles at 10 cents.

The recent thaw, rain, and sleet have caused floods and the destruction of bridges in the vicinity of Toronto.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Fifth Parliament—Third Session.

MONDAY, FEB. 15th.

There was a thin attendance at the Local Legislature to-day, as is usual on the first day of the week. The time for receiving petitions for private bills was extended until the 22nd inst. Amongst the bills entered was one by Mr. Monck to extend the Land Titles Act, and another by Mr. Balfour to amend the Franchise Act of 1885.

Mr. Drury asked if it is the intention of the Government to amend the Municipal Act so as to reduce the number of members of the county councils, or to appoint a comission to inquire into the matter.

Mr. Mowat replied that the Government did not intend to issue a commission. Two years ago a committee had been appointed to look into the matter. It would be much better to get that committee together again and have the evidence so gathered produced, then the matter could be considered in the House.

Mr. McIntyre moved for an address to His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor praying that his Honor will cause to be laid before this House a return showing the original expenditure made in the purchase of the grounds and erection of the buildings known as Government House, all expenditure since made in repairs and maintenacne or otherwise on account of the same, and of any estimate made or to be made before such return is made of the value of the said property; also the extent of area of said property; and of all correspondence between the Government of Ontario and the Dominion, or any members of the same respectively, relating to the necessity for or maintenance of the Government House. He said he had no intention of reflecting upon the Lieutenant-Governor, but he thought the expenditure should be more strictly under the cognizance of the House, and therefore he took occasion to move for the above papers.

Mr. Fraser replied that the grounds about Government House had never cost the Province anything, and that there had been no communication between the two Governments regarding the matter. Otherwise there was no objection to the return.

Mr. Meredith hoped the Government would remove the unsightly fence about the Government House grounds. The Opposition propounded a number of unimportant questions and the House adjourned.

The estimates and the public accounts will be ready on Wednesday, and the Budget speech will be delivered on Thursday.

In the Railway Committee this morning the bill regarding the Leamington & St. Clair Railway was passed. It simply extends the time for construction.

Keene.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Good hay at thirteen dollars per ton here.

Frost and sleighing again cheer the heart of the busy idler, as well as the earnest worder.

The sudden changes in the weather are productive of much sickness, principally inflammations.

Little Robbie West passed away very suddenly, after seeming to improve for some little time. The immediate cause of death was considered by his physicians to be the formation of a clot in the heart. His bereaved mother and sisters have the heartfelt sympathy of the whole community.

Mr. Peter McNeil is recovering.

An unusually interesting council session was held this week. Keene was full of petitions, and the town hall held an unwonted number of yeomen and ratepayers, who made know their request to the august body who guard our township's interests. We hope to see a full report in THE EXAMINER.

The sale of Mr. Henry Burnham's property here, in village lots, was not a successful one. We have not learned the final issue yet.

The curling and skating have, of course, been suspended during the thaw, but are about to be resumed livelier than ever. The second grand carnival of the season will be be held, weather permitting, on Wednesday, the 24th inst. There are unusual attractions promised on the bills—notably the prizes—and all sorts of them—for all sorts of competitions—also the judges are sure to be impartial, being foreigners, one from Brockville, one from Toronto and one from Prince Edward.

There is a visible agitation among the dry bones of the temperance camp. How long before they arise to conquer? Power and patronage are good things sometimes.

The Bible Society's meeting was held in the Methodist Church Hall on Tuesday evening. Rev. Mr. Jones, of Lindsay, was the lecturer of the evening and delivered a most comprehensive and eloquent address. The meeting was not very well attended.

Entrance Examination.

Studies for High Schools and Collegiate Institutes.

As some changes have been made in drawing and literature for the next entrance examinations which will be held on July 5th, 6th and 7th, we publish for the benefit of teachers and pupils the clauses referring to these subjects.

The following is the limit of studies in the various subjects:—

Reading.—A general knowledge of the elements of vocal expression, with special reference to emphasis, inflection, and pause. The reading, with proper expression, of any selection in the Reader authorised for Fourth Book classes. The pupil should be taught to read intelligently as well as intelligibly.

Literature.—The pupil should be taught to give for words or phrases, meanings which may be substituted therefor, without impairing the sense of the passage; to illustrate and show the appropriateness of important words or phrases; to distinguish between synonyms in common use; to paraphrase difficult passages so as to show the meaning clearly; to show the connection of the thoughts in any selected passage: to explain allusions; to write explanatory or descriptive notes on proper or other names; to show that he has studied the lessons thoughtfully, by being able to give an intelligent opinion on any subject treated of therein that comes within the range of his experience or comprehension; and especially to show that he has entered into the spirit of the passage, by being able to read it with proper expression. He should be exercised in quoting passages of special beauty from the selections prescribed, and in reproducing in his own words, the substance of any of these selections, or of any part thereof. He should also obtain some knowledge of the authors from whose works these selections have been made.

Orthography and Orthoepy.—The pronunciation, the syllabication, and the spelling from dictation, of words in common use. The correction of words improperly spelled or pronounced. The distinctions between words in common use in regard to spelling, pronunciation, and meaning.

Writing.—The proper formation of the small and capital letters. The pupil will be expected to write neatly and legibly.

Geography.—The form and the motions of the earth. The chief definitions as contained in the authorized text-book; divisions of the land and the water; circles on the globe; political divisions; natural phenomena. Maps of America, Europe, Asia, and Africa. Maps of Canada and Ontario, including the railway systems. The products and the commercial relations of Canada.

Grammar.—The sentence: its different forms. Words: their chief classes and inflections. Different grammatical values of the same word. The meanings of the chief grammatical terms. The grammatical values of phrases and of clauses. The nature of the clauses in easy compound and complex sentences. The government, the agreement, and the arrangement of words. The correction, with reasons therefor, of wrong forms of words and of false syntax. The parsing of easy sentences. The analysis of simple sentences.

Composition.—The nature and the construction of different kinds of sentences. The combination of separate statements into sentences. The nature and the construction of paragraphs. Variety of expression, with the following classes of exercise:—Changing the voice of the verb; expanding a word or a phrase into a clause; contracting a clause into a word or a phrase; changing from direct into indirect narration, or the converse transposition; changing the form of a sentence; expansion of given heads or hints into a composition; the contracting of passages; paraphrasing prose or easy poetry. The elements of punctuation. Short narratives or descriptions. Familiar letters.

Drawing.—For the examination in July, 1886, No. 4 or No. 5 of the drawing course for public schools will be accepted; after that date is intended to take the number prescribed by the regulations for the 4th class.

History.—Outlines of English history as heretofore.

Examination papers will be set in Literature from the following lessons in the New Ontario Readers, the only series now authorised for use.

Remarkable Recuperation.

D. M. Ferry & Co., the well-known Seedmen, of Detroit, Mich., announce that they are on their feet again and ready and anxious to receive orders for seeds from every one of their old customers, and from as many new ones as feel kindly disposed toward them. They are in condition to fill promptly every order with new seeds of the best quality.

On January 1st their immense warehouse was destroyed by fire. It was filled with probably the largest stock of assorted seeds ever gathered under one roof. Their books and papers were all saved, and every person who had ordered seeds of them will be supplied with his usual stock. They had large quantities of seeds in their warehouses on their seed farms, in the hands of their growers and not yet delivered and on the way from Europe, which, together with their fully stocked branch Seed Store in Windsor, Ont. close at hand, and the free and vigorous use of the telegraph and cable, enabled them to secure a new stock in a remarkably short time.

Before the fire was subdued they had secured new quarters and were devoting all their energies to their customers' interests. In thirty days from the fire they were in perfect working order again.

When we consider the magnitude of their business, the appalling destruction of property at the most unfortunate season of the year, we doubt if the annals of history furnish a case of such rapid recuperation. Such energy deserves success.

The Hardships of Firemen.

The Port Hope Times in speaking of the hardships endured by the gallant fire brigade of that town during Sunday night's fire, makes the following remarks:—"Very few of our citizens realize the hardships undergone by our volunteer fire brigade when on duty. That their efforts may be appreciated, by those who, from a warm room, or warmly wrapped, watch a fire, never think of the struggling firemen, we may describe the work of the Extinguishers on Sunday night. After reaching the hydrant, they were compelled to wade through icy water almost up to their necks, stand until the connection was made, and their clothes were frozen stiff; then rushing to the other extreme, they worked where it was almost an impossibility to breathe the red-hot atmosphere. After working all night and after the spectators had gone home, they found that the hose had frozen in the creek; and again they plunged into the water, and after loading their hose proceeded towards home—cold, sore, and wet to the skin. And all for what? Twenty dollars a year! Port Hope's firemen are among the best in Canada, and let us appreciate them."

Mr. Gladstone's Land Scheme.

A Subject Which Occupies all Minds—Home Rule Cast into the Shade Thereby.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—The Government's bill affecting the land laws will relate only to Ireland, though Mr. Gladstone is understood to have intimated privately that if the results prove favorable in Ireland he sees no objection to applying the same principle in Wales. The measure is practically the same as the one the late Conservative Ministry had prepared and was about to introduce in the House of Commons, when the hitherto obscure Mr. Collings thrust in his "little joker" of a declaration in favor of allotments to laborers, and caused the overthrow of that Ministry. It provides for raised as part of the public debt. The lands will not be re-sold, but will be rented to occupiers. This is probably as near the realization of Henry George's theories as is possible at the present time. Some of Mr. Gladstone's critics are suggesting that he ought to put the American Socialist in his Cabinet, since he has apparently swallowed his doctrines. The sneer, however, is unjust as applying especially to Mr. Gladstone. He is no more of a land reformer than any other British statesman of the day. The fact is that the whole nation has become imbued with the idea, and some of the most extensive holders of English estates are discussing the question how soon the Government will be and at what price they will conclude to sell. All this would have been impossible ten years ago, and only shows how fast history is made now-a-days. As to Home Rule, it is impossible as yet to tell what Mr. Gladstone has to propose. He is silent as an oyster, and it is doubtful if he opens his mouth before the re-assembling of Parliament on Thursday. It is conceded that he will offer as little in that line as he thinks he can, and yet return Mr. Parnell's support, however, lukewarm the matter may be.

Winnipeg's Frisky Weather.

A runaway horse in Winnipeg on Sunday, dashed through the window of the Merchants National Bank. On Monday a team dashed headlong into a funeral, wrecking the hearse and throwing the coffin out. Both runaways were killed. Such accidents are more frequent in Winnipeg than in the east on account of the cold.

A "Short-Cut" to the Sea.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 16.—Governor Washburn, President of the Sault Ste. Marie road, says that it will make Montreal a four hundred mile nearer seaport than New York. He says that it will be extended to Lake Michigan by May 1st, 1887.

AGAINST THEIR PRINCIPLES.

Hon. Mr. McLelan, our new Minister of Finance, is not by any means a brilliant man, but he has wit enough to appreciate the magnitude and the unmanagableness of the elephant, Sir Leonard Tilley left on his hands, and honesty enough to try to face the enormous deficit that confronts him. But Mr. McLelan has got into the wrong company to hope for any assistance in the application of honest or economic methods. Overwhelmed with the contemplation of the enormous deficit in the Dominion income, caused by the corrupt and extravagant expenditure of the present Tory Government, Mr. McLelan proposed retrenchment, yet at the very first step he is sat on by his cabinet collegues. He proposeed a reduction of ten per cent. in the salaries of the civil service employes, but his colleagues would'nt hear to it, and it appears we are to have no retrenchment. We are to drift-no, rather drive, on in the same ruinous manner, which has resulted in doubling the public debt in the short space of seven years and increasing the the annual expenditure from a little over twenty to nearly forty millions. Retrenchment is the only way in which we can retrieve the financial ruin, Conservative extravagance and misrule have brought upon us. We can't stand any more taxes. The tax-paying power is not equal to the task of supplying money to keep pace with the waste and recklessness of the Dominion Government. Last year we had a deficit of between two and three millions—an admitted deficit of over two millions and an actual deficit of four millions—this year the deficit will be nearer seven millions than anything else. The average annual deficit may be safely placed at four millions. The annual expenditure approximates dangerously close to forty millions, therefore with a reduction equvalent to an all-round reduction of ten per cent. in the controllable expenditure, the deficit would be largely made up. If it were not done it would be a step in the right direction. There could be a much more sweeping reduction than ten per cent. made in many departments without the least injury to the interests of the publicservice. With an honest and economical administration, something might be hoped for from an honest attempt at retrenchment, but with an administration which retains its hold or power chiefly by the skillfull adaptation of the public funds and public patronage, to such an end, there is no hope. The only hope is in replacing the present dishonest incapables with honest men. Till that is done we can expect little or no improvement, except in the wrong direction.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

According to the last report of the Minister of Public Works, there have been expended on Otonabee River works by the Ontario Government from Confederation to the year 1883, the sum of $4,962.43.

The total expenditure, chargeable to capital account on the various public works and buildings in Ontario, was last year $185,584.37, and the total expenditure since Confederation amounts to $4,976,637.70.

Crime in Ontario seems to be on the decrease. There was a decrease of 5¼ per cent. in 1885, as compared with the commitments to the common gaol in 1884, or 11,427 against 12,061.

The organs may deny, in season and out of season, that there is any significance of a political nature in the Dominion Franchise Act. Yet we have the coming Conservative candidate in South Waterloo, Mr. T. Cowan, together with the party wire-pullers, called in to consult with the Revising Barrister and his clerk, in regard to the preparation of the voters' lists. It is very thoughtful of the Revising Officer to consult the Tory candidate as to what names—of parties who would vote for him—were to be put on the list, or as to what names—of parties who would vote against him—were to be kept off the lists.

Some months ago the Education Department issued a circular warning teachers, inspectors, and trustees against "the illegal introduction into the Public Schools of annotated editions of the authorised Text Books, particularly the Fourth Reader. Trustees who do not prevent the use of such annotations in school are liable to the loss of the school grant, and teachers who permit their use are liable to have their certificates suspended. It would be well for parents and guardians who complain of the cost of school books, to see when they are asked to make purchases of this kind that they are not spending their money for what is unnecessary, and at the same time contributing to a violation of the law.

There is to be a convention of the Liberals of New Brunswick on Thursday next, to discuss the political situation. The failure of the Dominion Government to negotiate a fishery treaty with the United States is a sad blow to our sea-side brethren.

The Toronto Mail puts side by side a growl respecting school books, and an article on "The Mound Builders." It does not need a very vivid imagination to deduce from this accidental conjunction of positions, an important fact—"making a mountain out of a mole hill.

Mr. Charlton in a recent speech pointed out, as samples of the shocking corruption countenanced at Ottawa, that 7,000 miles of timber limits were granted for $37,500, to friends and heelers for the Dominion Government while the government of Ontario, for 6,700 miles, 300 miles less, received $1,616,000. One timber limit on Hunter's Island was sold to an Ottawa government supporter for $7,500, and resold by the purchaser for $850,000. Can one wonder that those benefitted by the dispensation of such "mercies" should regard the government as intensely "patriotic," and vote every time for its continuance in power? It wouldn't pay to do anything else.

A Premier's Pledges.

Hamilton Times.

The story of Sir John Macdonald's bargain with Messrs. O'Donohue, Smith, Boyle and others in 1882, which he afterwards violated by refusing to take Mr. O'Donohue into the Cabinet, is racily told in the Chicago Times, from which we copy the account. There are several lessons to be learned from it. One is that Sir John Macdonald knew all along that his great N. P. was a fraud. He had no confidence in the popularity of the Tilley tariff, or he would not have felt the necessity for getting votes by tricking the Irish Catholics and playing them off against the Orangemen. In the light of events, how much are Sir John Macdonald's promises worth? He made a deliberate bargain to take Mr. O'Donohue into the Cabinet, and he has never carried that bargain out. Mr. O'Donohue is still nothing greater than a private member of the Senate. But the reported dickering between Sir John and the Catholic political leaders in 1882, caused a soreness among the Orangemen, and Sir John had to make them a promise to quiet them. That promise was made in public. He agreed to have a measure for Orange incorporation carried through Parliament. The Orangemen were pacified by the promise, but it too was broken. When the Orange Bill was introduced by a private member, Sir John voted for it, but he did not speak in its favor or make any apparent effort to secure its adoption. Mr. John White, the member who introduced the Bill, was given some blind shares in a Colonization Company, and his clamor for incorporation died away. When another election comes on, Sir John will be in a splendid position to claim the support of the Orange and Green. To the Orangemen he will say: "See how I fooled "O'Donohue and his crowd." To the Catholics he will appeal on the ground that he cheated the Orangemen out of their Incorporation Bill. The man, of any nationality or religion, who believes Sir John Macdonald under any circumstances, is taking a great risk.

Poison at the Front Door.

No article entering so generally into the food of every family has been found more villainously adulterated than baking powder. For the purpose of underselling those powders of absolute purity and wholesomeness which alone are safe for use in food, hundreds of dealers are putting up baking powders with cheap and adulterated cream of tartar, which contains lime, earth, etc., adding strength by the free use of alum.

These adulterated powders are "shoved" upon the public with the greatest presistency. Many are given away—left in samples at private residences with circulars containing bogus analysis and certificates and false representations as to their value, etc. The worst of them are introduced to the housekeeper's attention by fraudulent tricks or by bogus samples, the articles when purchased being found to be entirely different from the samples shown. The fact that a powder is sampled from door to door is sufficient to condemn it. A first-class article will sell on its merits. No manufacturer whose goods are of value can afford to give them away, or to test them from door to door, and none but the cheapest make and most inferior or unmarketable goods require to be distributed free in order to get the public to use them, and this method is adopted only by parties who have failed to dispose of their wares through ordinary and legitmate channels.

Free samples of articles of food left at the house should be regarded with suspicion. There is no guarantee of their wholesomeness, while there is real danger that they contain a fatally poisonous compound. Many instances of poisoning from the use of such samples are recorded.

The only safe way is to consign all such samples immediately to the ash barrel, and to turn a deaf ear to the statements made by their venders. It is not worth while to trifle with life and health to the extent of testing every doubtful baking powder that comes along. Better to rely upon an old and reliable brand, like the Royal, which has by a quarter of a century's constant use proved its perfect wholesomeness and efficiency, or some other brand that is not so worthless and cheap that its proprietors can afford to give it away by the cart-load or waste it in making innumerable tests. It is in its favor that the Royal Baking Powder is never given away, sold by means of lotteries, nor accompanied by chromos, spoons, crockery or other gifts, except the gifts of absolute purity, wholesomeness, full weight, and superlative leavening power. Its own merits have been its chief advertisement, and they have secured for it the constant patronage of the American people to an extent beyond the combined sale of all other baking powders. The Royal Baking Powder is certified by the Government chemists as absolutely pure and perfect.

The Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. Winnipeg, has received about eighty letters from farmers in the district desirous of securing the services of young immigrants for the coming summer.

Mayor Westbrook of Winnipeg lost his wallet in a street car during the late carnival at St. Paul. He reported the matter to the police, giving an accurate description of the party he suspected of the theft. Three days after the suspect, while at church, managed to return the wallet to the pocket of the mayor's overcoat.

A MAID FORLORN.

BY THE DUCHESS.

"I know it," returns Mr. Craven, with considerable force; "she would, of course, wait until the morning. Why, it would be inhuman, actually unsafe, I think, to send any one abroad on such a night as this."

"And mamma is not inhuman!" murmurs Cecil, with a slight smile, staring thoughtfully into the glowing coals beneath her.

Over the chimney-piece is a large picture, finely painted. It represents an elderly lady, with a charming face, with brown hair arranged in little curls on either cheek, a handsome bust, generously displayed, a waist well under her arms, and a small foot protruding from beneath the satin gown that partly covers her. It is the foot that attracts Cecil's attention. It is very small, and clad in black velvet. She laughs.

"I hope you are not making merry over my elderly relative," says Mr. Craven, severely.

"Far be it from me; she is much too uncomfortably dignified to excite mirth in any one. I was only thinking of that old adage; 'It is ill waiting for dead men's shoes,' and wondering whether it is as 'ill' to wait for a dead woman's, because I am sure I am at this moment wearing your—" She hesitates.

"Great-grandmother?" he prompts.

"Great-grandmother's slippers," concludes Cissy, laughing again, and looking down at her velvet shoe, the very fac-simile of that worn by the dead and gone grandam.

"What miraculously small feet my great-grandmother must have had!" says Mr. Craven solemnly, regarding her foot with interest.

"Oh, no! These shoes are quite loose on me," she replies, innocently.

"I can see that," he remarks, unwisely, and regrets his speech a second later, when to his chagrin the pretty foot is hastily withdrawn.

A silence follows, and then Miss Rivers, as though the thought has just occurred to her, says gently—

"I must now bid you good-night, and go to Mrs. Richards; she has promised me tea at nine."

"But it is not nearly that yet. It wants quite a quarter to it," protests her host in a somewhat injured tone. "Pray do not hurry yourself. Do you know"—warningly—"that from the moment you join Mrs. Richards until you elect to go to bed, she will spend the time telling you old tales about the family. I know it, because I have been through it. And it is no joke. Every story is thirty minutes good, not a second less."

"How nice! I adore old stories," says Miss Rivers, sweetly.

"You won't adore hers; there's not a bit of go in them, not a murder, or a ghost, or a suicide, or anything amusing from start to finish. We are a wretched lot, you know, when all is told"—alluding apologetically to his ancestors. "Don't let yourself in for it, if you love yourself."

"You greatly relieve my mind," says Cissy. "I couldn't sleep in a house where a ghost walked."

"Couldn't you? I should find even that poor excitement welcome, so dreary is my present existence. You can't think"—dejectedly—"how slow I find it here, with no society. Your coming to-night has been such a relief. Up to this I have had to endure the Major; and, though I'm generally considered rather good-natured than otherwise, he is much too much for any fellow. He was agent, you see, in my uncle's time—who never attended to anything—and now, before retiring from office—thank goodness, he is retiring—he insisted on coming down here with me to see after things, and behave uncivilly, and harass the very lives out of my unfortunate tenants."

"Why do you let him?" reproachfully.

"I am afraid to interfere; and besides, it doesn't matter much, because he can't stay long; and I'll make it up to them afterward. The gout overtook him yesterday. I'm devoutly thankful that it came down upon him heavily, as I have been spared his inane twaddle for a few hours at least."

"Poor man!" says Cissy, vaguely, leaving it doubtful whether she intends her sympathy for the Major or his wearied friend.

"I have often wished I hadn't come here at all," continues Mr. Craven; "my place in Kent is so much prettier and far more comfortable; but I was obliged to do so. He talked me into it. But now"—warmly—"I feel I owe even the Major a debt of gratitude, as my coming has enabled me to be of some slight use to you."

"Even that miserable solace is denied you," returns Miss Cissy, with a calm smile, "if you reflect that, even if you had remained in Kent, Mrs. Richards would still have taken me in, and been very good to me."

"True," rejoins her crest-fallen host; "I have not been of much service to you, after all—have I?"

Cissy is conscience-stricken.

"Yes, indeed you have!" she says impulsively, "It wasn't civil of me to say that, was it, when you have been more than kind to me?" Then, as though ashamed of her amiability, she goes on hurriedly, with a rather brilliant color—"Good-night, Mr. Craven; I must go, or Mrs. Richards will think I have vanished in as mysterious a manner as I came."

"You consign me to solitude?"—half-jestingly, half in reproach.

"A cigar will no doubt console you effectually."

"And Mrs. Richards's company will be a relief to you. I shouldn't, of course, dream of doing combat with a woman of Mrs. Richards's attractions. May I show you the way to her room? As yet the house is strange to you. She has tea at nine, I believe you said"—with a calm glance, but a faint accession of color that betrays itself even beneath the bronze that Egypt has lent to his face. "Do you—do you think, if I asked her, she would give me some? If there is anything on earth I covet, it is a cup of tea at nine."

"You know Mrs. Richards four days longer than I do," answers Miss Cissy, coolly; "you can ask her."

So he does ask her after a short preamble about nothing in particular. Mrs. Richards makes her Sunday courtesy, and assures him she will feel it a great honor to entertain him; whereupon he thanks her gracefully, and, telling Miss Rivers he has some letters to answer, but will be back again in no time, he leaves her for the present. And indeed his promise holds good; because the time that elapses before he again makes his appearance is scarcely worthy of record.

CHAPTER III.

Cecil falls into a sound sleep that night almost as soon as her head touches the pillow.

All through the silent, dark some hours she lies, scarce stirring, until morning forces itself rudely through her chamber windows, morning so called; but it is dull, and dark as twilight.

Springing from her bed, Cecil runs barefooted to the window, and pushing back the curtains gazes eagerly on the outer world. Nothing but the same uniform white meets her eyes. Through the whole night the snow has fallen unceasingly—even now is falling, thickly, steadily, as when she last watched it yesternight.

The drive below is on a level with the grassy banks on either side; the fir-trees are bending to the very earth, so weighty is their dazzling burden. Upon the window-sill a little brown bird lies dead, pathetic in its stiff and mournful quiet.

Cissy, putting out her hand, raises it, and tries to warm it into life again within her hands and bosom, but to no avail, and sadly she lays it where she found it, and heaps a tiny mound of snow upon it. And then, shivering, she closes the window and rings her bell for one of the maids.

She dresses rapidly, though with a mind pre-occupied. The prospect of having to spend another day at Oaklands, with no chance of letting her mother know of her safety, fills her with anguish. Depressed, but pretty; perplexed, but indescribably charming, in her soft, navy-blue serge gown, with some old lace ruffles, borrowed from Mrs. Richards, or rather from her host's ancestors, at her throat and wrists, she goes dejectedly down-stairs in the direction of the housekeeper's room.

Being obliged to pass the library on her way thither, she encounters Mr. Craven emerging from it, some letters in his hands. He bids her good-morning in his most genial tone, hopes she has slept well, and that she has not suffered from yesterday's imprudence. Miss Rivers thanks him sweetly, and tells him she has slept well, and that, so far as she can judge at present, she has not succumbed to cold. Then the lachrymose expression returns to her face, and she says mournfully—

"Did you ever see such a day! Worse than yesterday. What shall I do about mamma?"

"I have arranged all that," answered her host, pleasantly. "The post-boy—wretched youth—plowed his way up here as usual, this morning, in spite of wind and weather, and he undertook to show one of my men the way to Branksmere. So I wrote your mother a polite and reassuring note, to say you were all right with Mrs. Richards, but that I feared you could not return to-day, as no horse could travel."

"Oh, how good of you!" says Cecil, gladly. "How can I thank you enough! You have taken quite a load off my mind, and made my heart as light as a feather. But I wish you had told me before you sent your messenger, as I too should have liked to write mamma a little note."

"It was so early"—gently—"and I hoped you were sleeping. And I would not for worlds have had you disturbed after all the fatigue you experienced yesterday."

Miss Rivers is touched by his kindness and thoughtfulness.

"How well you can think for other people!" she says, a little vaguely, but gratefully, giving him the cool, slim hand she had willfully withheld when wishing him good-morning. Only for a moment, though. Hastily withdrawing it, almost before his willing fingers have closed over it, she says, gayly, "How is your friend, the Major?"

"Better—much better," he returns, in a tone that would lead one to imagine he had said, "Worse—much worse." "He even spoke of being able to get down this evening in time for dinner. But"—with mock solemnity—"the day is long, and gout is not trustworthy."

"Then I shall dine with Mrs. Richards," says Cecil, reflectively, and as though, little hypocrite that she is—the idea is rather pleasurable to her than otherwise. "And that reminds me"—quickly—"I shall also breakfast with her. Good-bye"—nodding to him brightly, and moving on a step or two, until he stays her by an imploring gesture.

"You won't breakfast with me, then? How rash of you! Peters, I am positive, can provide twice as good a breakfast as Mrs. Richards. Don't sacrifice yourself on the altar of duty."

"I sha'n't. I, for my part, believe firmly in Richards. She looks like a good breakfast. By and bye, when we meet again, if indeed"—with a quick glance from under her long lashes which is full of coquetry in spite of all her stern resolves—"we ever do meet again—I expect you will be consumed with envy when I tell you of all the nice things I have to eat."

"Well, rush upon your fate if you will," he replies. "But at least let us make a bargain. If Peters outdoes Richards, will you promise to throw yourself on his tender mercies to-morrow? The old gentleman"—waving his hand upward to where the Major's room may be—"never enchants me with his society before noon."

"A bargain it shall be," rejoins Miss Rivers promptly. "But, if you lose, you sha'n't get any breakfast at all. That is my amendment."

"I'll risk even that for the chance of the alternative," he says gallantly. "I think, Miss Rivers, you expressed a wish to see the picture-gallery—didn't you?"

"I should like it so much," answers Cissy. "It is now"—drawing out her watch—"a quarter to ten; at twelve I shall be ready to pay my respects to the old people. Will that hour suit you? Yes. Very well then"—with a backward glance, and a smile charming because swift, "Be sure you are not late!"

Smallpox has again broken out in Quebec.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive re sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $250 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and those we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

They will All be There.

Only two days more and we shall be at the carnival. Everybody with his wife and family will be there, or at any rate, every one who can get there. The north pole will send a representative to meet half way the darkies from the sunny south, while angels and men from the grave are expected. Take a look at the beautiful prizes shown in McNeil's window, and be induced to take one. Friday next is the date.

They Thought it was Toronto.

The story is told around town that two young ladies who came from Lindsay to Peterborough via the Missing Link yesterday, thought, when the saw the fine buildings along the line when entering the town, that they were on the wrong train and had been taken to Toronto. They became greatly alarmed and were only pacified when they were assured by the conductor and several others that they were in Peterborough.

Baptist Tea Meeting in Smith.

The annual tea meeting of the Line Baptist church Smith, will be held in the church on Tuesday, 23rd of February. In addition to the tea, which will be served from 5 to 7 o'clock. Addresses will be delivered by Rev. A. H. Munro of Peterborough, Rev. James Macfarlane, Lakefield and others. The church choir will supply music for the occasion. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Admission, 25c. children, 15c.

Quarterly Meeting and Annual Sale.

The third quarterly meeting of the directors of the Peterborough Mechanics' Institute was held in the Institute rooms yesterday evening. The only business of importance was the appointment of auditors, which positions were filled by the appointment of Messrs. G. M. Roger and Arthur Stevenson. The annual sale of papers and periodicals also took place, immediately after the meeting. Both magazine's and papers sold well at good prices.

They Were Not Chickens.

A reporter of the EXAMINER enquired of a young lady (presumably a farmer's wife) who had some poultry for sale, at the market this morning, the price of chickens. She quickly replied that they were not chickens. The reporter, not being satisfied that they were turkeys, or geese, or ducks, and thinking they might be Guinea fowls, or new fangled Boston birds, asked what they were. He was surprised and satisfied when the lady answered, "They are old ones; 50c. a pair."

"The Cantata Ruth."

Mr. C. C. Hampshire organist and choirmaster of St. John's, has in preparation the beautiful cantata "Ruth," to be presented with full choral efforts in the church at an early date. The cantata was composed by Asa. Gaul, Mus. Bac. Cantab., and the rich music furnishes a fine setting for the beautiful libretto. The first practice was held last night and the attendance gives promise of a strong chorus for the final presentation, which with the excellent solos that have been secured, will make the cantata of "Ruth" one of the leading musical events of the season.

Market Notes.

The market this morning was not very large, partly owing to the fact that some of the leading roads are badly drifted and have not been sufficiently broken to make easy sleighing. Meats, hay and wood were the principal offerings at unchanged prices. Fresh butter is not a drug on the market while fresh eggs are a decided scarcity. Prices were as follows:—Butter, in prints, 19 to 20cts.; chickens, per pair, 50 to 60cts.; turkeys, 60cts. to $1.00; beef per cwt., $4.50 to $5.50; lamb, per lb, 5 to 6cts.; Mutton, per lb, 6 to 7cts.; pork, per cwt., $5 to $6; per lb., 7 to 8cts.; potatoes, per bag, 55cts; wood, per cord, $3 to $3.75; hay per ton, $12 to $14.

Killed by a Train in Lindsay.

A lad named Alick Mann, aged 16 years of age, was killed at Lindsay to-day, by being run over by a train. He was in the act of crossing the track in front of an incoming train from Coboconk, when he fell and was instantly crushed to death. He was subject to epileptic fits and it is supposed a fit seized him just before he fell.

"Eldorado" Valse.

We are indebted to the courtesy of Messrs. Sailsbury Bros. for a copy of the "Eldorado" Valse, a new piece of music composed by Gilbert King, and published by I. Suckling & Sons, Toronto. The title page is chastely beautiful in design, the entire piece is splendidly printed on first-class paper, and is a credit to Canadian music publication. The valse consists of nine full pages, and can be purchased at Sailsbury Bros.' bookstore for 60 cents.

A. O. U. W.

The Grand Master Workman, at St. Catherines Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W. session, stated that although the year had been one of intense depression, the growth of the order had been simply marvellous. The number of the last Lodge organized in this year is 256, an increase of 25. The total number of beneficiary certificates issued at the 31st of December, 1884, was 10,684. On the 31st of December, 1885, the total issued was 12,507, making an increase of membership of 1,823, or double that of the previous year. This is cause for exultation. The assessments for deaths during the past year being only 13, is also gratifying, and an indication of the great care and caution observed by the Medical Department of our Order all along the line. Since the Order became [a separate jurisdiction, June 30, 1880, have been 228 deaths, an average of 41½ per annum, which have been provided for with 73 assessmentes, costing each member $13.28 per annum to carry the two thousand dollars beneficiary.

What We May Expect.

The martial spirit of our young men to be stirred up,

And recruits for city volunteer companies to be numerous.

The Milligan Comedy Company at the Opera House to-night.

A quartette of trained servant girls to come to town with the spring—in April.

A meeting of the town fathers to-night.

And the members to wrestle with the Chief of Police (question) and perhaps get downed.

The ministers of the town to form an early closing league.

And to apply the principle to their sermons—when the hot weather comes.

The cantata "Ruth" to be presented in town before long.

South and west winds, fair, followed by cloudy weather, with light snow falls in some places towards evening, higher temperatures.

Piano Recital at St. Luke's School.

The piano recital in St. Luke's school room yesterday evening, under the conductorship of Prof. Parker, was what might be expected under the management, an exceptionally good entertainment. Though the attendance was not very large, all who were present were delighted with the music. Rev. W. C. Bradshaw presided, performing the duties of that office in his usual happy style. The first number on the programme was a piano solo from Bethoven's "Allegro from Sonata Phelique," by Prof. Parker. It is unnecessary to say the music was singularly grand. This was followed by a pretty vocal duet, "What are the Wild Waves Saying," by Mrs. W. A. Sanderson and Mr. Manning. Mr. Gaele then sang in excellent voice and style "The Little Hero." Mr. Gaele also sang "Thou Wilt Return no More." Mr. John Burnham, M.P., then gave a humorous reading, "Marriage in High Life." Prof. Parker placed himself at the piano, and delighted the audience with "Home, Sweet Home," as arranged by himself. It was a perfect imitation of the Trinity Chimes played by Mr. Till, of the Rock Band Concert Company, on his fairy bells. Mr. Manning again took the platform and sweetly sang "Let Me Dream Again." Miss Gray and Prof. Parker contributed a beautiful piano duet, "Don Giovanni," by Lebich. Prof. Parker's selection of Scottish airs, as arranged and played by himself, elicited a hearty applause. Mr. Bradshaw contributed an interesting and laughable reading, "The Farmer's Wife and the Gascon." Mrs. W. A. Sanderson then sang "Queen of the Night," displaying to advantage the power and compass of her voice. Prof. Parker took himself to the piano, from which he produced Gilbert's "Le Adieux" to perfection, and like Rubinstein, would not let the piano go until he had disabled it. The concert was closed by singing the National Anthem, Prof. Parker playing the accompaniment on the organ.

Personal.

Mr. Wm. McLean left town yesterday for St. Catherines, where he attends, as delegate, the Grand Lodge meeting of the A. O. U. W.

Comedy Company To-night.

R. Lockhart Milligan, supported by his talented Comedy Company, will appear in the Opera House this evening and to-morrow evening in a repertoire of pleasing comedies of dramas, comedys, comedicttas, burlesques, farces, musical acts, sketches, etc. The St. Louis Republican says of him. "R. Lockart Milligan is indeed a comedian and character actor who has not his equal on the American stage. He does so much to amuse an audience during an evening that it is impossible to describe any one thing. The only way to do the artist justice is to say that he is immense."

The Proposed "City Battalion."

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—I have been asked the object of the meeting I have called in the Council Chamber for to-morrow, Thursday evening. It has been suggested that the 57th Battalion be formed into a City Battalion, and before taking any steps in the matter, I would like to hear the opinions of those who are or may be interested in the matter, whether they are or have been volunteers or not. If formed into a City Battalion, we would have to raise six companies in Peterborough, Asburnham and the immediate vicinity, but we would not be called away to drill every year, but would perform our drills at home in the evenings. I would like all who feel any interest in the volunteers to attend, so that we may discuss the matter.

The Poetry and Prose of Drink.

This danger of rapid drinking is a very important one to note. Granted that the liquid is all right, the time for taking it right, and our body in the proper condition to receive it, the habit of swallowing as fast as we can, is a most pernicious one. It is disagreeable, vulgar, and smacks of low life; moreover it robs the cup that is emptied, of half its charm. What an aroma is lost; what a delicate flavor, by all this unseemly haste! Take, oh friend, we beg, a few lessons in the art of drinking. Observe the gentle woman minister to her palate at the family meal. It is a poem to be read by all,—her fine-mannered deftness, and her self-control. No wonder that this vulgar habit is unhealthful. Christian manners bring their reward, while an outraged stomach takes it own method of revenge.—Margaret Sidney, in Good Housekeeping.

Lakefield.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

On Tuesday, the 9th inst., the Baptist Church here held a very successful tea meeting. During the evening the Rev. Mr. Munro delivered his very instructive and popular lecture, "Models for Life, from Lise," which was well received, and a vote of thanks, moved by Rev. Mr. McEwen and seconded by Rev. Mr. Macfarlane, was tendered to the learned lecturer. The church choir furnished music for the evening and added much to the enjoyment of the audience.

On Wednesday evening, the Sabbath School of the same church had an entertainment in the hall; fully as many sat down to the well-laden tables as on the previous evening. After tea a programme, which showed good taste and careful preparation, was much enjoyed by the large audience. We congratulate the, pastor, Rev. Mr. St. Dalmas, upon the success of these entertainments, and also upon the healthy condition of the church.

Hastings.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The ball on Friday last proved quite a success. About forty couples were present and one and all seemed to have enjoyed themselves. They all voted the supper provided by T. Coughlan of the Coughlan House first class.

Mr. Anderson has bought out Mr. McQuaid and is now the sole proprietor of the Victoria Skating Rink. The carnival on the nineteenth promises to be the carnival of the season. About $18 worth of prizes are offered. The music is to be supplied by the Hastings, not the Alnwick Indians as stated in last week's communication.

Rev. Mr. Wright of Sidney occupied the pulpit of the Methodist Church on Sunday evening last, and took his text from the 1st of Romans, sixteenth verse.

Rev. W. Buchanan of Trenton, formerly of Warkworth was in this village on Saturday, and called on several of his friends, and spent the night with Rev. W. Limbert. From thence he drove to Datford to preach the anniversary sermons.

Mrs. Cassidy has rented the house and store lately occupied by Mr. Scriver and intends opening out a new stock of millinery about the first of next month.

Mr. Wright, our noted egg-buyer, intends moving about the 1st of next month to the house he lately bought of the late Mr. Nelson.

Mrs. Askey intends moving to Trenton as soon as she can procure a house there. We are sorry to lose an old acquantances.

The Church of England congregation intends holding a bazaar on Monday next in the Temperance Hall. All are cordialy invited to take a look around.

The Telgmann Septette Club, assisted by Mr. Chas. Kelly, the renowned vocalist, are billed to give a concert here on the 2nd of March; the sale of reserved seats has been very large only a very few being left; these can be procured at Mr. Thos. Howard's. Do not miss the grandest treat of the season.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

SOCIAL.

A week ago last Wednesday, a party consisting of our Good Templar young folks, comfortably ensconsed themselves in a sleigh kindly provided by Mr. Jas. Mann, jr., and drove to the senior Jas. Mann's and took his place by storm. Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Mann nor Miss Robinson appeared to be very much frightened, however, but, on the contrary, calmly and collectedly took in the situation. To judge from their kind and cordial welcome to the party, one would suppose they were used to and did not relish such friendly invasions.

ROLL THE OLD CHARIOT.

Last week Mr. Jas. Mann drove to and from the Baptist Church what might be styled a Baptist sleigh. Every night his sleigh was crowded by parties who, although not all Baptists, availed themselves of his kindness to attend the special [illegible] down did "first." Now, as this week appointed [illegible] week of prayer here, it will be in order for some of our prominent Methodists to provide a Methodist sleigh.

Mr. Geakins and family from Peterborough have been visiting at Mr. Jopling's. They returned to town on Sunday evening.

INDUSTRIAL.

A new industry has sprung up in our village lately. Mr. Walter Scott has commenced operations as a sleigh builder. I am unable to say whether this new feature is due to "Protection," but one thing I can say and that is, Mr. Scott turns out a first class article.

Last Thursday evening the Gordon Lodge of Good Templars, gave their first free public entertainment. Sister Pauline Udy and Bro. Jas. Paul, represented Oak Leaf Temple on the occasion. They report that, notwithstanding the unfavorable condition of the roads and weather, there was a large attendance, a first class programme and a good time generally.

I am glad to be able to say that our friend Mr. Wm. Ball has returned to the neighborhood again.

Mr. Wm. Smith, formerly of this place, but now of Carleton Place, has been paying us a visit. He looks hale and hearty, as though the town of his adoption agreed with him. He returned to Carleton Place on Saturday.

Prizes on Exhibition.

The prizes to be given at the coming Fire Brigade Band carnival, are on exhibition in the window of Mr. A. McNeil's store. They are undoubtedly beautiful and valuable, and no doubt will be sharply contested for.

She was Saved

From days of agony and discomfort, not by great interpositions, but by the use of the only sure-pop corn cure—Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. Tender, painful corns are removed by its use in a few days, without the slightest discomfort. Many substitutes in the market make it necessary that only "Putnam's" should be asked for and taken Sure, safe, harmless.

Don't be Duped.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brand of cigars, which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pay them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby.

A Sure Remedy for Neuralgia.

Neuralgia is one of the most common and distressing complaints incidental to this climate. It is not confined to any particular season, for whilst most general in the winter seasons, yet many suffer its excruciating agony in the heat of summer. In late years this form of disease has become better known, and consequently the means of relief have become greatly increased in numbers, as well as in efficacy. Among the most powerful and penetrating combinations, placed within the reach of the public for the relief of neuralgia, we can mention no remedy equal to or more certain than Polson's NERVILINE. Its power over pain is something wonderful, and we advise a trial for neuralgia, or any other painful complaints. Nerviline is sold by all druggists at 25 cents a bottle, also trial bottles at 10 cents.

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 28th, 1885.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, I looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two springless trusses made in York State, costing me $40. Nothing would retain my Hernia. . . . I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down. It holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. B. KING.

This new Spirial Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child sure; and 99 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. JOHN KENDRY, Chairman.

On motion of Mr. Kendry the report was received.

BY-LAW APPOINTING OFFICERS.

On motion of Mr. Rutherford, seconded by Mr. McNaughton, a by-law to appoint town officers received its first reading.

The Council went into committee on the second reading of the by-law, Mr. Hartley in the chair.

The blanks in the by-law were filled in as recommended by the Committee on Appointments, with the exception of Street and Bridge Inspector, Mr. A. Wilson being re-appointed.

A question arose as the advisability of appointing Mr. English caretaker of the boiler and steam heating aparatus at the new Council Chamber. Mr. McNaughton was in favor of appointing Mr. Beavis as caretaker of the boiler and apparatus.

Mr. Moore and several others were doubtful if Mr. Beavis was qualified for the position.

The question of appointing Mr. E. B. Edwards, town solicitor at a salary, called forth a lengthly discussion, and was finally referred back to the Committee on Appointments for further consideration.

Mr. Kelly moved, seconded by Mr. McClelland, that a clause be added to the by-law, appointing Mr. Beavis, assistant constable, license, sanitary and market inspector.

A lengthly debate followed his motion, in which the worth of Mr. Beavis as such officer was discussed.

It was shown that the positions which it was proposed Mr. Beavis should fill, had not been filled or recommended by the Committee on Appointments.

Mr. Kendry, chairman of the committee, showed that this had not been overlooked. It was proposed that the police should act as inspectors, and that the salary of the Town Clerk had been raised, on condition that he should provide all necessary help around the office. The committee would meet in a few days and make the other appointments.

A vote was taken on Mr. Kelly's motion and resulted in a tie, but was lost on the vote of the chairman.

The by-law was left open, its ratification being deferred until the appointment of a Chief of Police has been made.

BY-LAW TO AMEND RULES OF ORDER.

Mr. Moore introduced a by-law to repeal and amend the rules of order of the Council. The by-law received its first reading, and was referred to the Finance Committee for consideration.

MOTIONS.

Moved by Mr. Rutherford, seconded by Mr. Kelly, that steps should be taken to extend the fire limits and that the matter be referred to the Building Committee to report.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Rutherford, seconded by Mr. Kelly, that the fire department of this town be inforced by an addition of 500 feet of the best hose obtainable.—Carried.

Mr. Rutherford explained that the new couplings had arrived. The cut-off's would not match but the difficulty would be overcome in a few days. It was intended that all the old couplings should be taken off and new ones put on. This was ordered to be done last year but the order had not been carried out. The town is supplied with about 1000 feet of reliable hose.

On motion Mr. Smith, whose case was laid before the council some months ago by Mr. Walter Paterson, and whom Mr. Cox had undertaken to provide for, was heard.

Mr. Smith explained his circumstances and laid his case before the council very clearly. He had been sent here from Montreal Protestant Hospital under false colors, being unable to do the work he had been engaged for. Mr. Cox had provided him with a house and furniture. He was unable to get steady work and had been living on charity almost ever since. He had been advised to interview the council. He was willing to work.

Mr. McNaughton took Mr. McClelland and the Mayor to task for giving charity in his ward.

Mr. McClelland resented Mr. McNaughton's charge. He had been authorized by the Mayor to give the charity, and if he could not do this he would give up his position on the Charity Committee.

The Mayor also replied to Mr. McNaughton's remarks. He said he did not ask what ward the charity was required for when appeals were made to him. He paid it out of his own pocket, and would do it again without consulting Mr. McNaughton. He had a right to do as he pleased in such matters.

A number of ways of employing Mr. Smith were suggested. It was finally decided to refer the matter to the Charity Committee with power to act.

THE TOWN'S PRIVATE BILLS.

Moved by Mr. Moore, seconded by Mr. Hartley, that the Mayor, Messrs. Cahill, McClelland, Yelland, Kelly, the mover and seconder be a committee to consider the provisions of the town bill now before the Ontario Legislature.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Moore, seconded by Mr. Rutherford, that the mover, second r, the Mayor, and Messrs. McNeil, Menzies and Kendry be a committee to confer with the Trustees of the Nicholls Hospital regarding the provisions of the bill now before the legislature regarding said hospital. Carried.

Moved by Mr Kendry, seconded by Mr. Hartley, that Water street north, now blocked, be opened up; the cost not to exceed $10.—Carried.

Mr. McNeil gave notice of a motion to be made by himself, seconded by Mr. Hartley, at the next meeting of the Council.—That the clerk advertise in the Toronto Globe and Mail, for one week, for application for Chief of Police for the town of Peterborough, the applicants to be men of experience and none others need apply. References required. Salary to be stated.

The Council then adjourned to meet at the call of the Mayor.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Fifth Parliament—Third Session.

TUESDAY, FEB. 16th.

After routine in the Ontario legislature today, the House on motion of Mr. Fraser went into committee on the government bill to amend the by-law respecting compensation to persons killed by accident and in death.

The amendment provides that in the case where the executor or administrator of deceased fails to bring action within six months, or if no executor or administrator has been named, action may be brought to recover compensation by and in the name of deceased's wife, children or other persons who may have suffered by his loss.

Mr. Meredith wanted to know the government's opinion on the question of deducting the amount of life insurance policies from the compensation awarded. He did not think such deductions should be made.

Mr. Fraser was of the same opinion, and intimated that the government would express itself on this and other points raised by the leader of the opposition, when the the bill came up again.

Mr. Gibson (Hamilton) moved the second reading of his bill to amend the act respecting master and servant. The eighth clause of this act legalizes contracts made by Ontario employers of labor with parties living outside the Province. Mr. Gibson's amendment was to repeal this clause, on the ground that it encouraged the importation of foreign and pauper labor, and was against the best interests of home workmen. While other interests were protected, labor was left unprotected—in fact its importation was rather encouraged. The system of importing contract labor was ruinous to the cause of employees who justly went out on strike, and at the same time the imported people were frequently deceived by the representations made to them.

Mr. Creighton thought the proposition of the member for Hamilton a good one, but would go further and impose a penalty on the employer who imported labor under such circumstances.

Mr. Fraser said the Government was not yet prepared to pass an opinion on the bill.

Mr. Meredith regarded it as of too sweeping a character. It would be monstrous, said he, if two hundred raftsmen brought up to this province from Quebec could not hold their Ontario employer responsible for wages.

Mr. Harcourt said agricultural laborers and domestic servants were concerned in the matter, and did not think any restrictions should be placed on their coming into the country.

Mr. Mowat had no objection to a second reading.

In closing the debate, Mr. Gibson said his only object in repealing the clause was to put a stop to the importation of contract labor. It was not a scheme of his own, but the wish of many workmen whom he had the honor to represent. The bill was read a second time and referred to a special committee.

Mr. Preston, if the Government had received a copy of a resolution passed at the Farmers' Institute, held in the south riding of the county of Leeds, asking it to publish, in pamphlet form, the address delivered by Professor Mills, of the model farm, for distribution throughout the province; if so, is it the intention of the government to comply with the terms of said resolution?

Minister of Agriculture Ross replied that the government had received the resolution, but not a copy of the address; hence the government was not in a position to say whether it would publish the address or not.

Mr. Harcourt obtained an order for a return showing how many persons have, up to the end of 1885, applied under the Land Titles act of 1885 to the master of titles to be registered under the said act, or to have any nominee registered in his stead, and showing also the cost of each such application.

The House adjourned at 4 20.

THE PROPOSED "CITY BATTALION."

Peterborough has become a town of so great importance, and has won so large a name for progressiveness and enterprise, that it should be the aim of its citizens that everything associated with it should be of corresponding excellence. As our readers have already been informed, a proposal to form a City Battalion of volunteer infantry, is to be discussed at the town hall to-night. In the "piping times of peace" it is not so easy to evoke the spirit of military ardour, but that such a spirit exists is shown by the ready response of our local volunteers to the call for a contingent to assist in forming the Midland Batallion for active service last spring. It will be remembered that the trouble met with, was, not to secure sufficient volunteers, but to decide on whom should be left out in the levy. This shows that our citizen soldiers can be relied upon, that they are worthy of being encouraged and that their conduct and esprit-du corps will justify the wisdom of promoting efficiency and adding to their numbers. The advisability of forming a city battalion is patent enough. Without annual drill in camp or an equivalent, the knowledge of field movements—absolutely essental in any actual engagement beyond a mere skirmish—possessed by our volunteers is so rudimentary and theoretical as to be practically valueless. To secure this necessary training, the members of our local volunteer companies, are compelled to drop their ordinary avocations, often to the great detriment of themselves and their employers, and spend several days in camp, once in three years at least. This can, as far as this town and vicinity are concerned, be entirely obviated by the formation of a city battalion of six companies, of which three are already in existence. It cannot be difficult to secure one hundred and twenty more volunteers in this town, Ashburnham and vicinity. Then the battalion drill which all other rural organizations have to perform in camp, can be engaged in at home in the evenings, and so much more frequent will be the opportunities of assembling as a battalion, that an efficiency, far beyond what can be derived from a few days' spasmodic instructions once a year, will be arrived at, and this town would possess one of the crack battalions of the force. The advantages of the proposed movement are numerous, while the arguments against it are yet to be discovered. Let it be remembered that the credit of the town is involved in the undertaking, and it is to be hoped that a sufficient representation of the fighting stock of the town will be present at the meeting to-night to ensure a successful discussion of the subject. The meeting being a military one, it is to be expected that the speeches indulged in will be, like a military command, brief and to the point. Whatever action is taken, it should be borne in mind, that the result should be one that will be worthy of the town of Peterborough.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Mr. Joseph Arch, the English agricultural M. P., received from his admirers $1,000 more than was required to cover his election expenses and promptly returned it to them.

The Tory organs try to explain the existence of an enormous deficit by attributing it to the cost of suppressing the rebellion. That is only making matters worse for the Dominion Government is directly responsible for causing that outbreak.

Mr. J. A. Barron, in the capital address he delivered at Fenelon Falls, on accepting the nomination as liberal candidate for North Victoria, made the point that the cost of suppressing the rebellion caused by the oppression and misgovernment of the Northwest, was more than enough to complete the Trent Valley Canal.

Liberal workingmen are warned against a new trick by the Tory wirepullers. It lies in the latter professing to take the names of workingmen for insertion upon the voters' lists; and vowing that they are not influenced in such matters by the political opinions of those whose names they receive. The trick is to induce workingmen and others to leave their names in the hands of the Tory wirepullers; and then accidentally forget to present them to the revising barristers.

It is no matter of surprise that the Tory organs unanimously pronounce the Dominion Franchise Act a necessary wipe and states-manlike measure. They can't see anything wrong in it, for they get the printing of the voters' lists at fancy figures. The Kingston News admits that it gets 12½ cents per name. This is a pretty fair figure considering that municipal voter's lists have been printed at a profit, at 2½ cents per name. But of course money is no object with the Dominion Government so long as, by its expenditure, the opinions of Conservative newspapers can be bought.

Increased wages and steady employment, was the electioneering promise of the Tory party in both the campaigns of 1878 and 1882. But it was a promise not to be redeemed. On and after Monday last for instance, on the Dominion Government's railway in Prince Edward Island, the time and pay of those who work on piece work was reduced by two hours per day; while the monthly salaried employees go scot free. It is the poor mechanic, remarks the Ottawa Free Press, who is the victim of the Dominion's cheese-paring rendered necessary by the enormous expenditure caused by the government's blundering Northwest policy.

Early Experiments of James B. Eads.

• • • • When about ten years old, his father fitted for him a small workshop, and there he constructed models of saw-mills, fire-engines, steamboats, steam-engines, electrical and other machines. One of the pastimes of his childhood was to take in pieces and put together again the family clock, and at twelve years he was able to do the same with a patent-lever watch, with no tools but his pocket-knife. When thirteen, misfortune overtook his father, and he had to withdraw from school and work his own way. His parents went to St. Louis in 1833 and he went with them. The steamer was burned in the night on the way there, and he landed barefooted and coatless, on the very spot now covered by the abutment of the great steel bridge which he designed and built. The only opening in the way of business that offered was to sell apples on the street, and by this means, for a few months, he sustained himself and assisted in supporting his mother and sisters. In time he obtained a situation with a mercantile firm, where he remained for five years. One of the heads of the house having an excellent library, gave him access to it, and he used his opportunity well to study subjects bearing upon mechanics, machinery, civil engineering, and physical science. In 1839 he obtained employment as a clerk or purser on a Mississippi river steamer. He again made the best use of his opportunity to acquire that complete knowledge of the great river which he was afterward able to turn to such good account in the noble enterprises he so fortunately carried into effect. In 1842 he constructed a diving-bell boat to recover the cargoes of sunken steamers. This was followed with a boat of larger tonnage, provided with machinery for pumping out the sand and water and lifting the entire hull and cargo of the vessel. A company was formed to operate this device, and it soon had a business that covered the entire Mississippi river, from Balize to Galena, and even branched into some of its tributaries. By his methods, a great many valuable steamers were set afloat and restored to usefulness which it would not previously have been possible to save, as they would have been buried very soon beneath the river-sands. It was while engaged in this business that he gained a thorough knowledge of the laws which control the flow of silt-bearing rivers, and of the Mississippi he was able to say years afterward that there was not a stretch in its bed fifty miles long, between St. Louis and New Orleans, in which he had not stood upon the bottom of the stream beneath the shelter of the diving-bell.—Pop. Science Monthly for Feb'y.

A Boy Who Understands 'Em.

The other morning a boy about 14 years of age knocked at the door of a house on Brush street and asked the woman if she didn't want the snow cleaned off the walk.

"How much?" she cautiously inquired.

"Thirty cents."

"I won't pay it. If you want to do the work for 10 cents you can go ahead."

He leaned on the handle of his snow-shovel and looked thoughtful, and she finally queried:

"Well, what do you say?"

"It's just as that woman around the corner told me," he replied. "I shoveled off her snow and she gave me 50 cents. I told her I was coming to ask you, and she said—"

"I don't know her. What business is it to her?"

"Yes, but—"

"What did she say?"

"She said I'd get left. She said that any woman who wore a plush sacque and passed it off for a $300 sealskin would be mean enough to go out nights and shovel her own snow."

"Boy!" whispered the woman, as she turned white clear around her neck, "I want you to clean off the snow. When you are through I'll give you a silver dollar, and I want you to go around and tell that woman that any one who buys and wears dollar store jewelry and 14-shilling shoes hasn't got sense enough to fall off a bob-tailed car!"—Detroit Free Press.

From Major to General.

Last Fall, while a drummer from a New York house was opening a new route in Arkansas, he took pains to let everybody know that he was "Major Smith." This little scheme worked pretty well to secure the best room in several village hotels, and to have his opinion sought for on the weather, the European situation, etc., but there was a snag waiting for him fifty miles further on. He finally struck a hotel where his room was in the garret, and his bed a lonesome object to behold. He held the tallow candle above his head and made an examination of the surroundings, and then walked down stairs and indignantly demanded of the landlord:

"Sir, do you suppose that I will accept of any such quarters as these?"

"Sorry, Major, very sorry; but it's the very best that I can do."

"But you must have better rooms?"

"Oh, certainly; but I go according to rank, the General gets the best, the Colonels come next, and I stow the Majors away in the garret. It's all your own fault, Sir."

Next day the drummer promoted himself to General, and he hung to the title until he left the State.—Hotel Gazette.

A MAID FORLORN.

BY THE DUCHESS.

He is not. Indeed, it still wants fully five minutes to the appointed hour when he presents himself at the door of Mrs. Richards's parlor, to find his guest awaiting him.

The picture-gallery proves a complete success. Miss Rivers, her mind at rest about her mother's anxiety on her behalf, is in her gayest mood, and declares herself, and is in very truth, enchanted with the endless rows of simpering dames and dauntless knights that line the walls. She insists upon hearing every dark legend connected with the grim warriors, every romantic and eerie tale about their wives.

"This gaunt spinster," says Mr. Craven, indicating a withered damsel of sour aspect, "was a lady of advanced notions. In our days she would have gone in heavily for woman's rights. Perhaps"—hesitating—"you agree with—"

Here he stops, abashed by her reproachful look.

"How could you so misjudge me?" she says. "Do I look like one of those awful people?"

She stands a little back from him, as though imploring him to assure himself now and forever that she is not of the abhorred race. She certainly does not look like it—not in the least like anything awful or abhorred; and he tells her so mildly, as far as words go; but with considerable warmth if she can read his eyes aright.

It is a pleasant morning, in spite of the wind and the never-ceasing snow; and when luncheon is at an end Mr. Craven proposes a game at billiards, to which Cecil, who plays as badly as most women, willingly assents. In the middle of the third game she grows absent, and forgets to play; and her host, looking at her, sees a smile creep over her face.

"What is amusing you now?" he asks, smiling, too, out of pure sympathy.

Miss Rivers starts, and looks a little ashamed of herself.

"I have a horrid trick of laughing when amused," she says, demurely; "and it came to me just now that the whole thing is so absurdly funny. Don't you agree with me?"

"I am positive I should," he replies, "if I had even the faintest idea to what you are alluding."

"Why, my presence in this house. Here you are, doing all you know to amuse me—an undesired guest."

"Certainly not that," he says, with rather more earnestness than the occasion demands.

"Well, at least, an uninvited one," she corrects impatiently, the smile fading.

"I am afraid you are growing tired to death," says the young man, with some pain in his voice, laying down his cue and coming to her side. "Of course you are; it is only natural. It is so slow for you here, being locked up in a place against your will, with nothing to amuse you. That is the worst of being a bachelor. If now," he continues, dejectedly, "I had a wife, you might be so much happier, and could talk about dress, you know, and that."

"Yes; and bonnets, and servants. How well you understand women!" says Miss Rivers, curtly, turning away. "Perhaps if you had a wife I should hate her."

"Then I'm downright glad I haven't, as that would make your enforced stay even more unpleasant to you than it is," he returns, a little bitterly.

"Did I say I was bored, or found things slow, or that I found anything here unpleasant?" she demands, slowly. "I don't remember making such remarks."

"Well, you looked it, you know," he replies, still somewhat aggrieved.

"What, all that? Bored and slow—and unpleasant!"—softly—"How rude you are!"

"You misunderstand," he begins, warmly.

"Nobody ever made me such an uncomplimentary speech before. I think you needn't call me bad names," she interrupts, meekly, turning a red ball round and round between her pretty white hands.

"You know I didn't mean that," he exclaims, eagerly, and is probably going to say a good deal more, when she raises her eyes, and he, seeing the mischief lying in them, foregoes further explanation and joins in her merry laugh.

"Shall we finish this long-suffering game," she asks, lightly, "and put off our discussion till another day? Go on; it is your turn."

So he goes again to the table, and, by the most flagrant bad play and an evident determination not to hit anything whatever, compels her to win the game.

"Shall we play another? You should give me my revenge," he says, seeing her lay down her cue, and fearing lest a thought of Mrs. Richards may be again possessing her.

"No, you play too badly," she answers, calmly.

Now he is the best billiard-player at his club, and is, moreover, rather proud of the fact, yet he bears this aspersion on his skill with the most exemplary patience, making not the smallest protest.

"Time may improve me," he says, with an impassive countenance. "Give me one more chance."

"What a hypocrite you are!" returns Miss Cecil, with startling promptitude. "Don't you think I read your determination to give me that game? And I thought it so silly! No, I shall not play again with you until practice has made me more perfect. Will you come and show me the china in the small drawing-room? Richards says it is lovely, and that it is locked up in the ebony cabinets."

"I am not very well up in china, but they say my uncle's collection is rather fine," he replies, delighted at the prospect of having her with him for at least another hour.

And together they go to the drawing-room and ransack the cabinets. Some tiny tea-cups of the reign of Queen Anne raise in Cissy's bosom feelings of the most intense admiration.

"What a darling!" she says, taking out a cup and laying it on her palm. "Such a little pet, and so pretty."

They are both kneeling before the cabinet, and are, therefore, close together. In his heart Mr. Craven thinks every word of praise she has uttered to the cup might be applied to herself.

"Keep it," he says, genially, alluding to the cup. "Take anything you like. There's any number of them. And it's a pity to leave them there, you know, when I don't care about them."

"Oh, no, thank you!"—coloring hotly, and putting back the tea-cup hastily. "I would not spoil the set for anything."

"Then take the whole set, if you fancy them," he entreats. "I really wish you would. Nobody here ever looks at them."

"Not now. But"—mischievously—"that wife you spoke of so confidently a [illegible] them by and by."

"Will she?"—thoughtfully. He stares intently for a moment or two at Miss Rivers as she kneels beside him—perhaps the attitude suggests visions of a possible altar; and then he says, rather irrelevantly, "You are very fond of china, are you not?"

"Well, yes, rather," she replies; and then, conquering an inclination to laugh, she rises to her feet and goes over to the fire-place. "I think you said this morning your friend was much better," she says, presently, more from a desire to make conversation than from any overpowering interest in the Major. "Is he still growing toward perfection?"

"Yes"—in a mournful tone—"he is decidedly better. There is no hope. He is coming down to dinner. Nothing would prevent him, though I sent several messages, beautifully worded, to say I thought it foolish to make too free just at first, and that draughts were dangerous."

"Messages never succeed. Why did you not go in person?"

"He wouldn't let me in—wouldn't see me at any price. I made one or two noble efforts to carry his chamber by assault when first he was laid up—thinking it inhuman not to show some interest in him—but was repulsed with great slaughter. 'No admittance to strangers' should be posted on his door, as no one dares enter it but his own man."

"How mysterious! But why?"

"That is just what I am not in a position to tell you, never having been there. I suspect"—solemnly—"that he gets himself up—goes in heavily for paint and powder, wigs and teeth, and so on; and, when in bed, without all these attractive appliances, is a complete wreck—'sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans everything!'"

"What a glowing picture!" says Cissy; and then again, "What an unpleasant old person!"

"Oh, he's all that," assents Mr. Craven, agreeably, "and a good deal more! When a fellow is pretty well on in years, and certain portions of him have dropped away, such as hair and teeth, why can't he confess it? The Major would die first. He abhors wrinkles, and thinks gray hair rude. When he shows up in all his war paint, he is perfectly ghastly."

"You make me long to know him. Your description reminds me of a friend of my own," says Cissy, with an amused laugh. "May I ask this hero's name?"

"You shall have all the information in my power. He served in the—th Lancers some few centuries ago. He lives at a place called Lynn Hall, in Kent—oh, that he was there now!—and he rejoices in the name of Jervis."

"What!" cries Cissy, faintly. "Lynn Hall! Jervis!" Her breath comes quickly, and she pauses as though the news just imparted has been too much for her. Then she goes on hastily—"You say he is coming down to dinner; he may come here, to this very room. Mr. Craven, forgive me; but I must run."

"But why?" demands her puzzled host, detaining her.

"He is my uncle's dearest friend. And my uncle is to leave us all his money; and he is as particular as you please, and so old-fashioned; and if he heard through this dreadful old man of my being here for two days, snowed up alone with—without mamma, or any one, he would disinherit me," winds up Miss Rivers, breathless and incoherent.

"But does Jervis know you—personally, I mean?"

"Yes, intimately, and he owes me many a grudge, because Ronnie and I can't bear him, and have often been very rude to him," acknowledges Cissy, in a distressed tone. "He used to worry so. There is no end to the mischief he would make out of this if he knew of my being here. I do hope he has not heard my name mentioned by the servants."

"He sha'n't hear anything," says her host, reassuringly; "but—"

At this moment a heavy step in the hall outside, drawing every instant nearer and nearer, fills the hearts of the two within with dismay.

"He is coming," he whispers.

"Oh, what is to become of me?" she murmurs, looking wildly around in search of a sanctuary—trying to discover some faint chance of escape. No such chance presents itself. Already the owner of the heavy step has touched the handle of the door; but not before a bright idea has dawned in Mr. Craven's mind.

"There is an anteroom, a large closet—come with me, quickly," he says, grasping her hand, and leading her across the fire-lit room to where some crimson curtains hang apparently without aim or purpose. Pushing them aside he discloses a door. Opening it hurriedly, he entreats her to enter the tiny room beyond.

She obeys him instinctively, but whispers nervously as she sees him going—

"Do not leave me here long. It is dreadfully dark, and I do so hate being without light."

He can only look a reply, which she does not see, and has barely time to close her in, and get back to the fire, before the Major comes slowly up to him.

"Horrid cold house!" says the new arrival, in a grating tone. "Ugh, ugh!"—coughing—"reminds one of a vault!"

"I am afraid you have come to the very coldest room in it, the library is much more comfortable; you don't take half care of yourself," says the young man with great concern, wondering wildly how he shall get him out of the room again.

Night has fallen, and only the glow of the brilliant fire throws light upon the somber apartment. All the corners lie in shadow, only the hearth-rug and part of the carpet stand revealed.

The Musket as a Social Force.

All life is battling—all society a conflict of forces. Little worth having is ever got without being wrung from the teeth of opposition. Particularly is this true of the ordinary possession of manhood. Every privilege and immunity which we enjoy to-day, without more thought than we enjoy the sunshine and the summer air, has been extorted—most frequently through bloodshed—from those who would fain withhold it. The student of history reading the Bill of Rights sees in every clause the result of some successful war fought to wring a concession of that particular principle from the dominant class. The musket has steadily led the way and supported every extension of the boundaries of freedom. Without so irresistible a weapon within reach of every man's hand, the world would still be prostrate under the hoofs of an equestrian aristocracy, whose despotism would only be tempered by the tyranny of kingcraft.

Artillery is monarchic, cavalry aristocratic, and infantry democratic. Armor and the horse brought about the rule of the few over the many; [illegible] make one man ruler over all; while the musket is the agent of the popular will and the pioneer of universal suffrage. "All free government," says an eminent philosopher, "depends upon the power of the majority to whip the minority. The fundamental principle of democracy is that the wishes of one thousand men shall prevail over those of nine hundred men, and the musket gives the thousand men the physical power to enforce their will upon nine hundred men.—John McElroy, in Popular Science Monthly for February.

A "blind" beggar, complains that since he has had to muzzle his dog his takings have fallen 70 per cent. "I had trained him to catch the pennies with some trouble (at first he used to swallow them), and his picturesque dexterity was an income. Since I mounted the muzzle my patrons have deserted me, and I shall have to let them run poor Plato in and use my eyes again." A Punch and Judy man is also highly indignant because Toby has been "ooted for wearin' a muzzle on the stage."—Pall Mall Gazette.

NEWS OF THE TOWN.

The Proposed City Battalion.

The meeting of volunteers and all interested in the militia is called for to-night, to consider the obviability of forming a City Battalion. It will no doubt be well attended.

Piano Tuning.

S. R. Huffman will be in town the first of the week. Orders left at Sailsbury Bros.' Book Store or Mr. McClelland's Jewelry Store will be attended to.

Prizes on Exhibition.

The prizes to be given at the coming Fire Brigade Band carnival, are on exhibition in the window of Mr. A. McNeil's store. They are undoubtedly beautiful and valuable, and no doubt will be sharply contested for.

Left for England.

Mr. A. B. Owen, of the the Hazel Brae Home, took the 8.50 train last night for Quebec, en route to England. He is in charge of half a dozen inmates of the Home, who are suffering from ill health, and are therefore not eligible for distribution from the Home for service.

Another Social Dance.

The Parlor Roller Rink was the scene of another gay and mirthful assembly last night The bachelors of the town, young and old, accompanied by their lady friends, met in the hall for the purpose of driving away dull care by joining in the dizzy dance. Mirth and music reigned supreme until early in the morning.

Reported Paralysis.

A rumour is current on the streets to the effect that last night Mr. Judge Dennistoun suffered from a stroke of paralysis. Our reporter made enquiry of his Honor's physician but the latter declined to give any information as to the correctness or incorrectness of the rumour. From another source it is learned that there is no foundation for the rumour.

They will All be There.

Only one day more and we shall be—at the carnival. Everybody with his wife and family will be there, or at any rate, every one who can get there. The north pole will send a representative to meet half way the darkies from the sunny south, while angels and men from the grave are expected. Take a look at the beautiful prizes shown in McNeil's window, and be induced to take one. Friday next is the date.

Unbounded Confidence.

Mr. John McNaughton has great confidence in Mr. Beavis as a faithful servant. At last night's meeting of the council he said he was sure that if the council ordered Mr. Beavis to throw down the old music hall, he would do it. Mr. Moore thought Mr. Beavis might go one better and blow the new town buildings up without being told, if he took charge of the boiler for heating the buildings.

An Equine Epidemic.

There is a local disease affecting horses, which is doing considerable execution one way and another. The disease was once known as influenza or the "pinkeye" of the Yankees. Mr. R. N. Reddy has lost a horse from its effects and so has J. W. Moore, and several other animals are more or less severely attacked. Dr. Crevier, V. S., states that influenza is not the right name but that it is pneumo-bronchitis.

The Power of The Press.

Yesterday evening as the large Wharfdale press of the EXAMINER office was in rapid motion, running off the weekly edition, a lad named Fred Ridley, employed in the office, met with a painful accident when removing papers from the board of the press, which resulted in the loss of a toe. He was in the act of removing papers from the board at the end of the press, and rested his left foot on the iron frame of the press, in such a position that the joining arm of two rapidly revolving cog-wheels, struck the forward member with irresistible force, tearing the shoe partly off, and severely jamming the foot and three toes, smashing several bones. He was taken home and Dr. King called in, who did all in his power to relieve the sufferer. This morning the doctor removed the second toe, and the lad under his care is progressing as favorably as possible. The power of the press is wonderful when backed by a twenty horse-power engine and boiler, and has an exhaust for furnace.

Police Court.

Patrick Lavery was up before Police Magistrate Dunbar this morning on a charge of [illegible] baggage in a public place. He admitted the charge and was fined two dollars or ten days.

The case against Mr. J. M. Irwin for wages, which was to have been heard this morning was settled out of court.

Concert at Lakefield.

A Concert (in some respects a repetition of the one lately given in St. Paul's School room by the children of Dr. Barnardo's Home) will be held in the P. C. A. Hall Lakefield, on Monday evening next, to commence at 7 30. p. m. Residents of Peterborough who are desirous of joining the party, should communicate with Mr. Edward Duff, Hazel Brae, not later than Saturday. Tickets for the concert alone, adults, 25 cents; children, 15c. Conveyance to and from Lakefield, including admission to concert, 50c,

Wood of Amendment.

"It was simply disgraceful;" "it was a [illegible] upon gurgeon. [illegible] was like a squabble among a lot of old apple women," "it was like dispute at a cock fight." Such were the expressions applied, by the retiring spectators from the council meeting last night, to the disgraceful character of the proceedings at the meeting of our city fathers, and the painful part of the matter is that the opinions thus diversely expressed were not fanciful exaggerations. Those ratepayers who went to see an important deliberative body discuss their affairs in a business-like manner, must have left with a very much modified idea of the manner in which their interests are looked after. If the dignity of the council proceedings is to be maintained the Mayor will have to put his foot resolutely down and rigidly enforce the rules of order. This will prevent a great deal of the unseemly personal squabbles and bickerings that take the place of orderly and deliberate discussion of public matters. The councillors do not sit around the board as individuals, so much as the representatives of the people and in this latter capacity, they should mould their conduct in accordance with the respectability of their constituents. If certain members of the council have not self respect to prevent them making asses of themselves publicly, the sooner they free themselves from the delusion that they are representing their constituents, the better for the interests and the good name of the town.

Death of Frederick C. Hill.

We copy from the Buffalo Expr ss the following notice regarding the death of Mr. F. C. Hill, brother of Mr. E. C. Hill, of Peterborough. Mr. F. C. Hill was known by many in town and in Toronto, and his friends will regret to learn of his sudden death:—"In the death of Mr. Frederick C. Hill, Buffalo loses an old resident and highly respected citizen. It occurred at his home, No. 34 Tremont Place, on Sunday, the 14th inst. Mr. Hill was about his business but a few days since. A disease of the liver is understood to have caused the fatal illness. Mr. Hill was born in Froome, England, March 12th, 1817. At twelve years of age he came to Toronto, and at 18 moved to Buffalo, which has ever since been his home. During the first year or so of his Buffalo residence he worked at the trade of tinsmith and coppersmith, a trade which he had early learned and at which he was unusually expert. But he soon went into the hot air furnace business, which he carried on for nearly thirty years, of late years at No. 585 Main street. He was a skilful mechanic and received several patents on his improvements for hot-air furnaces. He was a man of quiet disposition and shrank from the publicity of office. He was often urged to represent his ward—the tenth—in the common council, but declined to enter a political contest. He was one of the original members of St John's Episcopal Church, of which he always continued a consistent and devoted member. He was a member of the Buffalo Lodge, I.O.O.F., and a man of strict temperance principles. He belonged to the exempt Firemen's Association, and was one of the oldest of Buffalo's early band of volunteer fireman. He was also a Free Mason. He was a man of many admirable traits, whose life was governed by principle and a regard for the welfare of others. The mourners include a widow, two children. James T. Hill of this city, and Mrs. Robert W. Mack, of Wyandotte, Kansas, and a step-son Mr. W. P. Reed of this city. The funeral occurs to-morrow from St. Paul's Church. It will be in charge of Lake Erie Commandery, Knights Templar. Mr. Hill has long been a member of this Commandery."

Victoria University and Confederation.

[Christian Guardian.]

If the proposed scheme of federation be carried out, there is no good ground to assume that our educational work will not as liberally supported as formerly. But there is the best reason to believe that many of our most liberal would give more largely for buildings and endowment than they are likely to give under the present system. On the other hand, if Victoria should be kept out of the confederation, for reasons that will not commend themselves to our Methodist people as good and sufficient, but the grounds of our appeal to them for financial support in future will be greatly weakened, rather than strengthened.

Frost and Waterworks.

The Peterborough Waterworks Company was put to great expense last winter through the effects of the frost, and water users were also put to considerable trouble for the same cause. But neither was anything worth speaking of, compared with Ottawa. The Annual report of the Ottawa Waterworks Committee is before us, and from it we make the following extract:—

Considerable and serious difficulties were experienced last winter owing to the severe and unusual depth of frost. In several instances it was found that the frost had penetrated to a depth of over 6 feet 6 inches below the surface. In some of the principally travelled streets great trouble was experienced in keeping the mains from freezing solid, and it [illegible] all the services frozen on the streets, consequently in order to alleviate to some extent this difficulty it was considered advisable to supply the consumers with water by [illegible]. This work was carried over [illegible] and for a number of days it was necessary to supply over three hundred families with water. In some localities the services remained frozen until the middle of June. The thawing out of the hydrants alone required the use of steam boiler daily, and during the month of February and March it was kept working night and day thawing out pipes, &c. In order to give you some idea of the work to do I submit the following particulars:

Number of hydrants frozen in		Dec. 1884	22

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, over its MERITS. An article having a large sale. Paying over 100 per cent. profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every homeowner, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $300 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through subagents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employing agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guarantee, and that a hundred more would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and those we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the county in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents sewing machine collectors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chances ever offered to make money on [illegible] ever offered. Address

She was Saved

From days of agony and discomfort, not by great interpositions, but by the use of the only sure pop corn cure—Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. Tender, painful corns are removed by its use in a few days, without the slightest discomfort. Many substitutes in the market make it necessary that only "Putnam's" should be asked for and taken Sure, safe, harmless.

Don't be Duped.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brand of cigars, which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pay them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby.

A Sure Remedy for Neuralgia.

Neuralgia is one of the most common and distressing complaints incidental to this climate. It is not confined to any particular season, for whilst most general in the winter seasons, yet many suffer its excruciating agony in the heat of summer. In late years this form of disease has become better known, and consequently the means of relief have become greatly increased in numbers, as well as in efficacy. Among the most powerful and penetrating combinations, placed within the reach of the public for the relief of neuralgia, we can mention no remedy equal to or more certain than Polson's NERVILINE. Its power over pain is something wonderful, and we advise a trial for neuralgia, or any other painful complaints. Nerviline is sold by all druggists at 25 cents a bottle, also trial bottles at 10 cents.

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 20th, 1885.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, I looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two springless trusses made in York State, costing me $40. Nothing would retain my hernia. I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down. It holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. B. KING.

This new Spirial Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect: is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child sent; and 90 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. THE CALL TO ARMS.

A Civilian Council of War.

Meeting in the old Music Hall—The City Battalion Question Enthusiastically Discussed—The Scheme Practicable and the Prospects Promising—The Decision Arrived at.

A well attended and enthusiastic meeting of the officers of the 57th Batallion and others interested in the volunteers was held in the Council Chamber yesterday evening.

There were present, Lieut. Col. J. Z. Rogers, Lieut.-Col. H. C. Rogers, Major R. W. Bell, Capt. E. B. Edwards, Capt. Langford, Capt. R. B. Rogers, Quartermaster W. Millar, Quartermaster-Sergeant W. H. Hill, Surgeon Dr. Kincaid, Sergeant Graham, Sergeant Irwin and a large number of privates and citizens.

Lieut.-Col. J. Z. Rogers occupied the chair.

In opening the meeting he said it had been called for the purpose of considering the advisability of forming the 57th Batallion into a City Batallion. The batallion was now composed of Peterborough, Keene, Norwood, and Hastings companies. A City Battalion would require six companies in Peterborough and vicinity, which he felt quite satisfied could be kept up. One advantage in having a city battalion was that they would not have to go out to camp to drill but could during the evenings. This would be a decided advantage to many, as there were many who were unable to attend the annual or semi-annual camps. If the city battalion were formed all the men would necessarily be from the town and immediate vicinity. They would see each other oftener than they do at present and would become better acquainted. The standard of the battalion would be raised as more interest and enthusiasm would be infused into it. He thought the town could keep up the six companies. He would like to hear the opinion of the other officers on the subject. They would have to be backed up by the citizens.

Dr. Kincaid, surgeon of the 57th battalion, said he thought the movement about to be undertaken was a good one and that steps should be taken to have it carried out. He was confident the town had the material if it could only be got into line. He favored the project from the first. He had spoken to the Deputy Adjutant-General, who thought the only objection to the change would be raised by the officers in the rural district. The citizens took until there was danger, and then they hugged them. During the late rebellion the Canadian soldiers had shown what they were capable of doing. He felt confident Peterborough had the men and officers capable of forming a City Battalion, second to none in Canada, if they were only brought into line.

Major Bell said as far as he was concerned, a City Battalion would be desirable. The The residents of the town were unanimously in favor of it. Norwood and Keene, and the outside officers might raise an objection. The question was whether six companies could be raised in town. 250 men would be required. He thought it could be done. Kingston, Belleville and Brantford supported City Battalions, and why could not Peterborough; Brantford had one of the best battalions in Canada. He was certain if the town had a City Battalion the people would take more interest in it than they do in the 57th. He knew many clerks and mechanics who would not join the volunteers because they would have to lose a couple of weeks annually to drill. They could not afford this. A city battalion would overcome this difficulty, as they could put in their drill in town during the evening and lose no time.

THERE WOULD BE RIVALRY

between the companies which would stimulate interest and enthusiasm. The public interest towards the militia was very little, as they seldom saw the six companies of the battalion and were disgusted with the small display they made. There must be display to excite enthusiasm. He would like to hear expression from outsiders on the question. He thought that out of a population of 10,000 it would be comparatively easy to get 250 men. He showed how the Toronto city battalions had succeeded against opposition and difficulties

PETERBOROUGH OUGHT TO SUPPORT ONE BATTALION.

A stranger, who was a member of the 1st Battalion of Montreal, said they had six regiments of English-speaking citizens in Montreal. An average of a regiment to every seven thousand inhabitants. He thought Peterborough, with a population of about ten thousand, could support one battalion.

Captain E. B. Edwards said that in his experience the men turned out much better when they drilled in the evenings. They always had full companies and many applicants had to be turned away. Four years ago they could have raised another company. The town had grown considerably since then and he thought it would be of companies. The difficulty of going to camp would be overcome if they had a city corps. The date of the camp was always uncertain, and it was hard for men to get away. Many were willing to drill but did not want to go to camp, as they could not afford to lose the time. The town companies at camp were shorter of men than the country companies, as the men in town found it more difficult to get away. One result of the city battalion would be to have everything more orderly. When they went to camp there was a continual change of clothing and accoutrements which would be done away with. If they were called to the North-west they would know who they could call on.

Mr. Brown said he had been speaking to a get one hundred men easily.

Mr. J. R. Stratton said he thought if officers were appointed to recruit they could get the necessary number of men with ease. He thought the night drills would be a great advantage. A city battalion

WOULD GIVE THE TOWN PRESTIGE.

He felt confident the town could support a battalion second to none in Canada. He would do all in his power to assist the movement.

Adjutant Cooper thought a city battalion would be better for the town. It made the men more efficient. He spoke of the success that always attended the attempts of other places to secure city corps. The companies were always full and many were ready to enter the ranks. He saw no reason why Peterborough should not have a first-class city battalion.

Sergeant Graham said he saw no reason why they should not have a good battalion. It was the only thing the town was behind in. He thought if the staff made an effort they could form a battalion in efficiency second to none in Canada.

Mr. J. R. Stratton moved, seconded by Sergeant Graham, that it is desirable to form a city battalion in the town of Peterborough, and that Lt.-Col. Rogers and the other officers take the necessary steps to have the battalion formed. The motion was carried unanimously.

Sergeant Irwin, said he had not taken a deep interest in the question as he was not sure it would benefit the battalion. He would be in favor of any movement to improve the 57th battalion. He condemned the annual camps as they were conducted now. The encouragement to volunteers was small when members of parliament thought the northwest rebels deserved a pension as well as the volunteers. He would do all in his power to forward the interests of the battalion.

Quartermaster Miller expressed himself as in favor of forming a city battalion in town. He gave as reasons why the annual that the time of the camps was uncertain, new men were introduced each year, and men who did not know the A, B, C of the drill were dressed up and sent off to camp. If they had a city battalion they could put the men in squads and the sergeants would have to do their duty, as it was now the Captains had to do almost everything. He liked to go to the annual camps but would sooner drill at home.

Mr. Destin, said that he found it difficult for young men to get away to attend the annual camps. They could not afford to lose the time or money. There would be no difficulty in attending evening drill. He knew of many who would join a City Battalion who would not join a rural one. He understood Mr. Bell to say that the companies were composed mostly of clerks. He did not concur with this idea. He thought the mechanics were in the majority and always will be.

Mr. Bell said Mr. Destin must have misunderstood him, as he had said distinctly that the companies were composed chiefly of clerks and mechanics. He thought they should get some expression to influence the government. Though not a city, we

REQUIRE A CITY BATTALION.

Some influence should be brought to bear upon the Minister of Militia, to induce him to grant the request.

Mr. Destin said he assisted Capt. Langford in picking men for his company. The young men he asked to join, always asked if they would be bound to sign and go to camp. They did not want to go to camp as they would lose time, money and sometimes positions.

Mr. Irwin said some might not want to fight. (Laughter).

Capt. Edwards said he had encountered the same difficulty as Mr. Destin. The men

WERE WILLING TO DRILL OR FIGHT, but objected to going to camp, as they could not afford to lose the time, and sometimes could not get the time.

Band Sergeant McCabe said the band were willing that a city battalion should be formed, as long as it did not interfere financially with anything else.

Lieut. Col. H. C. Rogers said he thought it would be most desirable to form a city battalion. It would require an effort, but he was confident it could be accomplished by a long pull a strong pull, and a pull all together. They should bring something to to show that they required a city battalion. The first thing they required was permission and be felt confident the object could be accomplished.

Mr. E. E. Henderson, said he was at one time a member of the 45th battalion. He would suggest that Col. Rogers petition the council to memorialize the government asking that the town be allowed to form a city battalion, or a depatation composed of Col. Rogers and some other officers might go to Ottawa. There would be no difficulty to get the men. He thought they could form one good company of insurance agents.

Lieut.-Col. J. Z. Rogers, said he had been to Ottawa and the ministers thought the only objections would be raised by the officers outside of the town. There was no use going to Ottawa again. He thought it could be got through. There was no doubt a city battalion would attract more attention.

Staff-Sergeant Hay thought they had all the support necessary, and the difficulty with regard to the affair could be overcome. They would be able to have a good moral and physical standard. Such a standard was necessary.

Mr. Stratton thought it would not be necessary to go to Ottawa. He thought the success depended greatly on the officers. The militia of Canada had a good record and he felt confident the city battalion of Peterborough would not take a backseat for any. (Applause.)

Lieut.-Col. Rogers then thanked those present for the interest they had shown and the encouragement they had given, and the meeting was brought to a close.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Fifth Parliament—Third Session.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 14th.

After routine several Bills received their first reading.

Mr. Meredith moved for Order of the House for copies of all correspondence and reports with reference to the claim of James Knott for damages for the flooding of his lands in the township of Chaffey by the construction of Public Works on Fairy Lake. He said that two gentlemen had been appointed by the Government to enquire into the matter, and they had awarded Mr. Knott something over $200. Mr. Knott objected to the amount as too small, and he also objected to [illegible] Government appointing both arbitrators in a matter in which they were interested.

Hon. C. F. Fraser said that there were a number of claims of the same class as Mr. Knott's. Last summer he had visited the district in order to make himself acquainted with the nature of the claims and for other purposes. The result of his enquiries was the appointment of two gentlemen, not arbitrators, but as valuators, for the purpose of reporting what they considered would be a reasonable amount to allow for damages. They had reported on ten cases, and in all of these the claimants accepted the sum recommended, except Mr. Knott. The report was not final, and it was open to Mr. Knott and the Government to settle the matter in a friendly way, perhaps in the mode suggested by the leader of the Opposition, namely, the award of arbitrators appointed by the two parties.

Hon. A. S. Hardy laid on the table a return showing the amount owing to the Province by the township of Hope, and a return showing the number of Farmers' Institutes held during the year.

Hon. A. S. Hardy laid on the table the Public Accounts for the past year.

Hon. A. M. Ross explained that there was an inaccuracy in the final summary, a correction of which would be distributed.

Mr. Eamatinger, in moving the second reading of his Bill to amend the Municipal Act, explained that it provided for an annual statement being made by treasurers before instead of after elections, and also for the statement being attested by the treasurer and auditors and published in a newspaper or in some other manner as the Council might determine. He explained the provisions for bringing in the accounts in time.

After some discussion for and against the bill, it was read a second time.

Just befor the legislature adjourned yesterday afternoon, Mr. Mowat announced that he had received a message from the Lieutenant-Governor enclosing the financial requirements of the province for 1886. The total amount of the estimates are $2,962,514, divided as follows: Current expenditure $2,474,037, on capital account $460,304, other purposes $28,172. The estimates for 1885 were $345,871 less than this sum, and in 1884 $315,441 less. These figures are of couse exclusive of the supplementary estimates which are usually brought down near the close of the session.

NECESSITY FOR ACTION.

It would seem that Canadians are not alone in their realization of the importance of extending and improving canal communication. The Americans are now agitating a scheme of canal improvement which is of particular interest to the people of this district, from its relation to the Trent Valley Canal system. Last Wednesday a large delegation, including representatives from the entire lake region, from Buffalo to Duluth, were in Washington before the House, Rivers and Harbors Committee, to urge that body to make liberal appropriations for the improvement of the connecting links between Lakes Huron and Superior. A Mr. Colgraves, of Duluth, made an excellent argument in support of the proposition to increase lock facilities at the Falls of Sault Ste. Marie. He demonstrated to the Committee that this is the only outlet for the immense grain products of the Northwest, which are shipped by way of Duluth, and that the improvement asked is absolutely necessary to avoid serious delays in the transportation of cereals to Buffalo. Mr. P. H. Ely, of Cleveland, followed with statistics showing the enormous commerce of the Lake Superior region, and read from the Engineer's reports to show that the improvements of the Sault Ste. Marie and Hay Lakes Channel had the endorsement of the officers of the army.

The proposed action is a direct challenge to Canadian competition for a water route for Northwest produce to the sea-board. With the completion of the Trent Valley Canal, there would be no comparison between the directness of the routes in question. Besides Canada must have an outlet of her own, for her Northwest produce and the Trent Valley navigation route being the most direct, and therefore should receive the first consideration of the Government. Every day furnishes fresh reasons why the Dominion Government should actively interest itself in this great scheme. The representatives of this district and province should unite, in demanding justice in this matter from the Dominion Government.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Great interest is taken in the West in the reported tariff changes now before Congress. The most important concession for Ontario is placing salt and lumber on the free list, but it should not be forgotten that the probable object of placing lumber on the free list is to preserve United States forests, rapidly becoming used up, at the expense of the forests of Canada.

Trouble with the finances and the deficits, trouble with the Indians, trouble with the mounted police, trouble with the civil service at Ottawa and at the Intercolonial, trouble with the fishermen, and with the Bleus. Just now, says the St. John Telegraph, Sir John Macdonald's cry is expressed by the words of the minstrel song—There's heaps of trouble on the old man's mind. And parliament is shortly to meet, which will add to his troubles.

The Tories were only in power in England for some six or seven months, but their presence means an eternal charge to the country. Lord Halsbury, and Lord Ashborne, the English and Irish Tory lord chancellors, receive during their life times because of their short terms of office annual pensions of $25,000 and $20,000 respectively. It is astonishing, asks the Ottawa Free Press, that when the British pension system is attacked, that the attacks meet with popular favor? It is a gross abuse from beginning to end and should be swept away.

At the recent meeting of the village Council of Lakefield Mr. Reeve Strickland succeeded in smuggling through, by the aid of his casting vote, the following bemoombe resolution which the County Council so summarily threw out:

"That the Council desire to express thankfulness that the rebellion in the North-west which was threatening the peace and happiness of that portion of our Dominion, when the Council was last in session, was shortly after brought to a successful close by the bravery and energy of our citizen soldiers, and that the Council further wishes to express its approval of the Government in allowing the law to take its course in the case of Riel, the murderer of poor Scott in 1869, and the leader and cause of the rebellion in 1885, whereby many valuable lives were lost and property destroyed."

This is certainly a great triumph for Mr. Strickland, and he should be satisfied that he has, through in a weak way, obeyed the commands of his political superiors at Ottawa to procure the passage of a whitewashing resolution. There is no doubt that the attempt made to force resolutions of this character, through the county councils throughout the country was the result of a scheme concocted at Ottawa for the purpose of whitewashing the Dominion Government and breaking the force of the popular condemnation of its bungling and ruinous Northwest mismanagement, which brought on a rebellion whose suppression cost the lives of 200 British subjects and the expenditure of ten million dollars. Mr. Strickland's loyalty to his political masters is, per se, commendable enough, but it is not unlikely that a gentleman, who shows such slavish subserviency to his party, will not, when the interests of this district come into conflict with the interests and objects of that party, hesitate, to sacrifice the former to the latter.

THE MARRIAGE RING.

Dr. Talmage's Ideas of the Duties of Husbands to Wives.

How Men Who Have Not Kept Their Contracts Can Now Make Amends.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Feb. 7.—The Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D., preached today in the Brooklyn Tabernacle the fifth of his series of sermons on the "Marriage Ring," the subject being "Duties of Husbands to Wives." Before the sermon he explained the twenty-third chapter of Genesis, concerning Abraham's admiration of Sarah, her age, the only woman's age mentioned in the Bible, implying that inquisitiveness on that subject is an impertinence. The hymn sung was:—

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love."

The text of the sermon was from Genesis xxiv, 36: "And Isaac went out to meditate in the field at the eventide; and and saw, and, behold, the camels were coming." Following is the sermon in full:—

HE LIFTED UP HIS EYES

A bridal pageant on the back of dromedaries! The camel is called the ship of the desert. Its swaying motion in the distance is suggestive of a vessel rising and falling with the billows. Though awkward, how imposing these creatures as they move along, whether in ancient or modern times, sometimes carrying four hundred or four thousand travelers from Bagdad to Aleppo, or from Bassora to Damascus. In my text comes a caravan. We notice the noiseless step of the broad foot, the velocity of motion, the gay caparison of the saddle and girth and awning, sheltering the riders from the sun; and the hilarity of the mounted passengers: and we cry out, "Who are they?" Well, Isaac has been praying for a wife, and it is time he had one, for he is forty years of age, and his servant, directed by the Lord, has made a selection of Rebekah; and with her companions and maidens she is on her way to her new home, carrying with her the blessing of all her friends. Isaac is in the fields meditating upon his proposed passage from celibacy to monogamy. And he sees a speck against the sky, then groups of people, and after a while he finds that the greatest earthly blessing that ever comes to a man is approaching with this gay caravan. The drivers cry "Kneel!" to the camel, and they kneel, and putting foot on the neck of the stooping beast, the bride dismounts and greets the man who was as worthy of her as she was worthy of him. "And Isaac went out to meditate in the field at the eventide; and he lifted up his eyes, and saw, and, behold, the camels were coming."

In this fifth discourse on "The Marriage Ring," having spoken of the choices of a lifetime companion, I take it for granted, O man, that and that the camels have arrived from the right direction, and at the right time, bringing the one that was intended for your consort, a Rebekah and not a Jezebel. I proceed to discourse as to how you ought to treat your wife, and my ambition is to tell you more plain truth than you ever heard in any three quarters of hour in all your life.

First of all, I charge you realize your responsibility in having taken her from the custody and care and homestead in which she was once sheltered. What courage you must have had, and what confidence in yourself to say to her practically: "I will be to you more than your father and mother, more than all the friends you ever had or ever can have. Give up everything and take me. I feel competent to see you though life in safety. You are an immortal being, but I am competent to defend you and make you happy. However, bright and comfortable a home you have now, and though in one of the rooms is the arm-chair in which you rocked, and in the garret is the cradle in which you were hushed, and the trundle-bed in which you slept, and in the sitting-room are the father and mother who have got wrinkled-faced and stoop-shouldered and dim-sighted in taking care of you, yet you will do better to come with me." I am amazed that any of us ever had the sublimity of impudence to ask such a transfer from a home assured to a home conjectured and unbuilt.

You would think me a very daring and hazardous adventurer if I should go down to one of the piers on the North river, and at a time when there was a great lack of ship captains, and I should, with no knowledge of navigation, propose to take a steamer across to Glasgow or Havre, and say, "All aboard! Haul in the planks and swing out," and passing out into the sea plunge through darkness and storm. If I succeeded in getting charge of one, that would be the ship that would never be heard of. But this is that proffers marriage. He says: "I will navigate you through the storms, the cyclones, the fogs of a lifetime. I will run clear of rocks and icebergs. I have no experience and I have no seaport, but all aboard for a voyage of a lifetime! I admit that there have been ten thousand shipwrecks on this very route, but don't hesitate! Tut! tut! There now! Don't cry! Brides must not cry at the wedding."

In response to this the woman, by her action, practically says: "I have but one life to live, and I entrust it all to you. My arm is weak but I will depend on the strength of yours. I don't know much of the world, but I rely on your wisdom. I put my body, my mind, my soul, my time, my eternity, in your keeping. I make no reserve. Even my name I resign and take yours, though mine is a name that suggests all that was honorable in my father, and all that was good in my mother, and all that was pleasant in my brothers and sisters. I start with you on a journey which shall not part except at the edge of your grave or mine. Ruth, the Moabitess, made no more thorough self-abnegation than I make, when I take her tremendous words, the pathos of which many centuries have not cooled: 'Entreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee; for whither thou goest I will go, and where thou lodgest I will lodge. Thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God. Where thou diest I will die, and there will I be buried. The Lord do so to me and more also if aught but death part thee and me.' She by her life. She by [illegible] heaven. Before God and man, [illegible] with my immortal soul in the oath, I swear eternal fidelity."

Now, my brother, how ought you to treat her? Unless you are an ingrate infinite you will treat her well. You will treat her except your God. Her name will have in it more music than in all that Chopin or Beethoven ever composed. Her step will [illegible] like words of night watching over a child with scarlet fever, will be to you beautiful as a May morning. After the last rose petal has dropped out of her cheeks, after the last feather of the raven's wing has fallen from her hair, after across her forehead and under her eyes and across her face there are as many wrinkles as there are graves over which she has wept, you will be able truthfully to say in the words of Solomon's song: "Behold, thou art fair, my love! Behold, thou art fair!" And perhaps she may respond appropriately, in the words that no one but the matchless Robert Burns could ever have found pen or ink or heart or brain to write:

BETTER THAN ANYBODY ELSE IN THE UNIVERSE

"John Anderson, my jo, John,
We climb the hill thegither;
And many a canty day, John,
We've had wi' ane anither;
Now we maun totter down, John,
But hand in hand we'll go,
[illegible]
John Anderson, my jo."

If anyone assail her good name you will have hard work to control your temper, and if you strike him down the sin will not be unpardonable. By as complete a surrender as the universe ever saw, except that of the Son of God for your salvation and mine, she has a first mortgage on your body, mind and soul, and the mortage is foreclosed, and you do not more thoroughly own your two eyes or two hands than she owns you. The longer the journey Rebekah makes, and the greater the risks of the expedition on the back of the camels, the more thoroughly is Isaac bound to be kind and indulgent and worthy.

Now, be honest and pay your debts.

YOU PROMISED TO MAKE HER HAPPY.

Are you making her happy? You are an honest man in other things, and feel the importance of keeping a contract. If you have induced her into a conjugal partnership under certain pledges of kindness and valuable attention, and then have failed to fulfil your word, you deserve to have a suit brought against you for getting goods under false pretenses, and then you ought to be mulcted in a large amount of damages. Review now all the fine, beautiful, complimentary, gracious, and glorious things you promised her before marriage, and reflect whether you have kept your faith. Do you say: "Oh, that was all sentimentalism and romance and a joke, and that "they all talk that way"

Well, let that plan be tried on yourself. Suppose I am interested in Western lands, and I fill your mind with roseate speculation, and I tell you that a city is already laid out on the farm that I propose to sell you, and that a new railroad will run close by and have a depot for easy transportation of the crops, and that eight or ten capitalists are going to put up fine residences close by, and that the climate is delicious, and that the ground, high up, gives no room for malaria, and that every dollar planted will grow up into a bush bearing ten or twenty dollars, and my speech glows with enthusiasm until you rush off with me to an attorney to have the deed drawn, and the money paid down, and the bargain completed. You can hardly sleep nights because of the El Dorado, the Elysium upon which you are soon to enter. You give up your home at the east, you bid good-bye to your old neighbors and take the train, and after many day's journey you arrive at a quiet depot from which you take a wagon thirty miles through the wilderness, and reach your new place. You see a man seated on a wet log in a swamp and shaking with the fifteen attack of chills and fever, and ask him who he is. He says: "I am a real estate agent, having in charge the property around here." You ask him where the new depot is. He tells you that it has not yet been built, but no doubt will be if the company get their bill for the track through the legislature. You ask him where the new city is laid out. He says with chattering teeth. "If you will wait until this chill is off, I will show it to you on the map I have in my pocket." You ask him where the capitalists are going to build their fine houses, and he says: "Somewhere along these lowlands, out there by those woods, when the water has been drained off." That night you sleep in the hut of the real estate agent, and though you pray for everybody else you do not pray for me. Being more fortunate than many men who go out in such circumstances, you have money enough to get back, and you come to me, and, out of breath in your indignation, you say: "You have swindled me out of everything. What do you mean in deceiving me about that western property?" "Oh!" I reply, "that was sentimentalism and romance and a joke. That's the way they all talk."

But more excusable would I be in such deception than you, O man, who by glow of words and personal magnetism induced a womanly soul into surroundings which you have taken no care to make attractive, so that she exchanged her father's house for the dismal swamp of married experience—treeless, flowerless, shelterless, comfortless, and godless. I would not be half so much to blame in cheating you out of a farm as you in cheating a woman out of the happiness of a lifetime.

A MAID FORLORN.

BY THE DUCHESS.

"I've been there," returns the Major, irritably. "It nearly froze me. Barely got off alive. And there isn't a chair in it fit to sit on."

"The dining-room," begins Craven, weakly, at his wits' end, but the Major stops him.

"And dinner preparing"—in disgust. "If there's one thing I hate, it is being in a place where servants are fussing and fuddling plates and silver. One has eaten one's dinner in anticipation long before one gets it. No, thank you. I shall stay here until the gong sounds; it's a degree less depressing than the other rooms."

Driven to this pass Mr. Craven falls to thinking, and happily remembers how Richards, when showing him the house, had told him of a second door leading from the closet where Cissy is immured into the dining-room. If only the key of this door can be produced!

Making some frivolous excuse, he forsakes the Major, and, rushing headlong through the hall, bursts like a whirlwind into Mrs. Richards's parlor, and asks her, with incoherent anxiety, if the key he hopes for is still in existance.

She thinks so—with maddening hesitation—but is afraid she can not lay her hand on it at this particular moment, that is, unless—

Here she pauses, and meditates for some time, unconscious, dear soul, of the torments her master is enduring. When she has thought it out carefully, and when the young man is almost on the verge of lunacy, she recollects all about it, and, with a smiling countenance, delivers the key to him.

Seizing it joyfully, he speeds toward the second door, cries, "Open sesame!" and enters eagerly—only to find the dining-room empty and the bird flown!

Horrible visions of discovery, and consequences of the most unpleasant nature, crowd upon his brain as he goes back to the small drawing-room, expecting to find the Major irate and indignant, and Miss Rivers in the midst of angry argument. But no. The Major is in his chair, serene, sleepy. There is no sound of discord, not the faintest sign of Miss Rivers's presence anywhere!

CHAPTER IV.

When Cissy—who, in her enforced concealment, could hear all that passed in the next room—had listened to the Major's spoken determination not to quit his seat until dinner was announced, her heart died within her. The anteroom—closet rather—was stuffy, above all things, dark; and if there was one thing in the world to which Cissy strenuously objected, it was the dark.

Yet even at this pass she put her faith in the man who had beguiled her into her prison, trusting to him to bring her safely out of it again, and that without delay. But when this man coolly left the drawing-room—and left her to her fate—and she heard his footsteps dying away through the hall, her faith melted like the morning dew the poet sings of, and her indignation knew no bounds.

To calmly forsake her, desert her in her hour of need! Could anything be more abominable, more base, than such conduct! She knew nothing of the second door and Craven's eager efforts to release her, and therefore abused him heartily whilst standing, cold, half-frightened, in her detested shelter. Would she have to stay there in "durance vile" until dinner was served? She supposed so; unless, indeed, something very unforeseen—nay, marvelous—should happen, now he had so cruelly abandoned her.

Even as she so decided, the unforeseen, the marvelous did actually occur. A noise outside attracted her—not that it was very attractive in itself—a breath, a sneeze, a—Was it, could it be a snore? It was. A veritable, undeniable prolonged snore.

Miss Rivers laid her head upon her bosom. Emancipation seemed near. Opening the door cautiously she peeped out, and saw the Major sunk in the glow of the firelight wrapped in innocent slumber. "Now or never" was her motto. Still cautiously she came forth, and began her journey, through the long, unlighted room, hoping to make her escape without discovery.

Two doors lay before her, one leading into the hall, one into the conservatory. Keeping well in the shadow, she skirted the wall, and passed the first window in all safety.

The Major still snored on tranquilly, enchantingly—sweeter music Miss Rivers had never heard—but, alas, as she reached the second window, her heavy serge gown caught in one of those fragile abominations of the present day—a weakly chair done in gold and ebony, a woven seat of rushes—and the delicate article came to the ground, dragging with it a flower-stand and a few other things of little value, but undoubted china manufacture, to judge by the crash that followed.

With a loud snort, the Major awoke and turned his head in her direction. The malicious fire blazed brightly, and she knew she was seen, indistinctly, yet distinctly.

To fly was the one thought uppermost in her mind, and, the conservatory door being nearest, she made for that. The Major followed in hot pursuit, crying "Thieves!"—cowardice, unfortunately, not being one of his many vices. She had her hand on the handle of the desired door; it resisted her; in her agitation she had turned the handle the wrong way; and, in spite of his gouty foot, the Major was gaining on her.

Here the kindly gods came to her aid; the Major stumbled over the prostrate chair, the broken flower-pot, and the other trifles, and came heavily to his knees. Picking himself up however from amongst the debris, he continued his chase, nothing daunted, muttering an imprecation. Cecil, having turned the refractory handle by this time and entered the conservatory, got hurriedly behind a huge shrub, rich in leaves, that adorned one corner, and with the calmness of despair awaited Fate.

It came in the shape of the Major—mumbling and grumbling. He too entered the conservatory, looked eagerly around him, and found it, as he believed, to his consternation—empty!

No sign of any human thing betrayed itself to his astonished eyes, and the door leading to the steps and the open air was locked on the inside; yet surely it was this way the figure—the—whatever it was—had passed a moment since!

"Ugh; nobody after all!" he growled, in disgust. "Nothing to show for my trouble. Must have been a ghost. Couldn't have been dreaming, as I never sleep before dinner, never. Ghost, of course! These wretched old houses are always full of 'em—at least, so I'm told. Haven't seen one till to-night. Well, it's a new experience; but I can't say I think much of it. Tame, very tame. Ugh, ugh, what a draughty hole!"—and so back, still grumbling, to his arm-chair and Morpheus again, leaving Cecil, terrified but safe, behind her friendly shrub.

When Craven comes up to the drawing-room fire—puzzled and uncertain how to proceed—the Major so far rouses himself for the second time as to ask languidly:

"Whom have you got in the house besides the servants?"

Craven is somewhat taken aback, but has sufficient presence of mind left him to enable him to ask blandly in turn:

"How do you mean?"

"Well, my dear fellow, the most extraordinary thing has happened. A few moments since some one, who refused to answer me, walked deliberately through this room."

"This room!" repeats Craven, innocently.

"Yes, here—there—over on that spot," answers the Major, testily, but disconcertedly. "I saw it with my own eyes. I wasn't asleep, you know"—sternly. "I never do that sort of thing out of my bed; but I confess I was in deep thought about—about your affairs, when a noise attracted my attention. I looked up, and there was a figure just beyond, near the curtains—a dark figure"—reflectively. "It couldn't have been a winding-sheet, because it was quite dark."

"The housekeeper, no doubt," says Craven, with an air of settled conviction.

"Eh?"—incredulously. "Is your housekeeper a very slim young woman?"

"Well, not so very slim," admits Mr. Craven, suppressing the fact that both his arms would not meet round Mrs. Richards's waist.

"Has she fair hair?" catechises the Major.

"Not exactly, though it might be considered so by this light," says Craven, suppressing the second fact that every hair in Mrs. Richards's head that is not white is of the raven's hue.

"Does she always," demands his inquisitor anxiously, "wear a dark, noiseless gown?"

"Always," returns Craven, unblushingly, even as he calls to mind Mrs. Richards's favorite dress, a wine-colored silk of curious texture, that literally crackles as she goes.

"Oh, well, it wasn't the housekeeper! It was a lady, in my opinion"—mysteriously—"the ghost of a lady. It reminds me strongly of somebody." The Major pauses, and Craven's blood runs cold. "No doubt"—thoughtfully—"it was the ghost of one of your grandaunts, who both died here." Craven breathes again.

"You don't surely believe in ghosts?" he says, laughing, feeling intense relief, and imagining Cissy safe in Mrs. Richards's parlor.

"Why not?" retorts the Major. "Nothing is impossible. And I tell you I watched her minutely, and, as I watched, she reached the door over there, paused a moment, and then disappeared. I searched every hole and corner in the conservatory"—the Major firmly believes he has done so—"but could discover no sign of a living occupant; and the door leading to the garden was locked on the inside. She must have gone through the key-hole, or else melted into thin air; that's the usual thing, isn't it? The only thing that staggers me," he adds, "is the color; she ought to have been in white, oughtn't she?—graveclothes and that—eh?"

"Sometimes they vary," answers Craven, gravely. "I suppose even our defunct relatives have their fancies; and I have heard of people appearing after many years in the garments they last wore, or at least most affected, when in life. Perhaps my grandaunts looked with scorn upon gaudy raiment. It went into the conservatory, did you say?"—carelessly. "Very curious! No doubt you are right; most old families have their skeletons; it is rather respectable than otherwise, and pride feels no pain. I think, do you know, I shall just take a look in there myself."

He saunters slowly down the room, lest the Major should guess at his inward anxiety, and has hardly got through the glass door when two cold nervous little hands fasten on his arm and a voice whispers with tremulous eagerness—

"Let me out of this at once—at once."

"How imprudent of you," he whispers back," to come here!"

"How unkind of you," she retorts, "to leave me there!"

He begins a vehement explanation, still in a whisper; and, peace being restored, he draws her to the door opening on to the steps that lead to the ground beneath; and, having passed through, they bolt the door, this time on the outside, and once more feel free.

The reaction agrees with Cecil; she stops short on the top step, he standing a little below her, and laughs aloud.

"If he had found me then," she says, "after his hard run, nothing would have cleared me. What should I have done?"

"I know what I should have done," returns Craven. "I should have strangled him then and there. It would have been the only way out of it, and I should not have hesitated for a moment."

"Poor old man; he little knows what a violent death he has escaped! But are you sure he has heard nothing about me?"

"Certain. He does not allow his man to say even 'good-morning' to him—thinks it infra dig.—so of course he hears no gossip; and, as you know, he is leaving here the first moment it is practicable."

Whether this last remark suggests other thoughts, who can say? But on the instant Miss Rivers turns her face heavenward, pauses a little, and then lays her hand upon his shoulder.

"What, have you noticed nothing?" she says, with suppressed excitement. "See, see—it has ceased to snow!"

"So it has," he returns slowly, the enthusiasm that ought to belong to the occasion being absent from his tone.

"What a way you say that!" she exclaims, severely, scrutinizing his face in the dim light. "Just as if you did not care, as if you were not a bit glad. Why"—after a pause "I actually think you are sorry!"

"Don't think it; be sure of it," responds the young man gloomily.

Perhaps at this point it occurs to Cecil—who in some matters is a wise child—that his tone is dangerous. At all events, she declines to continue the conversation, and begins again to descend the steps slowly. But presently they become aware that the snow has arisen as high as the second step from the bottom, and the portico of the hall-door is thirty yards distant; and how shall velvet shoes and silk stockings and dainty little feet wade through it all without getting wet?

"What is to happen next?" she asks, making a comical gesture of despair with her hand. "I forgot all about the snow, and that I must walk through it to get indoors again. Oh, that tiresome Major!"

"Can I— Would it— May I carry you across?" he demands, with a proper amount of hesitation.

"Oh, no!"—shrinking back. "I shouldn't like that at all."

"Well, I didn't suppose you would, you know!" he returns, somewhat aggrieved. "But I see nothing else to be done, and it will only be for a moment."

"Dear me, it isn't that!" says Cissy, honestly, divining his thoughts. "I don't mind that so much as— Are you sure—positive—you would not let me fall!"

He laughs.

"Let you fall," he says—"a child like you! I am not such a puny fellow as you seem to imagine."

He draws himself up to his full height, which is magnificent, throws up his chin rather scornfully, and in this attitude certainly looks as fine a specimen of manhood as one need wish to see. Miss Rivers, though piqued, has to admit this fact.

"Child!" she says, indignantly. "I'm not a child. I was eighteen last month. How long does one continue to be a child, I wonder?"

"I beg your pardon"—meekly. "I retract my words. Let me say rather that I think I am sturdy enough to bear the weight of a middle-aged lady of your size."

"I'm heavier than you think"—doubtfully.

(To be Continued.)

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ex ra MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competitors, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every housowner, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our inventions, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $120 to $200 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through subagents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employers of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, as you will lose the best chance ever offered to make money all your spare moments or all the time to make money.

A children's concert is announced for this evening in the Opera House, under the auspices of the Saved Army. An admission fee of 5c. will be imposed to pay expenses.

Hand in Your Names.

All who attend the carnival are in costume, are requested to hand in their cards, with their names and the characters they represent plainly written thereon.

Smoker's?

Beware of cigars artificially flavored for the purpose of hiding the poor quality of tobacco used in flavored cigars. Insist upon having the old reliable brands—"CABLE" and "EL PADRE."

Prizes on Exhibition.

The prizes to be given at the Fire Brigade Band carnival to-night are on exhibition in the window of Mr. A. McNeil's store. They are undoubtedly beautiful and valuable, and no doubt will be sharply contested for.

Migratory Movements.

Christopher Wheeler left town for Liverpool yesterday. He went by the C. P. R. and connections for Halifax, and from that port will take the Allan Line for Liverpool. Mr. Alex. Elliott supplied the necessary pasteboard.

Mr. Elliott also ticketed the Peterborough Curlers for Toronto at reduced rates.

Concert at Lakefield.

A Concert (in some respects a repetition of the one lately given in St. Paul's School room by the children of Dr. Barnardo's Home) will be held in the P. C. A. Hall Lakefield, on Monday evening next, to commence at 7 30. p. m. Residents of Peterborough who are desirous of joining the party, should communicate with Mr. Edward Duff, Hazel Brae, not later than Saturday. Tickets for the concert alone, adults, 25 cents; children, 15c. Conveyance to and from Lakefield, including admission to concert, 50c,

Going to Play Toronto.

Five rinks of the local curlers left for Toronto by the evening train yesterday and by this morning's train. They will play both the Granites and the Caledonians. They expect to have a "brau" time which they no doubt will. The rinks are composed as follows: A. Stevenson, W. VanKvery, A. McNeil and Dr. Doucher, skip; H. B. Merrick, C. McGill, R. S. Davidson and W. G. Ferguson, skip; C. A. Weller, H. Clinton, W. Sailsbury and T. P. Attrill, skip; S. Clegg, J. B. Pentland, F. Haultain and T. Rutherford, skip; J. Stanger, John McClelland, M. Millar and Geo. Brown, skip.

Police Court.

Edward Webb was brought before Police Magistrate Dumble this morning, charged with fighting in a public place. Matthew Higgins was summoned on a similar charge but did not appear. Webb denied the charge, and called on Chas. Delille, alias Storms, to prove his innocense.

Delille, on oath, stated that on Monday night when the Salvation Army was parading George street, when almost in front of Adam Hall's store, he felt some person seize him from behind. He turned round and broke away. Webb, who was near, stepped between him and the person who had seized him. He found out since that Higgins was the name of the party who laid hands on him. When Webb went between them, Higgins hit Brother Webb on the nose and left for the sidewalk. He did not know whether Webb hit Higgins or not. He had left almost as soon as he got free.

Webb was sworn and stated that as the army were marching up George street, a man broke into the ranks and pulled two men out. Delille and a strange soldier were the ones. When he saw the man, whom he since learned was named Higgins, pulling Delille, he went to him. Higgins immediately let go Delille and struck him (Webb) between the eyes, giving him two black eyes and a bruised nose. He struck Higgins with a torch in self-defence. Higgins might have been "two shades in the wind" at the time.

As Higgins was not present the magistrate said he could not settle the matter, and enlarged it indefinitely.

Chancery Spring Sittings.

Chancellor Boyd will preside at the Chancery Spring Sittings on the following dates: Peterborough, April 21st; Belleville, April 7th; Lindsay, April 27th; Cobourg, April 16th.

A Party at the Home.

The boys and girls at the Hazel Brae Home invited their late companions, who are now out at service, to a party at the Home last night. The guests assembled and all enjoyed themselves thoroughly. A sleighing party was formed and some lively sport was had in coursing down the neighboring hills.

An Excellent Portrait.

There is on exhibition in the window of McKee's drug store, an excellent photographic portrait, finished in oil from a small photo, of Mr. Josiah Ball, of Cavan, who has just returned from a trip to Florida. The portrait is from the studio of Messrs. Hammil & Ball, and reflects great credit on their skill and artistic treatment of such subjects.

New Musical Publications.

We acknowledge with thanks the receipt from A. L. Davis & Co. of two of Suckling & Sons' musical publications, one the "Eldorado" Polka and the other the "Polka Militaire," composed by Henry Bourlier. The latter has a fine tinted lithograph title page and is, as well as the first mentioned, well worth the study of pianists. Both these fine pieces together with other music can be secured from Messrs. Davis & Co.

On Exhibition.

Mr. Ruf. Stevenson has his miner's lamp lit and on exhibition in the window of Mr. M. C. O'Neil's store. Although the lamp does not rival the electric light it does well for its size. In the same window there is also exhibited a wood fan, carved out of a rough piece of cedar, the handiwork of a lad named A. Sutherland, in the employment of Mayor Stevenson. The work on the fan shows considerable mechanical ingenuity and merits an inspection.

Another Business Change.

Messrs. John Kincaid and George McWilliams have purchased from Mr. Thomas McKee his planing mills, and take possession on Monday next. The new proprietors being practical and pushing men, and, succeeding to an established business that has been conducted in such a manner that it has won a reputation equivalent to a handsome capital, there is every prospect of the new firm succeeding to the extent of their most sanguine expectations.

Preparations.

The preparations for the carnival this evening are of an extensive character. The rink has been gaily decorated with evergreens, streamers, flags and chinese lanterns, and presents a lively holiday appearance. During this afternoon an advertisement band wagon containing a drum band, and hauled by a horse and donkey, tandem, the donkey carrying a boy who steered the concern, promenaded the principal streets, drawing the attention of the public to the fact that to-day was the date of the second Fire Brigade carnival. The Band also paraded the streets and attended the Children's carnival in the afternoon.

What We May Expect.

The coming bachelors' and benedicts' ball to be a brilliant gathering.

Soldiers at the conclusion of a military meeting to close with cheers for the Queen—next time.

An immense gathering of spectators.

A gorgious galaxy of masks,

A colossal congress of Shaksperian characters,

A brobdignagian success at the band carnival to-night.

And every masker to hand in his or her character card at the door.

A five-cent gospel army concert in the Opera House to-night.

The butter market to feel proud over its record of last night—the gospel of grace on one flock and the gospel of gunpowder on the other.

Fresh to strong south and west winds; mostly cloudy, mild weather, with light rain; colder to-morrow.

Personal.

Mr. R. Junkin Brockville, one of the Sun life's most successful general agents is in town visiting friends. He is the guest of Mr. W. H. Hill. Mr. Junkin was one of the most successful students that attended the Peterborough Collegiate Institute.

Parliament Re-assembles.

Mr. Gladstone Makes a Statement of His Intentions.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—Parliament re-assembled to-day. Mr. Gladstone stated in het commons that after the government had concluded the financial business they would be able to state a part, if not the whole, of the Irish measures they intended to introduce. He expected to be through the financial business about March 22. The government had no intention of renewing coercion in Ireland. Mr. Gladstone said he would follow the Eastern policy inaugurated by Lord Salisbury.

Samples of the Way It Is Done.

Mr. Mulock, in his speech in Bradford, pointed out the way in which the Government succeeded in adding largely to the expenditures of the year. They added $670,000 to the police and military expenses of the Northwest; they voted $60,000 to force Sir John Macdonald's unconstitutional License Act on the country, and $50,000 to meet the expenses in connection with the act up to the 30th of April, 1886. They appointed 211 revising officers, 211 clerks, 211 bailiffs, and 211 printers in connection with the new Franchise Act. They appointed two librarians at Ottawa, and increased the cost of the library staff to $16,000 per year They appointed deputy speakers on a salary of $2,000 a year, to say nothing about the expenses incident to many other unnecessary charges.

P., presided. The object of the conference was to arrange the holding of teacher's examinations and junior matriculation examinations so as to be as convenient as possible to the High Schools.

A Great Family Affliction.

OTTAWA, Feb. 18.—Yesterday morning Miss Kate Moore, daughter of the wealthy lumber merchant, was found dead in bed. She had been suffering from neuralgic pain in the head, and to relieve her suffering her friends injected chloroform into her ear just before she retired. Fearing the young lady may only be in a trance the family have decided to postpone the funeral for a few days. Those of the medical profession who have viewed the body are of opinion that life is extinct, yet there appears to be doubt in the minds of the family.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brand of cigars, which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pay them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby.

A Sure Remedy for Neuralgia.

Neuralgia is one of the most common and distressing complaints incidental to this climate. It is not confined to any particular season, for whilst most general in the winter seasons, yet many suffer its excruciating agony in the heat of summer. In late years this form of disease has become better known, and consequently the means of relief have become greatly increased in numbers, as well as in efficacy. Among the most powerful and penetrating combinations, placed within the reach of the public for the relief of neuralgia, we can mention no remedy equal to or more certain than Polson's NERVILINE. Its power over pain is something wonderful, and we advise a trial for neuralgia, or any other painful complaints. Nerviline is sold by all druggists at 25 cents a bottle, also trial bottles at 10 cents.

THE MARRIAGE RING.

Dr. Talmage's Ideas of the Duties of Husbands to Wives.

How Men Who Have Not Kept Their Contracts Can Now Make Amends.

(Concluded from Yesterday.)

My brother, do not get angry at what I say, but honestly compare the promises you made and see whether you have kept them. Some of you spent every evening of the week and since then you spend every evening away, except you have influenza or some sickness on account of which the doctor says you must not go out. You used to fill your conversation with interjections of adulation, and now you think it sounds silly to praise the one who ought to be more attractive to you as the years go by, and life grows in severity of struggle and becomes more sacred by the baptism of tears—tears over losses, tears over graves. Compare the way some of you used to come in the house in the evening, when you were attempting the capture of her affections, and the way some of you go into the house in the evening now. Then what politeness, what distillation of smiles, what graciousness, sweet as the peach orchard in blossom week.

Now some of you come in and put your hat on the rack and scowl and say: "Lost money to-day!" and you sit down at the table and criticise the way the food is cooked. You shove back before the others are done eating, and snatch up the evening paper and read, oblivious of what has been going on in that home all day. The children are in awe before the domestic autocrat. Bubbling over with fun, yet they must be quiet, and healthful curiosity, yet they must ask no questions. The wife has had enough annoyances in the nursery and parlor and kitchen to fill her nerves with nettles and spikes. As you have provided the money for food and wardrobe, you feel you have done all required of you. Toward the good cheer and the intelligent improvement and the moral entertainment of that home, which at the longest can last but a few years, you are doing nothing. You seem to have no realization of the fact that soon these children will be grown up, or in their sepulchres, and will be far removed from your influence, and that the wife will soon end her earthly mission, and that house will be occupied by others, and you yourself will be gone.

GENTLEMEN, FULFIL YOUR CONTRACTS.

Christian marriage is an affectional bargain. In heathern lands a man wins his wife by achievements. In some countries wives are bought by the payment of so many dollars, as so many cattle or sheep. In one country the man gets on a horse and rides down where a group of women are standing, and seizes one of them by the hair, and lifts her struggling and resisting on his horse, and if her brothers and friends do not overtake her before she gets to the jungle, she is his lawful wife. In another land the masculine candidate for marriage is beaten by the club of the one whom he would make his bride. If he cries out under the pounding, he is rejected. If he receives the blows uncomplainingly, she is his by right. Endurance and bravery and skill decide the marriage in barbarous lands, but Christian marriage is a voluntary bargain in which you promise protection, support, companionship and love.

Business men have in their fireproof safes a file of papers containing their contracts, and sometimes they take them out and read them over to see what the party of the first part and the party of the second part really bound themselves to do. Different ministers of religion have their own peculiar forms of marriage ceremony, but if you have forgotten what you promised at the altar of wedlock, you had better buy or borrow an Episcopal prayer-book, which contains the substance of all intelligent marriage ceremonies, when it says: "I take thee to be my wedded wife, to have and to hold from this day forward, for better or worse, for richer or for poorer, in sickness and in health, to love and to cherish till death do us part, according to God's holy ordinance, and thereto pledge thee my troth." Would it not be a good idea to have that printed in tract form and widely distributed?

The fact is that many men are more than to their own wives. They will let the wife carry a heavy coal scuttle upstairs, and will at one bound clear the width of a parlor to pick up some other lady's pocket handkerchief. There is an evil which I have seen under the sun, and it is common among men, namely, husbands in flirtation. The attention they ought to bestow upon their own wives they bestow upon others. They smile on them coyly and saknince, and with a manner that seems to say: "I wish I was free from the old drudge at home. What an improvement you would be on my present surroundings." And bouquets are sent, and accidental meetings take place, and late at night the man comes to his prosaic home whistling and hilarious, and wonders that the wife is jealous. There are thousands of men who, while not positively immoral, need radical correction of their habits in this direction. It is madness immeasurable for a man by his behavior to seem to say to his wife: "You can't help yourself, and I will go where I please, and admire whom I please, and I defy your criticism."

Why did you not have that put in the bond, O domestic Shylock? Why did you not have it understood before you were pronounced husband and wife, that she should have only a part of the dividend of your affections, that when, as time rolled on and the cares of life had erased some of the bright lines from her face, and given unwieldiness to her form, you would have the reserved right to pay obeisance to cheeks more rubicund and figure lither and more agile, and as you demanded the last pound of patience and endurance on her part, you could, with the emphasis of an Edwin Forrest, a Macready, have tapped the eccentric marriage document and have said: "It's in the bond!" If this modern Rebekah where she had been alighting she would have ordered the camel drivers to turn the caravan backward towards Padan-aram. Flirtation has its origin either in dishonesty or licentiousness. The married man who indulges in it is either a fraud or a rake. However high up in society such a one may be, and however sought after, I would not give a 2-cent piece, though it had been three times clipped, for the virtue of either the masculine or feminine flirt.

The most worthy things for the thousands of married men to do is to go home and apologize for past neglects and brighten up their old love. Take up the family Bible and read the record of the marriage day. Open the drawer of relics and the box inside the drawer containing the trinkets of your dead child. Take up the pack of yellow-covered letters that were written before you became one. Rehearse the scenes of joy and sorrow in which you have mingled. Put all these things as fuel on the altar, and by a coal of sacred fire rekindle the extinguished light. It was a blast from hell that blew it out, and a gale from heaven will fan it into a blaze.

Ye who have broken marriage vows speak out. Take your wife into all your plans, your successes your defeats, your ambitions. Tell her everything. Walk arm in arm with her into places of amusements, and on the piazza of summer watering places, and up the rugged way of life, and down through dark ravine, and when one trembles on the way let the other be reinforcement. In no case pass yourself off as a single man practicing gallantries. Do not, after you are fifty years of age, in ladies' society try to look young-mannish. Interfere not with your wife's religious nature. Put her not in that awful dilemma in which so many Christian wives are placed by their husbands, who ask them to go to places or do things which compel them to decide between loyalty to God and

LOYALTY TO THE HUSBAND.

Rather than ask her to compromise her Christian character, encourage her to be more and more a Christian, for there will be times in your life when you will want the help of all her Christian resources; and certainly, when you remember how much influence your mother had over you, you do not want the mother of your children to set a less gracious example. It pleases me greatly to hear the unconverted and worldly husband say about his wife, with no idea that it will go to her ears: "There is the most godly woman alive, her goodness is a perpetual rebuke to my waywardness. Nothing on earth could induce her to do a wrong thing. I hope the children will take after her instead of after me. If there is any heaven at all I am sure that she will go there."

Aye, my brother, do you not think it would be a wise and a safe thing for you to join her on the road to heaven? You think you have a happy home now, but what a happy home you would have if you both were religious! What a new sacredness it would give to your marital relation, and what a new light it would throw on the forehead of your children. In sickness what a comfort. In reverses of fortune, what a wealth. In death, what a triumph. God meant you to be the high priest of your household. Go home to-day and take the Bible on your lap, and gather all your family yet living around you, and those not living will hear of it in a flash, and as ministering spirits will hover—father and mother and children gone, and all all your celestial kindred. Then kneel down, and if you can't think of a prayer to offer, I will give you a prayer, namely: "Lord God, I surrender to Thee myself and my beloved wife, and these dear children. For Christ's sake forgive all the past and help us for all the future. We have lived together here, may we live together forever. Amen and amen!" Dear me! What a stir it would make among your best friends on earth and in heaven.

Joseph, the second, the emperor, was that he excited the unbounded love of most of his subjects. He abolished serfdom, established toleration, and lived in the happiness of his people. One day while on his way to Ostend to declare it a free port, and while at the head of a great procession, he saw a woman at the door of her cottage in dejection. The emperor dismounted and asked the cause of her grief. She said that her husband had gone to Ostend to see the emperor, and had declined to take her with him, for, as he was an alien, he could not understand her loyal enthusiasm, and that it was the one great desire of her life to see the ruler for whose kindness and goodness and greatness she had an unspeakable admiration; and her disappointment in not being able to go and see him was simply unbearable. The Emperor Joseph took from his pocket a box decorated with diamonds surrounding a picture of himself, and presented it to her, and when the picture revealed to whom she was talking she knelt in reverence and clapped her hands in gladness before him. The emperor took the name of her husband and the probable palace where he might be found at Ostend, and had him imprisoned for the three days of the emperor's visit, so that the husband returning home found that the wife had seen the emperor while he had not seen him.

SO KIND AND SO PHILANTHROPIC

In many families of this earth the wife, through the converting grace of God, has seen the "King in his beauty," and He has conferred upon her the pearl of great price, while the husband is as "alien from the covenant of promise, without God and without hope in the world," and imprisoned in worldliness and sin." Oh, that they might arm in arm go this day and see Him who is not only [illegible] but the Joseph of earthly [illegible], but "Lord over all, in earth and air and sky." His touch is life. His voice is music. His smile is heaven.

A Brutal Conductor.

"I can't let this girl travel over this road on that half-fare ticket," said the new conductor to the Widow Flapjack.

"Why not? What is the matter with my little girl?"

"She is no child. She is more than half grown."

"Well, if that don't beat everything then I'll give it up. Here poor little Mamie has been traveling over this road on a child's ticket for the last ten years, and now all at once you say she is no child. That's a new way to worry the traveling public."

She paid full fare, and then the diminutive girl in the corner pulled herself out so to speak, like a marine telescope.—Texas Siftings.

The Poetry and Prose of Drink.

This danger of rapid drinking is a very important one to note. Granted that the liquid is all right, the time for taking it right, and our body in the proper condition to receive it, the habit of swallowing as fast as we can, is a most pernicious one. It is disagreeable, vulgar, and smacks of low life; moreover it robs the cup that is emptied, of half its charm. What an aroma is lost; what a delicate flavor, by all this unseemly haste! Take, oh friend, we beg, a few lessons in the art of drinking. Observe the gentle woman minister to her palate at the family meal. It is a poem to be read by all,—her fine-mannered deftness, and her self-control. No wonder that this vulgar habit is unhealthful. Christian manners bring their reward, while an outraged stomach takes it own method of revenge.—Margaret Sidney, in Good Housekeeping.

Dromios at the Capital.

A Washington correspondent writes: There are six pairs of dromios in Washington this winter, and the curious mistakes which are daily occurring are the gossip of society and the hotels. Tom Reed, the leader of the republican side of the house, has a counterpart in the leading photographer of Washington, and the joke is that the general air and voice of the two are precisely alike. The other night Stanley Matthews and a fellow-congressman of Reed's saw this photographer at the theater and took him for Reed. They went over to him and addressed him, but he knew nothing of the subjects on which they asked to be posted, and it was some time before they discovered that they were interviewing the wrong man. Two other dromios are Wellborn, of Texas, and the frowsy-headed fellow who writes cards in the lobby of the house. Wellborn has been taken for the card-writer time and again, and he grows angry, it is said, every time such a mistake occurs. The likeness of Gay, the sugar millionaire of Louisiana, to Senator Sherman is very striking, and Cleveland and Manning are sometimes taken for one another. I have told you stories of how O'Donnel, of Michigan, has been mixed up time and again with Assistant Postmaster General Stephenson, and there is an ex-member of the Pennsylvania legislature here, who is noted for having sold his railroad pass for an overcoat, who looks exactly like the angular objector, Holman, of Indiana.

"Don't know Cranmer of Colorado?" queried a Montana man at the Merchants' a few days ago. "Well, I thought everybody knew Cranmer. He is one of the biggest cattlemen, not only in Colorado, but in the world. His cattle—and there are a good many of them, too—are all branded with three circles—the three-circle brand, as he calls it. Cranmer was at a convention of cattlemen at Hugo. He was conversing with a party of cattlemen when one of the party happened to mention the name of Shakspeare. 'Shakspeare?' observed Cranmer, 'where have I heard that name before? What kind of a brand does he use on his cattle?'"—St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

One day last week there were "three vacant chairs" in one of the fourth-grade classes of a large school in this city. It was discovered that the absentees had been playing truant. Two of them succumbed to evidence, and, pleading guilty, met with due punishment from the official rattan. But the third stoutly maintained that he had acted by his mother's permission. The mother was sent for and compelled to implicate her darling in a falsehood. Turning to that young reprobate, she said in a tone of tearful remonstration: "How could you say such a thing? The idea of my telling you to run away from school!" "Yes, mamma, you did. Don't you remember? I asked you if I couldn't 'play hookey' with two other boys, and you said yes, I might, if I wouldn't hurt myself." And so she had, as she was obliged to confess. She had innocently taken "playing hookey" to imply some boyish game.—San Francisco.

THE PROVINCIAL FINANCES.

Treasurer Ross' Financial Statement.

The following is a complete summary of the satisfactory statement of the Provincial Finances laid before the House by Hon. A. M. Ross, Provincial Treasurer, on Thursday:

The Provincial Treasurer assumed that the figures which he would present would be satisfactory. The last statement he presented showed that the expenditure was expected to exceed the revenue by $148,000, but he was happy to say that the position of the province at the close of the fiscal year was much better than he anticipated. The total estimated receipts from all sources for the year had been $2,585,148, while the actual expenditures were $2,697,420, or $112,271 more than was expected.

Referring to the items of expenditure the Treasurer said under the head of civil government there was a slight increase. The estimated expenditure had been $181,444, while $184,254 was expended. For legislation $125,762 was spent, while the estimated figures were $120,850. This excess he attributed to the increased cost of sessional writers and printing. For the administration of justice, $20,671 more was spent than had been estimated ($334,252.) The main item in this increase was on account of criminal justice in the different counties over which the government had no control. This, the treasurer contended, was a fair barometer of the commercial depression which now prevailed in the country. When times were hard there was more crime.

For education $7,735 in excess of the estimate ($525,829) had been expended. For public institutions $6,114 less than the estimate ($619,685) was expended. The average cost of maintenance of inmates of all the public institutions had been reduced from $128.22 per head per annum in 1884 to $174.40 in 1885, and in the insane asylums from $133 to $123. The immigration expenses had been $812 less than the estimate, $19,900, and $24,281 less than in 1884. For agriculture and arts the expenditure was $668 less than the estimate—$160,445. The principal item in this expenditure is in connection with the Agricultural College and Experimental Farm at Guelph.

For repairs and maintenance of public building $13,786 more was spent than was estimated, $48,815. It cost $7689 to keep the tumble-down parliament buildings in repair. For new public buildings the estimated cost had been $201,138, while only $155,720 were expended, and for public works $19,383 less than the estimate ($58,073) were expended. For colonization roads the estimate was $102,900, while $121,435 were expended. There was an excess of $3173 on the estimated expenditure ($102,900) on account of charges on crown lands. For refunds $1779 less than the estimate ($32,802) was spent, and under the head of miscellaneous the excesses of expenditure were $12,848. The estimate was $87,472.

It would thus be seen that the total expenditure under the supply bill was $2,693,523, and the receipts $2,697,420; leaving a surplus of $3894. [Applause.]

The treasurer next showed that the province was not living on capital, as had been charged by an honorable member, who had also held that the proceeds of the crown lands should not be touched, but should be set aside for permanent investments for the benefit of the posterity. From 1872 to 1885 to total receipts from the sale of crown lands had been $2 809,186, less interests included thereon ($1,028,064), from woods and forests $7,680,902 (less $514,051 for ground rents), or a total of $8,897,983. Allowing for refunds and crown land department expenses there had been a net income from this source of $6,878,240. The province had invested in public buildings (asylums, prisons, jails, normal schools, agricultural and scientific colleges) $,2,958,354: in public works and colonization roads $2,096,273; in railways $3,662,593, a total of $8, 717,220, or $1,839,-980 more than the total receipts from crown lands and woods and forests. [Applause.]

The treasurer referred to the charge that the expense of collecting the crown timber fees was excessive. He said that it cost Ontario but $17 per $100 to collect these dues, while it cost the Dominion $113 to collect every $100. [Sensation.]

The new expenditures that the government had to shoulder since 1872 were next referred to. During these years there had been an expenditure of $458,800 in new public buildings and maintaining new civil service officers and servants, such as division court inspectors, bureau of industries, revising voters' lists, shorthand writers for the courts, etc.

The Provincial Board of Health was also a new expense, costing the Province $8,000 annually. With regard to this the treasurer compared this sum with what it had cost Montreal for its smallpox outbreak. The city had spent no less than $150,000 for a single outbreak. The deaths in Quebec during that epidemic had been: Montreal 3500, suburbs 1500, other parts of the province 3000, total 8000; while in Ontario for the year there had been only 138 cases and 18 deaths.

The treasurer next presented to the House the sources from which he proposed to derive his revenue to carry on the business of the province as follows:—

Subsidy from Dominion	$1,126,572 39

Total	$2,720,975 22

The treasurer spoke of the item of revenue from license at some length. They expected $200,000 from this source, notwithstanding that the Scott act had been passed in several counties. They proposed to accomplish this by raising the price of licenses. To these tariffs the municipalities could add any amount they saw fit. The new tariff would be:

The treasurer then announced that there would be a total deficit of some $401,000 for the incoming year, equivalent to expected exceptional expenditures. This could not possibly be avoided, as there were several new charges on the revenue. For new asylum accommodation, which was a strict necessity, $195,000 was required; for consolidating the statutes (which only occurred every ten years). $40,000 was needed; for expenses at Colonial and Indian exhibition, $13,000; for additional charges on the administration of justice account, $40,000; for the land improvement fund, $93,000, and for new buildings at the Model Farm, say $20,000. For meeting this deficit in face of a stationary revenue there were several courses open.

1. They could seek new sources of income by new modes of taxation. 2. Reduce the charges on revenue by withholding grants or transferring to municipalities a portion of the charge of maintaining lunatics. The latter had been suggested by Mr. Meredith. Ontario dealt more liberally than any other country in the world with this class of unfortunates. The government rather than add new burdens to the municipalities, intended to meet the deficit by drawing directly on the surplus. He was happy to say that the province possessed such a surplus.

The treasurer submitted a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the province, which showed that after all liabilities presently payable were liquidated there was a clear surplus of $6,766,090.

References was then made to the economy that had been exercised by the government in public expenditure. During last year only $40,000 had been paid out of the surplus, and that sum went to Quebec.

"The treasurer of that province," said Mr. Ross, "intimated in his last financial statement that Sir John Macdonald had admitted that it was nothing but right that the Dominion should pay the costs of maintining provincial rights in the courts. If this were carried out, Ontario would have a claim of about $100,000 against the Dominion for expenses incurred in connection with the boundary award, the rivers and streams bill, the license dispute, etc.' The treasurer hoped that the difference between Quebec, the Dominion and Ontario would be speedily settled, but he feared that would have to be in the courts. He hoped the opposition would lend their assistance in seeing that Ontario secured her rights in this respect. He had done everything possible to have the claims of this province adjusted. The treasurer then moved the house into committee of supply.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $600 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through subagents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

A MAID FORLORN.

BY THE DUCHESS.

"How do you know what I think? But indeed you need not be afraid; I have often before carried women over the snow and swollen streams and that, and never yet broke down beneath my burden."

"Oh, indeed, have you!" says Cissy, with just one flash from her violet eyes. "How considerate of you! You remind me forcibly of one of your own stalwart knights in the gallery upstairs. Do you really spend your winters then in carrying distressed damsels over stony and snowy places? How slow you must find your summers!"

"Well, not quite! I do a few other things," answers Mr. Craven, mildly. "I mean, I have helped my sister once or twice, you know, when she was in a dilemma, and—"

"And your cousins and your aunts, no doubt," interrupts Miss Cissy, still willful.

"I'll tell you what it is!" he exclaims briskly, refusing further discussion. "You will catch your death of cold if you stay here arguing any longer. Your hands"—touching one of them—"are already nearly frozen. Come."

"Well, then, if I must"—still wavering. "Remember, it is only out of regard for your great-grandmother's velvet slippers that I give in. And indeed, after all, if I took them off, could I not—"

"No; you could not"—decisively; and, as though to end all controversy, he here takes her bodily up in his arms and bears her safely over the snow into the warmth and light of the grand old hall.

As she regains her feet, Cecil laughs a little and shakes her head, as though to rearrange the soft bright hair that a moment since brushed across his cheek as he carried her. Then she leans against the side of the inner door and sighs profoundly, as though thankful the journey that has seemed so unkindly short and so cruelly sweet to him is at an end. After which, with her most matter-of-fact air, she says sedately—

"Now go at once and change your boots. It will be quite as bad for you to catch cold as for me."

"Not quite. You have a mother, a sister, and"—with a slight contraction of the brows—"of course many others, to whom your sickness would be pain."

"Well, yes!" returns Cissy, slowly.

"But I— There is no one in the world I believe who would feel very much regret if I died."

"Oh, don't say that!" she exclaims, earnestly. "It is not true."

"Is it not? I know of no one."

"I do." She colors crimson, stays a moment, and then, as though compelled to finish her sentence, goes on calmly—"I know some one who would be very sorry indeed."

"Do you mean yourself?" he asks, quickly.

"Yes." She answers him honestly, because she can see no reason why she should not do so. He has been very kind to her. Surely she would be ungrateful to feel no sorrow at his death! Then she smiles carelessly, and says, with the most unsympathetic air, "So now you are bound to go and make yourself comfortable, as it would be an act of unpardonable rudeness on your part to make me 'very sorry indeed.' Was not that what I said?"

She has moved into the second hall, and is now standing within the full glare of the lamplight. Craven, who has followed her, thinks she is the most charming picture his eyes have ever seen; and it may be that his eyes tell her so.

"One moment," he says, seeing she is about to disappear. "You allowed just now that, if anything were to happen to you, your mother and—some others—would grieve for you. Are there—do not think me rude; I have no right to ask the question, I know—but are there many others?"

"Yes, a great many," she responds promptly, some surprise in her tone and in her large eyes, which she has opened to their fullest extent and has fixed upon him. "Why do you ask?"

"'There is safety in a multitude,'" quotes the young man, with a rather forced smile. "Is there no one in particular?"

"Do you mean a lover?" she asks, slowly, blushing again, a soft sweet blush, yet evidently much amused. "Dear me, no! I have any number of friends, but not one lover—at present. My last was a dear old thing of about sixty, excellently preserved; but he died eight months ago, and ever since I have been the actual 'Maid forlorn.' Ronnie"—regretfully—"has two lovers just now; but I have none."

Mr. Craven does not appear to sympathise with her affliction. On the contrary, he grows more cheerful with every word she utters, and at her last positively beams.

"And you—do you care for no one?" he asks, forgetful of everything but his intense desire to know.

Miss Rivers, who is still palpably amused, thinks this question just a little too much, and telling herself it is her turn now, determines to punish him for it. So she hesitates, opens her lips as though to speak, checks herself suddenly, looks down, turns a ring round and round upon her finger, and finally says, very consciously—

"I am afraid I do."

This is a crushing blow. All Craven's content dies on the spot. He glowers, knits his brow, and looks utterly miserable.

"Somebody, then, is very fortunate," he answers, rather unsteadily.

"But there are two of them," explains Cissy, shaking her head in a perplexed fashion, "and I can not quite decide which I love best."

"Love!" he echoes, in a desperate tone.

"Yes; I feel I adore them," she confesses, with unaffected and growing ardor. "So would you if you knew them. I sometimes tell myself it is unlucky to love them as I do, with all my heart."

"But you can not love two men equally!" he exclaims, aghast at this daring declaration. "It is impossible!"

Cissy, as though thoroughly confounded by his words, moves back a step or two, and raises one hand in bewilderment.

"Two men!" she says, disdainfully. "Of what are you thinking? Are you so behind the times as to imagine I should do such a recherché thing as to love a man? No, indeed; I was but thinking of—mamma and Monnie."

As though aware of her victory, she finishes this saucy speech with a merry laugh, and moves away from him in the direction of Mrs. Richards's parlor. She looks so arch, yet so provoking; so mischievous, yet so charming, that Craven, while acknowledging himself shamefully taken in, laughs, too, in spite of himself.

"Listen to me," he says, hastily. "If the Major goes to bed early, which, of course"—in disgust—"he won't do, because he ought—may I hope for a cup of tea from Mrs. Richards?"

"I am sure"—demurely—"she will be delighted to give it to you." Then, seeing the disappointment in his face, she adds kindly, and with a pretty smile, "Yes, do come. You will be quite welcome!"

And for once in his life the Major, though unconsciously, does the right thing, or, rather, the gout does it for him; he goes to bed early, and leaves his grateful host to follow his own devices.

* * * * * *

The next morning, what a change appears! Yesterday the world was white, but dull. To-day it is white, too, but sparkling, as though with innumerable diamonds. The snow has ceased to fall, the sun is shining bravely, lighting up with a million rays each spray and bough, on which the snow still lingers. The fir-trees have shaken off a little of their chilly burden, and now show again in parts some evidence of green. A few birds, though in a somewhat weak and melancholy fashion, are chanting a hymn of praise, and preening languidly their draggled plumage.

Cissy is so delighted with them that she opens wide her bedroom window and throws out to them the thin slice of bread and butter sent up to her with her tea half an hour before. They fly down to it, to her intense satisfaction, and chatter about it, and fight over it, before it comes to an end.

At the foot of the staircase, as she runs down to breakfast, she encounters Craven, who has been waiting for her.

"Was I not right?" she says, gayly, giving him her hand. "The weather has changed. See what a delicious morning it is! No doubt my being able to get home to-day, is there?"

"I hardly know if the horses can travel yet—the snow is so deep in some parts," he replies, avoiding her eyes.

"I shall walk if I can not go any other way," says Cissy, with quick determination and some faint doubt of him expressed in her tone.

"If it comes to that, and you must go, you certainly sha'n't walk," he returns. "I suppose, with care, a horse can be induced to go so far." Then reproachfully—"In what haste you are to be gone!"

He is looking so honestly grieved at the thought of her departure that her heart smites her.

"Only in haste to see the two at home," she says gently—"not to leave this house, where every one has been so kind to me, and where I have been quite happy. You must not for one moment think me ungrateful."

She says this so sweetly that he is comforted, and, when she has so far given in to his wishes as to breakfast with him, and has made herself specially charming throughout the meal, he is almost himself again. Directly breakfast is at an end, because he sees and understands her hurry to be gone, he orders the dog-cart to be brought round; and Cissy, once more enwrapped in her furs, is handed into it. Craven, seating himself beside her, takes the reins, the groom jumps up behind, and together they start for home.

The drive, though slow, and in parts difficult, is a rather silent one; but, just as they enter the gates of Branksmere, she, turning to him, says impulsively:

"What a long time it seems since last I was here—weeks almost!"

"I told you you were bored to death," he replies, with a curious smile, "though you were too good-natured to acknowledge it. See how heavily the time dragged."

"Nonsense! You know I did not mean that. I was only trying to explain to myself how in so short a time I could learn to regard you in such a friendly light. It seems absurd, doesn't it? Two short days—hardly two—and yet I feel quite as if you were my brother."

"Not in the least like your brother," says Craven, hastily. "Your brother would be far handsomer a fellow than I can ever hope to be. I don't feel a bit like your brother."

"Well, then, you seem to me like a very old friend"—smiling.

"I am glad of that. It tells me I am not quite out in the cold," he answers, heartily; and then they pull up at the hall-door, and the groom jumps down, and Cecil has barely time to reach the ground when Ronnie comes running out and, catching her in her arms, holds her until her mother releases her.

The liberated prisoner is embraced and kissed and examined with tearful eyes; and then, turning, flushed and smiling, toward Craven, she says, brightly:

"This is Mr. Craven, mamma. You must thank him for his kindness to me."

Mamma is secretly rather taken aback, as she has been picturing an imaginary Mr Craven to herself as a stout, middle-aged gentleman of fatherly aspect, not in the least like the tall, fashionably dressed young man who stands smiling genially down upon her now, hat in hand.

She conceals her surprise very successfully, however, and murmurs a few words of earnest gratitude; and then they all go into the house and up to the drawing-room fire, where explanations follow, and where Cissy—who is in wild spirits—makes them all laugh a good deal at her version of the adventure—especially Ronnie, who has found it intolerably dull without her.

"You will, of course, stay to luncheon," says Mrs. Rivers, pleasantly. "Your man can put up your horse for an hour or two."

She rings the bell; and Mr. Craven, who is singularly amenable to pressing on this occasion—hardly indeed requiring it, as he gives in at the first request—stays on for many hours, only tearing himself away with open reluctance as the daylight fades and thoughts of the Major and his duties as host crowd heavily upon him

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 30th, 1885.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, I looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two springless trusses made in York State, costing me $40. Nothing would retain my Hernia. I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down. It holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. B. KING.

NEWS OF THE TOWN.

Piano Tuning.

S. R. Huffman will be in town the first of the week. Orders left at Salisbury Bros.' Book Store or Mr. McClelland's Jewelry Store will be attended to.

The Weather.

Last night there was a decided change in the weather which almost everybody was aware of before the morning. Thermometers registered from 5° to 10° below zero.

Railway Blockades.

Both the C. P. R. and the G. T. R. trains were delayed to-day by snow blockades. A snow-plough ran off the track at Agincourt on the G. T. R., and will probably delay traffic until late in the evening. Mails are delayed some hours.

Children's Concert.

The concert given in the Opera House last night by the children of the Saved Army was a very happy affair. The attendance was large, while the entertainment, which consisted of chorus singing, instrumental music and dialogues, was a credit to the performers and management. Capt. Mant presided, Capts. Holman and Cornacher and the other officers of the Army assisted materially in making the concert a success.

Anniversary Services.

Church Anniversary Sermons will be preached in the George Street Church, to-morrow, at 11 a.m. by the Rev. F. H. Wallace, B.D., and at 7 p.m. by Rev. I. Tovell. The collections at both services will be in the interests of the Trust Fund. See notice of Rev. Dr. Tiffany's lecture on Tuesday night.

Market Items.

There was a lively market this morning. Butter, eggs and poultry were freely offered and sold well at slightly advanced prices. Meats were offered in large quantities and was the commodity for sale on the outside market. Prices were quoted at: butter in prints, 19 to 20c.; eggs, 22 to 23c.; chickens, per pair, 45 to 65c.; geese, 60c. to $1; turkeys, 75c. to $1; beef per cwt. $4 to $5.50; pork, per cwt. $5 to $5.50; wood and hay remain the same.

Evangelistic Work.

The revival services in George Street Church have been well sustained during the week, the attendance being large and the people attentive and devout. There has been no extravagance in the method or manner of conducting the meetings, at the same time there has not been wanting a fervor and earnestness in the services, which have resulted in good being done. Since the commencement of the meetings over forty have been led to Christ, besides the good work done among the young persons in the Sabbath School. It is the intention to continue the services next week.

Peterborough Curlers at Toronto.

The local curlers who played the Granites yesterday in Toronto, report that they were warmly received by the Toronto stone pushers, and although defeated had a very pleasant time. They were escorted to the Granite's rink in the morning, where four rinks engaged in a match with the invincible Granites. The ice was very bad and the stones had to be put on their keen side to work at all. At the close of the game Peterborough were in all 13 shots behind. Skips Attrill and Boucher were defeated, while skips Brown and Ferguson were victorious. The following are the scores:

TORONTO GRANITES.—D. R. Wilkie, skip, 26; W. T. Davidson, ship, 18; J. Hornibrook, skip, 10; G. W. Lillie, skip, 8.—Total 64.

PETERBOROUGH.—T. P. Attrill, skip, 7; Dr. Boucher, skip, 11; Geo. Brown, skip, 16; W. G. Ferguson, skip, 10.—Total—51.

Majority for Granites—13.

After the game was over the Peterborough Curlers were invited to lunch at the Walker House with the Granites, which invitation was, of course, accepted. At three o'clock the club went with the Caledonians to see their magnificent rink. As it was flooded with water, play was impossible. The evening was spent in company with the jovial Caledonians, who know how to perform the part of hosts to perfection. Both Toronto clubs promised to play return matches at as early a date as possible. The local curlers are well satisfied with their sport and only wish [illegible]

MERITORIOUS MASQUERADE

The Band Boys' Frosty Fete a Signal Success.

The Second of the Series "Captures the Confectionery"—The Jubilee of the Juveniles—A Big Array of Adult Masquerade—List of Masks, Prize Winners, Etc.

The second carnival of the Fire Brigade Band series which was held yesterday afternoon and evening, was in every particular a decided success. The rink was tastefully decorated with flags, banners, evergreens, chinese lanterns and etc., and presented a gay appearance. The Children's Carnival in the afternoon was well patronized. Over seventy little masqueraders appeared on the ice, representing almost as many characters. There was also a fair attendance of spectators, many of whom were the admiring parents of the children. The costumes were particularly good as well as numerous. The rink presented a pretty scene as the merry little skaters, displaying as many colors as Joseph's coat, flitted over the ice like fairies in a dance. The band was in attendance, and added to the pleasure of the occasion by supplying excellent music. The judges had a difficult task in awarding the prizes, and those who were successful in the competition merited their distinction well. They were as follows:

Best dressed girl in costume, Marion Hall, "Fairy."

Best dressed boy, Archie Morrow, "Page."

Best comic costume, girl, Nellie Bertram, as "Mother Hubbard."

Best comic costume, boy, John Bolton, "Chinese Tea Merchant."

The Evening Carnival

was one of the best, in point of excellence of costume and successful result, ever held in Peterborough. Early in the evening both spectators and maskers began to assemble, and for about an hour the gates were thronged, and a steady stream of motley humanity, in which sober citizens in every-day attire, mingled with the gay or grotesque figures of maskers, poured through the doors. The rink was gaily and tastefully ornamented with graceful festoonings of evergreens and drapery relieved with flags and bannerets, while over all the dazzling electric lamps poured shimmering cataracts of light, whose rich radiance falling upon the spotless floor of ice, caught the swaying shadows of feathery festoon and spray, and wove them into the texture of the crystal pavement, till the broad expanse took on the appearance of glittering marble mosaics, wrought by fairy hands. And when the Fire Brigade Band struck up the notes of the Grand March and the many maskers, gay and grotesque, outre and orthodox, sober and splendid, moved around the rink, in picturesque procession, the pageant, was a magnificent spectacle, which filled the numerous spectators with delight. Never, as thought by many, at any previous carnival, was there such a beautiful variety of costumes, so true to character, so gracefully worn as those of last night. Our space will not permit us to attempt to do justice by particular mention to the many meritorious costumes. If this were begun it would be hard to tell where to stop, each was the uniform excellence of the costumes. A liberal indulgence of the imagination on the appended list of masqueraders will give the reader some faint idea of the splendor of the scene. The Shakesperian characters were not as numerous as might have been expected.

THE PRIZE WINNERS.

In the costume competition the rivalry was keen and the judges, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Wood and Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Lewis, found it a very difficult matter to decide who should have the honors, and as Mr. Wood said when distributing the prizes, those who were fortunate in securing the prizes, might well be proud, as they were well earned. The prizes were awarded as follows:

Best dressed lady in costume, Miss Gulie Hall, as "Virgilia, wife of Coriolanus," prize, a handsome card receiver.

Best dressed gentlemen in Shakesperian costume, Mr. E. A. Reid as "Charles I," prize, a beautiful gold chain and seal.

Best dressed girl in costume, Miss Ida Uin, "Italian Street Peddler," prize, a silver napkin ring.

Best dressed boy in costume, Frank Larone, as "Cow Boy," prize, a handsome paper weight.

Best comic costume, lady, Miss Bertha Dean, as "One Hundred Years Ago."

THE RACES.

About half-past nine the ice was cleared and the hurdle race called for, which there was three entries. H. S. Kirby took the the lead from the start, with a strong and quick stroke, taking the hurdles in good style and was easily. Mr. J. Shevlin would have been a good second had he not tripped. The potato race followed, which was also won by the invincible Kirby, who showed that he was a friend of Ireland. As he sailed up and down the rink in this race he [illegible] with a scientific sweep of his hockey stick, [illegible] forth a shower of spuds. Shevlin was also second in this race. Allen Bell won the barrel race, after a laughable and exciting contest, carrying off a "No Plus Ultra" Accordeon as the prize. W. Grierson led the boys' race after a hard struggle. He received as his reward a breast pin. The ball race finished the races and was won by W. Sharpe, after an exciting chase.

Stock Shipments.

Mr. W. Dunoon, cattle dealer, shipped to Montreal to-day a car load of cattle and a car load of hogs.

Personal.

Mr. T. W. Casey, Provincial Inspector of License Inspectors, is in town, and will make Peterborough his headquarters during his tour of the adjoining district.

A New Citizen Honored.

It is seen by the Orillia Packet that Mr. Harry M. Allen, travelling agent of Messrs. Ambrose & Winslow, of Port Hope, who is about to remove from Orillia to Peterborough, is highly thought of in his late home. Previous to his departure for town, a large number of his fellow citizens entertained him at a banquet, presided over by Mayor McCosh, and the guest of the evening was the subject of many complimentary remarks respecting his many good qualities as a citizen in every respect. With such cordial recommendations, Mr. Allen is warmly welcomed to the privileges of Peterborough citizenship.

Dr. Tiffany.

An American paper says, wherever we find Dr. Tiffany whether in his pulpit in his home or on the lecture platform we find him uniformly running over with christian goodnature. The doctor is a man who knows how to work, and how to enjoy a holiday; how to deliver a sentential oration, and how to preach a sermon of great power; how to enchain the attention of an audience with a brilliant and spirited lecture, and how to minister to the sorrowing the blessed consolations of religion. To look at his well proportioned body and his smiling countenance you would take him for a man who had never known a day's sorrow or affliction in his life. In these respects, however, he has had the common lot of mortals.

In the early Christian ages so sure were the people that demonology was a practical evil that an order of exorcists was founded during the third century to deal with the lower powers, traces of which order have been found by historians.

At one of the schools in this city yesterday the master, in a general exercise, wrote the word "dozen" on the blackboard, and asked the pupils to each write a sentence containing the word. He was somewhat taken aback to find on one of the papers the following unique sentence, "I have learn my lesson."—Newburyport Herald.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brand of cigars, which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pay them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby.

Hamilton Happenings.

There is now being manufactured here an article for instantly removing pain of any acute external nature, and it is certainly the most perfect cure for Neuralgia, Headache, Toothache and the like that has ever been tried. It is called Fluid Lightning from the rapid manner in which it acts, and is manufactured by McGregor & Parke. Sold by J. McKee, druggist. w6-d33eod

A Sure Remedy for Neuralgia.

Neuralgia is one of the most painful and distressing complaints incidental to this climate. It is not confined to any particular season, for whilst most general in the winter seasons, yet many sufferers experience it in the heat of summer. In late years this form of disease has become more known, and consequently the means of relief have become greatly increased in numbers, as well as in efficacy. Among the most powerful and penetrating combinations, placed within the reach of the public for the relief of neuralgia, we can mention no remedy equal to or more certain than Polson's NERVILINE. Its power over pain is something wonderful, and we advise a trial for neuralgia, or any other painful complaints. Nerviline is sold by all druggists at 25 cents a bottle, also trial bottles at 10 cents.

Sunday's Sermons.

Anniversary Services in the George St. Methodist Church—Special Sermons delivered by Rev. F. H. Wallace, B.D., and Rev. I. Tovell.

Yesterday being observed as the anniversary of the George Street Methodist Church, special sermons were preached morning and evening. Rev. F. H. Wallace, conducted the services in the morning, delivering an able and impressive sermon, encouraging the congregation to continue in the warfare against sin and Satan. He took as the text for his sermon, the 4th verse of the 10th chapter of Paul's second Epistle to the Corinthians.

"For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds."

He said it was wonderful the fascination every mind had for warfare, overlooking the carnage and horrors, and only seeing the

POMP, GLORY AND TRIUMPH.

This was noticible in our own land when the militia were called out to defend our homes. Paul at the the time he had written the text was perhaps influenced by the wars which had been fought about that time, and compared the work of Christianity to a war. He admitted he was not much of a general in appearance or manner and impressed upon the people that the weapons to be used were not carnal, but spiritual, and by God's power were capable of pulling down all strongholds. The war had not ended with Paul. All Christians have their own part to play. The weapons are the same and the same promise of success is given. The speaker then described the enemies and strongholds which had to be pulled down. "Casting down imaginations and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ." He compared the evils that had to be overcome to the rocky strongholds of the Afghanistans in their mountain heights, against which the arm of God has to be led until all are pulled down and God reigns

AND CHRIST IS LORD INDEED.

He traced the upward march of the Christian warfare from its infancy to the present. Judaism and the heathenish mythological worship of the Romans and Greeks had passed away. The strongholds had not all been pulled down, and even as Christianity progresses, so do the many strongholds of evil increase and grow stronger. To say nothing of those who have honest doubts of Christ and Christianity, there were those who deny and even defy God, by bad acts, evils, vices, bad habits, intrigues and immorality. It became Christians not only to sing and be happy over the conversion of sinners but also as citizens to do all in their power for purity. They should say as Napoleon, "Conquest made me what I am, and conquest must maintain me." If they did not do this they would be sliding back. He trusted the members of the church would continue in their good works and grow stronger by the power of the Lord. Out of the 1,400 millions of persons in the world there were only 400 millions nominally Christians. There were the lately established religions of the south sea islanders and the old religions of the Chinese, Japanese and East Indians to overcome.

ANTI-CHRISTIAN LITERATURE

was being circulated amongst the people, and was even influencing them. Christians would have a hard fight, but with their spiritual weapons must conquer. In the Orient scepticism was rife. Ingersoll and Strouse are translated, and the infidels are fighting Christians with one of their own weapons, the printing press.

THE ABOMINABLE LIVES of the nominally Christian population in heathen lands set a bad example. The social status of England and America needed cleansing. The only hope was in personal purity and cleanliness. God says the battle is his, which is the Christians hope.

THE WEAPONS

are not carnal. Christianity is not like mohammedanism, with religion in one hand and the sword in other. The foulest plot on Christianity was the horrible inquisition and persecution which had been made in the name of Christ, and which affected Christianity to-day. It was this crime and blunder which caused the Catholics to persecute the Protestants and vice versa. "He who takes the sword dies with it." The weapons were divine thoughts, backed by God's spirit; the mediation of the Lord Jesus, who drew all men to him; the cross where Jesus bore mens sins and died for them; the immortality which Christ gives by faith—thanks to God who gives us the victory through Christ Jesus; mortality and love.

GOOD SINGING AND GOOD CHURCHES

were important, but they were not the weapons. The life of Jesus in Christians was necessary to win. The weapons of the Christian warfare had been proven by conversions of heathens, philosophers and sceptics of all kinds. It was encouraging to know that the world is for Christ and Christ for the world, and that the weapons for the work are adequate. The speaker in conclusion beseeched all to work for the Lord Jesus, knowing that the final triumph depends on all doing their duty. The Christians of to-day were living in a grand time, and he hoped and prayed God would help them to wield well the weapons he provided.

The Evening Service.

SYNOPSIS OF THE SERMON.

Rev. I. Tovell conducted the services in the evening, preaching an eloquent and appealing sermon from the 18th verse of the 1st chapter of Isaiah:

"Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red as crimson they shall be as wool."

He said he did not suppose there was anyone who would take objection to the scriptural statement that all have sinned. In the fall man was changed from the image of God, which he must regain before he had Divine favor. This applies to all, for "all have come short of the glory of God," and "like sheep, have gone astray." The only place of safety was at the mercy seat. It was the universal gate to the narrow way. If a man says he sins not he deceives himself, for he sins continually in thought and deed. God comes to him and says in the text.

"COME LET US REASON TOGETHER."

It is something to rejoice at when God speaks to a sinner in these terms, for He only have we sinned against. It would be well to remember how he spoke to Paul by the wayside, saying, "I am Jesus whom thou persecutest: it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks." He is speaking the same way to sinners now.

God besides speaking personally also speaks to great bodies, as he did to the children of Israel, whom he asked to return to him and he would forgive them freely. He also does so now at great religious gatherings. When he says, "come now" he addresses himself to the reason and senses of men. When God condescends to appeal to man's intelligence, man should look at it in a sensible way. It is man's place to accept and Gods to make him

AS WHITE AS SNOW OR WOOL.

Some persons look for some irresistible power to bring them to God. He does not do this but comes and speaks calmly, leaving men to weigh and consider their own interests, and if they found themselves wanting and come to Him for assistance, He will rectify the want. Many more waited for excitement waves to sweep over the land and are waiting yet. There were more converted camly and brought into the church than swept in by the winds and waves of excitement. He rejoiced to preach a gospel that appealed to the conscience and judgment. When God appeals to a man through his intelligence and judgment it is time for him to yield.

Some persons expected to be overwhelmed with repentance. If God invites never mind waiting until feeling repentant enough but accept. Repentance precedes faith, but there is no place in scripture saying in what degree. It is often deeper after conversion than before. When God speaks in his infinite tenderness and touches the heart in the slightest, then is the time to turn to him.

SINS WHICH ARE SCARLET.

Men who are not murderers, drunkards, blasphemers, bad sabbath-breakers, sceptics are often scarlet and crimson sinners, in the sight of God. Sins committed in the midst of light, by persons who attend church regularly are scarlet. Jesus said, "If I had not gone to you, you would not have had sin or known it." A murderer in a cannibal country could not be called as bad a sinner as a person who would commit murder in Peterborough. As Caperaium which was exalted to the heavens, was worse in God's sight than Sidon and Tyre and Sodom and Gomorrah. Sins committed by men who are specially privileged, moved by the spirit, with every good influence around them, are scarlet and crimson sins. As the sin which Absalom committed against his father David. God, did far more for us than David did for Absalom, giving his only son to die for us, and persons commit darker sins than Absalom by laughing at God's invitations, which sends a sword into His heart. Another common scarlet sin was breaking vows and covenants. Many solemn VOWS WERE MADE ONLY TO BE BROKEN.

God would surely hold men accountable for these if they did not accept his proposal. Every vow and covenant must be kept. Sin is like a fever that if not speedily overpowered will end in death. Sinful habits are apt to get such a grip that it is not easy to overcome them. In tolerating sinful habits persons only prepare a struggle for themselves. When sin has taken hold on man his only chance is to look to Jesus who only can deliver him. The speaker in concluding said he hoped many who had not given themselves to God would accept his invitation and be blessed thereby.

Otonabee Council.

Council met pursuant to adjournment on Monday 15th February. All the members present. Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. A number of the ratepayers from school section No 12, were heard respecting the division of said section. The Council decided to divide said section so as to form a new section with the same limits as old school section No. 17, and that a By-law be prepared and passed for that purpose. The Reeve was authorized to confer with Messrs. Girvens and Knox as to purchase of right of way for a new road to be established across the west half of the 8th and the east half of the 9th concession on lot No. 27, and report to next Council. Also with Messrs. Armstrong and Short for right of way for a new road between lots No. 22 and 23 in the 5th concession. Thomas Shearer was allowed four days statute labor for a drain constructed across the road opposite his place. The Treasurer was directed to pay the following sums, viz:

To N. T Laplante for school house tax remitted	$ 5 44
" John Shaughnessy for school house tax remitted	7 60
" Patrick Shaughnessy for school house tax remitted	6 84
" Thomas Shearer for cedars	5 22
" George Read for cedars	1 71
" John Fife for cedars	1 00
" George Schneider for gravel	6 10
" Toronto General Hospital for keep of Soucis	14 40
" Review Printing Co. for printing	1 65
" James Trotter for relief	5 00

The Clerk was directed to notify the Grand Junction Railway Co. to move their fence off the allowance for road between the 8th and 9th concessions, opposite lot No. 17. James Armstrong and R. McMullen were allowed $1 per week from the 1st of January last for relief.

Mr. Wood was authorized to sell any wood on the road allowances in his ward that he may think desirable.

The wives of the Whig peers who disapprove of Mr. Gladstone's Irish policy decline to hold positions as ladies of the Bed Chamber in the Queen's household.

A Questionable Penance.

A new theological question has arisen. Shall the Episcopalian clergyman, when he goes to the opera, wear the single-breasted frock coat of clerical cut, or put on the secularly fashionable evening costume? Opera has religious countenance in this city nowadays, despite its wicked stories, ballets, characterizations. Rectors have refrained from witnessing dramatic performances, except on rare occasions; but they may in propriety, so the new usage says, go to the Metropolitan Opera-House or the Academy of Music as often as they please. Thus the problem of proper dress is unsolved, and no official ruling has been made. The mind of a young minister was diverted from his professional coat the other night at the Metropolitan by the more charmingly clothed belle with whom he conversed between acts.

"Do you believe in doing penance?" she asked.

"Under some circumstances it is a beneficial discipline," he answered, re-assuming a pastoral gravity that had become somewhat relaxed.

"Pray excuse me for turning this box into a sort of confessional," she murmured, "but the matter weighs on my conscience a little, and I do so want your advice. It rained yesterday, and I didn't attend the Sunday morning service."

"I missed you from your pew," and he let a tone of sentiment get into his voice.

"And here I am at the opera, the very next night, though it is raining much harder."

"That is palpable," and then he had to turn his eyes away from the fair vision in order to become the grave, soul-solicitous pastor.

"Now, regarding you in your professional capacity," and she gazed up ravishingly into his face. "I think it right to tell you that I am doing penance for my fault. The gown I have on has been worn by me already at two balls and a formal dinner. Everybody in society knows it on sight. At home lies a brand-new and awfully beautiful dress, finished expressly for this occasion. Besides this mental infliction, I have caused bodily torture by drawing my stays an inch tighter than usual over a strip of raspingly coarse flannel. You comprehend the severity of my self-punishment. What do you think of it?"

The young man expressed his views so incoherently that it would be useless to quote his language.—Cor. Chicago Tribune.

Bogus wild turkeys have been detected in the New York market. There are people who, for capricious reasons, prefer wild to tame turkeys for the table. It is this class that is being imposed upon, it having been demonstrated that they don't know the difference between a barn-yard gobbler and a feathered monarch of a wild-wood flock, if only they can find a bullet-hole in the bird. An expert distinguishes wild from tame fowl, not by the bullet-hole, but by the shape of the head and bill and the color of the meat.

"Well, we are penniless, or mighty near it," he said, as he reached home and threw the evening paper to his wife. "Wh—what is it?" "The Mechanics' Bank has busted, and we had $4,000 on deposit there." "But, Richard," she said, after glancing at the article, "the President says he hopes to pay all depositors in full." "And didn't I say the same thing to my creditors when I failed in the grocery business, and did a single one of them receive five cents on the dollar?" he howled.—Wall Street News.

One of the boarders in a private boarding-house in this city, not over prompt in paying board bills, grumblingly observed, a morning or two ago, in the hearing of the "boarding missus," "This coffee isn't settled." "I guess it will be settled before your board bill is settled," she quickly retorted. This was a settler he little expected. It set a little ripple of laughter in motion round the table, and, when it settled, the peace-maker of the house observed that there were probably grounds for complaint on both sides, which settled the matter, and harmony resumed her reign.—Boston Courier.

Smith—"I never was more surprised in my life than I was last night." Jones—"Indeed! What was the cause?" S.—"As I was passing along the street two ladies came to the door of a house—one evidently the hostess, as she had only a shawl wrapped around her head—the other a visitor. As they reached the bottom of the steps the visitor said: 'Well, I've had a very pleasant time. Good-night, Mary,' and the other said, 'Good-night, Mehitable,' and they parted." J.—"What, without another word?" S.—"Without another word." J.—"H'm! I guess they were men in women's clothes."—Boston Courier.

Let no man hereafter accuse the English people of being a whit inferior in politeness to the French or any other nation. A murderer was hanged in Liverpool a fortnight ago, and the matter-of-fact statement is made by the reporter that "the weather being bitterly cold, Thomas was hanged in his overcoat." He was only a poor colored sailor, too. Surely, consideration for the feelings of others could go no further. By the way, the people who think it is "English" to say "topcoat" will notice that the London Standard, from which the above quotation is made, says "overcoat."—Boston Herald.

"Say, fellers!" said an Elizabeth-street urchin to his playmates, "I'm goin' to have a birthday party the last of Jan'ary or the 1st of Febooary, I dunno which, an' I wants you all to come. Will yer?" Chorus—"You bet." Two days later—"The party's goin' to be afternoon, fellers. Come 'round 'bout 4 o'clock." "Why?" in surprise. "'Cause ma had company yesterday—some fokes to dinner—an' she sed she had a lot o' truck left over, and I needn't wait for my birthday, but cud have the party afternoon. Come over'n we'll make them wittles look sick. It'll be just as good as a birthday, anyhow."—Detroit Post.

THE TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

There can be no doubt that the Trent Valley Canal project will receive opposition, but the fact that that opposition is founded principally on the grounds that its construction will be prejudicial to the interests of less excellent routes to the Atlantic ocean, is a great deal in its favor. The Monetary Times takes the following view of the matter:—

"A meeting of enthusiastic delegates representing the local interests of the Trent Valley Canal recently enlivened the town of Peterborough. It is the easiest thing in the world to get a number of people interested in a public work to call upon the government to expend money upon it; but if they were asked to back their sturdy faith in a doubtful enterprise, by putting their hands into their own pockets, they would generally be found to draw the line there. The orators dwell on the value of this canal, as a means of taking the produce of the great North-west to market. It is reasonable to ask them to wait till the practicability of the Hudson Bay route is ascertained. Should that route prove to be what its advocates claim for it, the produce of the valley of the Saskatchewan will never pass over the height of land north of Lakes Superior and Huron. As we have urged the necessary delay in the case of the Hudson Bay route, till the vital facts can be established, the more reason is there for urging delay on the advocates of the Trent Valley canal; for should the Hudson Bay route prove feasible, this canal will not require to carry the produce of the West. And then we must not forget that the pecuniary resources of the country on which the canal advocates are anxious to draw are not unlimited."

The request that we should wait till the Hudson Bay route is shown to be practicable is decidedly modest and reasonable. We have waited a long time, and if the construction of the canal is postponed till every cock and bull rival enterprise is tested, the canal will never be built. This district and the country require that the canal construction be at once pushed on. We can't afford to wait till the question of transportation of grain by ice boats is settled.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Nova Scotia, whose coal mining industry was to be benefitted by the N. P., sold 7,000 tons less in 1885 than in 1884.

Sir John Macdonald will meet Parliament next Thursday with a deficit of FIVE MILLIONS. How about deficits now?

Our Sir John must have been giving Lord Salisbury lessons during his recent visit to England Previous to the retirement of the latter he appointed a number of political friends to office, just as Sir John did in 1873.

The London Free Press having accused the assessors of manipulating the rolls so as to affect the voters' lists improperly, the Advertiser effectively replies by showing that every assessor in that city for the past twenty-five years was a Tory. Really the Free Press gives away its own political friends very badly.

If the Franchise Act is, as its authors claim, a measure intended to do justice to all parties, irrespective of politics, why have they issued a manual on the act with the following on the title page: "Issued by the Liberal Conservative Union of Ontario, for private and confidential circulation.

These hints are prepared solely for the use of officers of Conservative Associations of Ontario. The greatest care should be exercised in preventing them from falling into the hands of our opponents.

Those to whom they are entrusted should never allow them to pass out of their hands."

A straight-forward, honest act does not require to be dealt with in such a manner.

The Irish Canadian thus remarks: "The Toronto Mail has been guilty more than once of wanton attack on Irish Catholics; but its reference to that class in one of its issues of last week caps all that it had previously said prejudical to our countrymen and co-religionists. In effect the Mail says that the Irish Catholic is not up to the standard in the matter of education and ability; and that he is for ever whining and cringing, and urging his religion as a bar to his advancement. We are astonished to hear a journal owned and edited by Irishmen, speak in this slanderous manner of a people who have shown, wherever they have located, high capacity—who have held their own conspicuously with the ablest of other creeds and races, whether in the learned professions, in parliament, as merchants, or in the humbler walks of life."

CORRESPONDENCE.

[The publisher of THE EXAMINER does not hold himself responsible for the facts asserted nor the opinions expressed by correspondents.]

The Licensing Manic.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—I hope you will not consider it a license, if I take the liberty of addressing the public kindly through your columns on the license question. Our "city" fathers have made a "vigorous" attempt to make up the $5,000 deficit in the town's revenue, though the coming in force of the Scott Act next May. They propose to license the proprietors of eating houses at five dollars each. Now I don't see why, they should be asked to make up the deficit any more than those who supply the said licensees with goods—that is, the grocers. I would suggest in bona fide, being willing to submit with others of my class to a license, that the town council impose a tax of $100 on each grocery. There is just as much justice in taxing this business as that of eating houses, and I, for one, am willing to pay such a tax if it is made general, and so long as it is provided that every such licensed grocery shall be subject to the visits of the local inspector of licenses. This, with a pretty liberal distribution of taxes upon everything else taxable, would go a long way towards making up the deficit.

I hope the town fathers will take up this matter at their next meeting.

Yours, etc.,
GROCER.

Peterborough, Feb. 20th, 1886.

On a Sanitary Subject.

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—Everybody in this town is complaining that the taxes are far too high, and if they go on increasing as they have done of late years, it will soon be found impossible for the poorer classes to live in Peterborough. We all know it is in the power of the Council to lighten this oppressive taxation. They can do this by avoiding all unnecessary expenditure. And here we would respectfully suggest that there is no need of a medical health officer in this town. It is well known that in every town and city there are hangers-on, who want to make an easy living at the expense of the ratepayers, and unfortunately, in every Council there is to be found some one who is willing to aid and abet the corporation fungus. Last year in the city of London, Ont., some wire-puller introduced a motion in the Council for the appointment of a medical health officer, but that Council very wisely refused to make such appointment, and we have never heard that the city suffered on that account. Now let us see how things were managed in Peterborough last year. Well, just previous to the appointment of a medical health officer, there was a hue and cry raised that the cholera was approaching our shores with the most deadly precision. So great was the excitement that one could almost hear the horrid rattle of the dead cart, giving the citizens their last drive. But, very strange to say, that just as soon as the Medical Health officer was appointed, the cholera scare died out, its usefulness was at an end, and we heard no more of it. But in the fall of the year something had to be done, and this time a hue and cry was raised that a baby on George street had the small pox!! The citizens grew pale with fear. A red placard was nailed up on the house and the family was barricaded. Men were set to work on Sunday in desperate haste, to sink a well and to erect a Hospital. The family was removed to the hospital and a homeopathic doctor was employed at five dollars a day to attend the baby and to grow fat on town luxuries, and all this nonsense was carried on at the expense of the poor tax payers. And now it turns out that there was not a case of small pox in Peterborough during the whole of last year. It was all a costly and unmitigated hoax. The baby had only a harmless case of chicken pox. The parents I am sure, will kindly give the Council permission to examine the child for themselves, and they will then be convinced beyond a doubt, that there was no smallpox, and that the town was swindled out of nearly a thousand dollars through the unaccountable ignorance or carelessness of some body. In the face of all these facts we must say that the "Board of Health" appears in rather a ridiculous light, in passing votes of thanks to each other for stamping out the smallpox, when it is now well known that there was no such thing in this town. Then again, the medical health officer gravely informed the "Board" that he had "telegraphed" to certain parties in Montreal not to mail anything more to Peterborough; just as if anybody in this town could control the postoffice business of the Montreal people! The childish farce and school-boy silliness of the medical health officer and the "Board" in this affair can never be surpassed. I would respectfully ask the Council to read the following article taken from the Peterborough Times of the 2nd of December last. It was written by a medical man and goes to show that the case which cost the town so much was not smallpox at all, and the arguments of the writer of that article appear to be unanswerable:

"SIR,—I am one of those who believe that the supposed visitation of smallpox was not smallpox at all. I base my reasons on the following facts. The child had been ill for a period of 10 day before the disease was pronounced smallpox by the doctor in charge, and during all that time the infant was sleeping with another unvaccinated child, as well as with its parents, who also had not been vaccinated. Then again I am credibly informed the child was only slightly ill, even at its worst.

When we remember that the child had not been vaccinated, it looks as though the doctors were mistaken in the disease. Besides, how was it that none of the rest of the family took the disease, considering that for ten days they were nursing and sleeping with the infant?

Of course, while I concede that as long as there was any reasonable grounds for believing the disease to be smallpox, the most rigid care should be taken to prevent its spread; but at the same time I do not think the medical men acted with judgment in putting Mr. Martin to so great a loss, and the town to so much expense on the evidence they had before them.

Remember, I do not wish to find fault, only I think in future the medical officers should not act too hastily in such matters.

MEDICO.

Peterborough, Nov. 20, 1885.

Now, in the face of all these facts, we hope the Council will just try how the town can get along for one year without being inflicted with the senseless and unnecessary expense of a medical health officer.

Yours truly,
RATEPAYER.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $300 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

CHAPTER V.

When the young man has gone, Ronnie turns to her sister, and placing her arms round her, gives her a good hug.

"I couldn't half do it while he was looking," she says, "though I think him very nice, nevertheless."

"He was very kind, at all events," says Cissy, gratefully. "Wasn't it a wonderful adventure?"

"It might have been a terrible one," replies her mother, with a shudder.

"Oh, mamma, and who do you think was there besides me?"

"Who?"

"Major Jervis!"

"Major Jervis! And he saw you!" asks Mrs. Rivers, in a horror-stricken tone.

"Yes—but-- And yet he didn't see me!" continues Cecil. And then she gives them the entire history of her escape from the Major and her terror on the occasion.

When she has finished her recital, her mother draws a breath of deep relief.

"You are sure Mr. Craven won't betray you?" she asks, still a little nervously.

"Quite sure! Mamma, how could you think him a traitor?"

"I didn't, my dear. I was merely anxious," answers Mrs. Rivers, hastily. Then she rises and quits the room for some domestic purpose.

"What nice eyes he has!" says Ronnie when the girls are alone again. "And how he uses them—though only on one object, I grant! I firmly believe, though he has been here to-day for nearly two hours, he would not, if put on his oath, know me from mamma, or mamma from me."

"I don't think he is such a stupid young man as you seem to think," returns Cissy, mildly. "And it is folly what you say, dearest; any one can see that mamma is at all events a year or two older than you."

"I am not accusing him of stupidity. I have no doubt he is a second Socrates," rejoins Ronnie, meekly. "I merely meant to say he never took his eyes off you from the time he came till he went away. I was but as dross in his sight. Well, never mind! I wonder, by the bye, when we shall see him again?"

"Some time next year, perhaps." It is now close on Christmas.

"Some time to-morrow, I should say."

"Ronnie, how can you be so absurd? What could bring him here again so soon?" says Cecil; but she blushes vividly as she puts the question.

"Well, you, I suppose," rejoins Ronnie, unabashed. "Little hypocrite that you are, why don't you confess what you know in your secret heart? What do you think he meant by asking mamma if she wanted some books to read? Simply an excuse to put in an appearance here early in the morning. Now, mark my words, it will be early. And I shouldn't at all be surprised if he ordered up the whole library, book-shelves and all, for your delectation. My own opinion is," adds Miss Rivers, laughing, "that this poor young man is head-over-ears in love with you."

Cecil leans back in her chair and laughs also.

"And what do you think his name is?" she asks, still laughing. "It is Duke!"

"Then you are bound to marry him," says Ronnie, merrily. "You always declared you would marry a Duke if you ever met one. You certainly can't go back from it now."

"I have another idea, too," remarks Cecil. "I think—indeed I feel sure—he is Maria's young man!"

"No!" cries Ronnie. "But yes, of course. He is un bon parti, and just all we ever heard of the happy man who has been laid aside for her. Poor Maria! I am afraid it was a luckless day for her when you lost your way in the snow."

"Well, it is all mere supposition about Maria," says Cecil. "Of course, Mr. Craven may not be the man assigned for her by the Major."

"Of course not. But I prefer thinking he is the man. It makes it all so comfortable. You said you would like to cut out Maria, if only for vengeance sake; now you can do it. You said you would marry a Duke; now, too, you can do it. It is all like the fulfillment of a pretty dream."

"But what about you, dearest?" asks Cecil, softly. "Have you heard from him?"

"I had one letter from Sir Sydney," answers Ronnie, slowly.

"One? Well, of course, you could hardly have had more. To me it seems a long time since we came here. I feel much as if I had been away from you and mother for a twelvemonth— But now, Ronnie, tell me about your letter."

"It was short, and not particularly sweet. It began 'My dear Miss Rivers,' and it ended 'Always yours most sincerely.' It was filled with London gossip, and that is all I can tell you of it until we go upstairs, then you can see the original of what I have been telling you, if you will."

"I think 'Always yours most sincerely' was very nice indeed," says Cissy. "'Yours sincerely,' would be commonplace, and quite nothing; but the 'always' and the 'most' make such a difference."

"I am so glad to have you back!" returns Ronnie, gratefully, throwing her arms round her sister. "Do you know, Cissy, what is your principal charm? You always know just what is the right thing to say."

Ronnie's surmises prove true. The very next morning brings Mr. Craven again to Branksmere; and for the matter of that every other morning sees him there too—until a week has passed over their heads.

The day is lovely—clear and bright, and full of sunshine. All sign of snow is gone from the ground; only a thin sparkling frost, that sits lightly on tree and shrub, makes one certain it is winter still, and not early spring. From the sea comes "up a moaning"—cold, but sweet. A few birds, taking courage from the calmness of the day and the warmth of the welcome god of light, who, up above in the blue heavens, sits enthroned, "diffusing radiant bliss around," hop from bough to bough on the bare trees, and twitter meek little songs, as though half afraid of their own temerity.

Indoors the fires are burning brightly. The logs are crackling on the top of coals; the great white Persian cat is blinking lazily on the hearth-rug, and pretty Cecil, with a huge black fan in her hand, is sitting on the rug too, her head resting against her mother's knee.

It is now the seventh day since her return home, and they are all sitting in the small morning-room—the room in the house they most affect, it is so snug and cosy,—with Duke Craven in their midst, but as near to Cecil as circumstances will permit.

"By the bye," says Craven, suddenly, a propos of something just said by Ronnie, "the Major is with me again, in spite of his dread of that awful ghost he encountered some days ago. He has heard of your having taken up your residence here, Mrs. Rivers, and declared his intention, this morning at breakfast, of calling upon you without loss of time. Shouldn't wonder if he came to-day."

"Old Horror," says Ronnie, irreverently.

"If he knew he was going to encounter his ghost face to face, I don't believe he would be in such a hurry to call," continues Mr. Craven, smiling at Cissy, who smiles back at him, and says, with affected fear—

"Ah, if he had found me substantial flesh and blood that night instead of barren bones, what should I have done?"

"I know what I should have done," says Ronnie, viciously. "If he had caught me on that occasion, I should have beaten him black and blue. Death would have been his portion that night. He should never, with my consent, have lived to tell the tale."

She looks such a ridiculously fragile creature to be the author of this awful speech that everyone laughs.

"I don't think even the Major would be afraid of you," remarks Craven. "Do you know, I'm not sure why I think it, but it seems to me that Jarvis is rather put out at your settling down here"—he is speaking now in a low confidential tone to the girls alone, Mrs. Rivers having gone into the next room to write a letter. "He appeared disconcerted when he spoke of your being here, though why I can't imagine."

At this both girls exchange glances: the glances mean: "Ah! Didn't I tell you so? He is Maria's young man!"

"However, he is such a grumpy old chap always, I dare say it was imagination on my part thinking so," Craven goes on, carelessly. "Miss Cecil, did you really mean it, the other day, when you said you adored honey? Because Mrs. Richards—I can't fancy how she knew of your love for it—desired me to tell you this afternoon she has more than she knows what to do with, and wants to know if she may send you some."

"Did she really say that?" asks Cecil eagerly. "Now isn't she an old dear? Give her my love, please, Mr. Craven, and say she may send me some honey as soon as ever she likes, and tell her, too, I shall give her a kiss for it the very next moment we meet."

"Happy Richards!" says Mr. Craven, in a low tone, with an indescribable glance that is half amused, and half earnest, and wholly loving.

Ronnie laughs; and then, Mrs. Rivers returning to the room, Craven rises and takes his departure. He has not been gone half an hour when the servant announces—"Major Jervis."

Mrs. Rivers, rising, receives him very courteously, and the girls give him their hands with a passably good grace.

"Had no idea until the day before yesterday that you and the young ladies had come to reside down here," begins the Major, when he has ensconced himself in the most comfortable chair in the room and drawn himself close up to the fire. He always calls the girls the "young ladies," to Ronnie's intense disgust.

"We rather tired of town life," says Mrs. Rivers, finding she must say something.

"Ah, yes! It is disappointing at times," replies the Major, with a meaning glance at Ronnie, who takes no notice of it or him. "By the bye, I saw our common friend, Sir Sydney Walcott, in Piccadilly last week, looking uncommonly well and happy. You will all be glad to hear good accounts of him; he was such an intimate friend of yours."

"Very intimate. I know few people I like so well as Sir Sydney," says Mrs. Rivers, calmly, but she colors as she says it.

"You have made the acquaintance of Mr. Craven, I hear," remarks the Major, presently. "I am staying with him, you know."

"Yes. He himself told us so just now."

"Ah! been here already? Sharp work!" says the Major; and Cecil, who is earnestly regarding him, sees that he starts a little, and that a slight frown contracts his forehead. "Early visiting; wasn't it—eh?"

"Is it early?" asks Mrs. Rivers, languidly. "We hardly thought of that. You see, we know so few people down here as yet that we make more than usually welcome any one who is kind enough to break in upon our monotony."

"And he is just the sort of person to make 'more than usually welcome,'" returns the Major, with an unpleasant smile. "He is about the best catch down here, or anywhere else that I know of; but yet not to be caught, I think—not to be caught. Ha, ha!"

"I have heard he is very well off," says Mrs. Rivers, coldly.

"Heard it before you came down, I dare say"—chuckling.

This is almost too much. Cecil grows as red as a rose and bites her lip. Ronnie turns as if bent on annihilating their enemy then and there; but Mrs. Rivers checks her by saying blandly—

"You know all about him, of course, Major Jervis. His father was a great friend of yours, I believe."

"Ye-es," says the Major, so doubtfully, that Ronnie and Cecil both decide that the late Mr. Craven suffered him more than he regarded him.

"Have any of you seen his place yet?" asks the Major, turning as if instinctively to Cecil. She colors hotly.

"We have been hardly anywhere yet; the weather has been so terrible," replies her mother, coming quickly to the rescue.

Count von Moltke has recovered from the effects of his recent illness.

My Letter.

I read it, my letter, my letter, as I sate in my rocky nest.
The waves at my feet were screaming, and the wind blew soft from the west;
The sunshine on the tangle-beds was blazing fiercely down,
And as they wavered to and fro they glowed to golden brown.
I heard the cry of the curlews blend with the boatsmen's roar.
I took from my breast my letter, and read it yet once more.

I read it, my letter, my letter, as I loitered by the sea,
And, as I read, my fancy was flying fast and free,
Away from the sunny seaboard, away from the purple down;
I saw the smoky, sullen streets, I saw the busy town,
I saw the desk with its dusty load, I saw the dreary room,
And I saw the dark-blue eyes I knew, outshining in the gloom.

I read it, my letter, my letter, and I saw illumine it
The graceful phrase, the graphic touch, the flash of ready wit,
The tender lingering o'er the words, that even as he wrote
Seemed as love hovered them, their truth and depth to note;
The sweet old words whose utterance, to those that yearn to hear,
But deepens ever down and down, and deepening grows more dear.

I read it, my letter, my letter; then softly in fragments small
I tore the precious pages, and stooped to kiss them all;
They were safe and sure, the golden words, pourtrizes in my heart;
It were surely best, in a world of change, with their earthly shrine to part.
So I tore it, my letter, my letter, with a smile, and with a sigh,
And tossed them to the sunny sea, beneath the sunny sky.

To what I have loved so long and well, the flashing, dancing wave,
To the mighty arms of the great North sea, the thing I prized I gave;
It should die, my letter, my letter, no common mortal death,
It should be rocked upon the ocean's breast, lulled by the ocean's breath.
Has a monarch kinglier requiem, a chief a nobler shrine,
Than that I gave my letter, from that rocky nest of mine?

EGAN'S IMPERIAL TRUSS.

Read the following extract from a letter of a well-known citizen of St. Catharines,—hundreds like it:

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 30th, 1885.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, I looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two springless trusses made in York State, costing me $40. Nothing would retain my Hernea. I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down. It holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. B. KING.

This new Spirial Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child sure; and 98 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. When writing please mention this paper. Address,

EGAN'S IMPERIAL TRUSS CO., 23 Adelaide St. East, Toronto, Ont.

To Be Continued.

Both Methodist churches have decided to continue for another week the special services which have been held for the past two weeks.

Pugilistically Inclined.

A disturbance occurred at the Salvation Army last night, which resulted in an obnoxious individual being ejected from the barracks. The party in question had been spitting on the floor and when told by an officer of the Army to stop or leave, he pitched into the soldier with his fists, and was only pacified when helped out to the cool air of the street.

Special Services.

The special services which have been held in the Charlotte Street Church school room have been well attended, even crowded, and much good has been the result. About twenty have been converted. A great deal of interest is evinced in the meetings, and with the results the management feel encouraged and have decided to continue them this week also. After the usual services yesterday evening almost all the congregation remained to the prayer meeting, which was one of the most pleasant and impressive yet held.

Sad and Fatal Accident.

Mrs. Christopher Severs, who with her husband for the past three years kept lunch rooms on Water streets, opposite Mr. A. P. Peasgett's law office, met with a very severe accident on Saturday night, by falling down the stairs adjoining the shop, which rendered her unconscious at the time and resulted in death this morning. About seven o'clock Mrs. Severs went up stairs to visit Mrs. Gemmel, a neighbor, who resides over the shop. She only remained a few minutes, and when going down the stairs it is supposed she fell when about halfway down, striking her head against the door at the bottom. Mrs. Gemmel hearing a noise returned to the stairs but not seeing Mrs. Severs took no more notice. She was found a few minutes after by a neighbor, lying at the bottom of the steps with her head against the door, in insensible and bleeding from a large wound behind her left ear. She was immediately removed to her bed and Drs. Holliday and King were called in. It was found that the base of her skull had been fractured. She was subject to chronic weakness of the knees, which is supposed to have caused her fall. She received every medical attention without avail and remained unconscious until the time of her death, which occurred about ten o'clock this morning. The deceased was a kind hearted woman and was much thought of by all her acquaintances. The funeral takes place Wednesday at 2 o'clock.

T. V. C. Executive Committee Meet.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Peterborough Trent Valley Canal promoters was held in Mayor Stevenson's office on Saturday evening. It was decided to issue circulars to the wardens of counties, mayors of towns, and reeves of villages and townships along the route, notifying them to meet at Ottawa on Thursday, 11th of March, to meet the members of the Government and present their case.

Joint Evangelistic Meetings to be Held.

A ministerial meeting was held this morning, attended by Rev. Messrs. Wallace, Tovell, Torrance, Bell and Munro, at which it was decided to enter into arrangements to secure the services of Mr. Shiveres, an eminent Brooklyn evangelist, to hold evangelistic services in Peterborough. They will in all probability commence about March 9th. Mr. Shiveres has been holding meetings in Toronto for some time past with great success.

On the Qui Vive.

On Saturday evening the inspector of the license inspectors was in town and he did'nt have his slippers on before the fire either. Instead, he had on his war paint and was on the trail, incog., of course, looking after things himself. He saw several suspicious circumstances in regard to the seven o'clock closing law and in one place he came plump upon two bon vivants leisurely enjoying their beer. But the inspector was soon spotted, and, of course, after that, his game was up. It would seem that the Government is in earnest in its declaration of intention of rigidly enforcing the Crook's Act.

Revised Council Rules.

The committee appointed to revise the rules of order and debate of the Town Council has completed its work, and the report they will present to the council at the next meeting will recommend several important changes. Among them are the following:

The mayor shall preserve order, and shall not take part in any discussion while he is in the chair.

Members may vote on all questions, except on any motion in which they are concerned directly or indirectly, or any motion to appoint themselves to any position in the gift of the council.

No member of the council shall be allowed to speak more than ten minutes without special permission.

While the council is in Committee of the Whole members shall not speak more than once, until all the members, who wish to speak, have spoken.

The proceedings of every council meeting shall close not later than eleven o'clock.

These rules seem to be framed in the public interest and will tend to promote the transaction of business instead of encouraging the talking of buncombe. If any member of the council can't dam back the torrent of his eloquence till his turn comes, according to the rule, he should not be in the position he occupies. There have been meetings of the Town Council at which members would talk and talk and talk and do nothing else, till eleven or twelve o'clock and then adjourn to another night to do the business that was before them. Now the motto of the Council, according to the new rules, must be, business first; talk afterwards, or not at all.

Sudden Death of Mr. Isaac Robinson.

His Sudden Call from the Church Militant to the Church Triumphant.

On Sunday evening, St. John's church was the scene of a sadly sudden death, that of Mr. Isaac Robinson, one of Peterborough's oldest and most respected citizens. The people were assembling for the evening service. Mr. Robinson entered and knelt in his pew, and said his anti-service prayer. He had just risen and resumed his seat, when he gave a gasp or two and fell to the floor. Mr. D. H. Burritt, who sat immediately behind Mr. Robinson, at once sprang to his relief, and raised him in his arms where he expired. He and Mr. Budden carried the unfortunate man to the vestry, but when they arrived there, though two medical gentlemen made every possible exertion, there efforts to recall the vital spark were futile. Mr. Robinson had last fall an attack of illness from the effects of which he has never fully recovered. The cause of death was an apoplectic seizure. This sad event was so great a shock to the Rector that he felt unequal to the task of conducting the services, and after a few appropriate remarks, he dismissed the congregation.

The deceased gentlemen, who was a native of England, was the oldest merchant on George street. From 1849 to 1865 he conducted a dry goods store in a wooden building that stood on the site of the building now occupied by Mercer & Co., and previously by the late Sheriff Hall. He has been in his present stand on George street about twenty years, and there is no merchant in town better known throughout the county and district, and more highly respected than the late Isaac Robinson.

He was a Liberal in politics and in religion a devoted member of the Church of England, and to him, if to any man, can be applied, not in mere courtesy, but in real earnest, the remark that he was a pillar of the church at which he worshipped—St. John's. For many terms he held the position of Rector's Church Warden, and for nearly twenty years he has been actively associated with Sunday School work, in which he took deep interest, both in the capacity of superintendent and teacher. He was most regular and devout in the discharge of his religious duties, and in his daily life consistently adorned the doctrine of Christ by a godly walk and conversation. Though the circumstances of his death are surrounded with peculiar sadness, Mr. Robinson, if he might have chosen, could not have selected a more fitting moment and circumstance than those under which he passed to his reward on Sunday night.

The funeral will take place from the late residence of Mr. Robinson, on Tuesday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock.

Grahm Grand Lodge.

Messrs. Jas. Evans, Grand Lecturer, Port Hope; T. B. Collins, Millbrook, District Grand Master Ontario, East; J. B. Dr. Smithett, Omemee, Grand Chaplain, Ontario East; J. Adams, County Master, Victoria; and R. Holland, District Master, Port Hope, left to-day on the C.P.R. 12.20 train to attend the session of Grand Lodge, at Pembroke.

Another Deputation.

A deputation from Victoria County, composed of Messrs. Nelson Heaslip, Warden of the county; Chas. Fairbairn, Reeve of Verulam, and T. H. McQuade, Reeve of Emily, are registered at the Grand Central. They will meet a deputation from Peterborough County, composed of the Warden and two Councillors, to discuss Pigeon Creek floating bridge, with a view of coming to some agreement with regard to its maintenance.

Personal.

Mr. Geo. Walker, manager of the gents' clothing department of Hall, Innes & Co., has returned from New York where he has been engaged for the past two week's in picking up the latest styles of cutting fashionable garments. He attended the meetings of the Cutting Club, where the members discuss the easiest and best methods of cutting the in and out turn and curves, etc., where he picked up many valuable ideas.

A Dramatic Pedigree Wanted.

To the Editor of THE DAILY EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—Live and learn. I have occasionally glanced at Shakspere, but I must now confess my ignorance of the works of the great dramatist, and I would like to have the judges at the recent carnival inform me in what drama, tragedy or comedy the character of Charles I. appears. It strikes me rather forcibly, though it may be a delusion of childhood, that Shakspere went out of the play-writing industry a few years before Charles I. took up royalty as a business, and that Henry VIII is the Bard of Avon's latest historical play. The character of Charles I. must occur in some of his posthumous plays not yet published.

Yours distractedly,
DOGBERRY.

[Our dramatic critic suggests that the award must have been made inadvertently. If a great monarch like Charles I. lost his head, he argues that the judges were too good courtiers not to follow his example and lose their heads too—for a moment.—Ed. EXAMINER.

An Ugly Ceiling.

Who has not sometimes lived in a house in which some common room had a very ugly ceiling? Perhaps some of us may be in just such a place now. The plaster was rough in the first place, or has been badly cracked, or the water has come through a bad roof and soaked it off in patches which refuse to be mended in a creditable manner. Altogether it is an uncompromising eyesore. What shall we do with it that it may not be so out of keeping with the room which we are trying to make warm and cozy for winter? It cannot be made presentable by paint or calcimining; what next?

Cover it up. Let it serve merely as a foundation for something pretty. A new suggestion from people who are supposed to be artistic, is to lay off such a ceiling into suitable panels, and cover these panels with plain basket-checked burlap, tacked on very smooth, and painted some light tint, like pale-blue, pink, green, olive, brown, or cream. The lines where the pieces join are then to be covered with inexpensive narrow moldings, which must be neatly fitted at the corners. They may be gilded, if desired. A cheaper method is to tack on small rope for this purpose, with smooth, slender brads, and then gild it carefully; but in the hands of any but professional decorators we fear it could not be neatly done at the corners and places where the pieces of rope would join.

There is no reason why the burlap could not be applied to the walls also in similar panels and painted a darker shade. Flat walnut moldings would be suitable for walls. Painted walls are among the best for living rooms. Dull-red, olive, and light chocolate are very pretty and suitable with either painted or paper borders.

It is not Disputed

That Nerviline, the new pain remedy, is a good article. Some indeed claim that the old fashioned preparations are just as good, but any sufferer can satisfy himself by expending ten cents on a sample bottle of Polson's Nerviline, that nothing sold can equal it for internal, local or external pains. Always speedy in effect, prompt and certain in every cure. H. S. Webber, Orangeville, writes: "My customers speak very highly of Nerviline as a remedy for toothache and neuralgia." All druggists and country dealers sel Nerviline. Try it to-day. d44-6t-w6-16

A mixture of zinc white with zinc chloride is found to furnish a paint of great value both for wood and metals.

William A. Shannon, now private secretary of the mayor of Newark, N. J., was at one time the private secretary of James Buchanan while he was president of the United States. He recollected Mr. Buchanan as a martinet, although withal a very pleasant gentleman, who used to review his corps of assistants with one eye closed in a manner that was very severe.

In a paper on the size of the brain in extinct animals, Professor Marsh, of Yale College, has brought forward the remarkable fact that in the race for life during past ages the survival of any particular group of animals depended on the size of their brain as compared with that of their contemporaries of the same class. Brains won then, as now, and the brain of animals crushed out of existence was always found to be relatively smaller than that of those outliving them.

Mrs. A. T. Stewart is troubled with a chronic and distressing swelling in the neck. Worth, who sends her new costumes as he sees fit, knows better than to attempt the deadlist. On the contrary, he carries the neck arrangement close up under the lobes of the ear. A great part of her home amusement is derived from the witticisms and sallies of three young Irish maids, who are not raised above the place of servants, but are allowed to listen to and criticise the conversation and letters of the many important social devotees who cultivate the hostess of the marble palace.

Doctors do not appear to have much faith in the idea that odd-shaped bottles or peculiar labels will prevent mistakes in the taking of drugs. An English physician relates that he once gave a man, for external use, a little croton oil liniment in a blue fluted bottle, with a red label. One night the man, being troubled with a cough, thought he would take some of his wife's cough mixture, which was in a bottle having raised letters. He mistook the flutings on his own bottle for the raised letters on his wife's and swallowed the croton oil. He soon discovered his error, and was very ill for many hours. In a similar case a man recently died from a heavy dose of liniment.

The Nicholl's Hospital.

A Look through the Wards—Clean Comfortable and Conducted like Clock Work—Everything in Order—Eleven Patients on the Rolls.

On Sunday through the courtesy of Dr. King, whose mouth on duty it is, a representative of THE EXAMINER was privileged to visit the Nicholl's Hospital, for the first time since it has been in full operation, and the impressions received are of the most favorable character.

On entering the building, a vestibule admits to the wide entrance hall. On the left of this, the first apartment is fitted up as with the best of appliances and apparatus known to modern sugery. It is always kept in readiness for use, sponges bandages etc., being ready to hand in case of emergency. In one corner a room is screened off to make a dispensary, well stocked with medical drugs. The next room is a convalescent ward, for male patients which has at present two occupants.

On the opposite side of the hall are the reception and dining rooms, and in rear of the latter the kitchen and offices pertaining thereto.

The second floor contains on the south side the

at present occupied by three patients. One is an Indian, John Brown from Mud Lake. Some time since he bruised his back carrying a canoe over a portage, and a burrowing abcess formed, which followed upwards the course of the latissimus dorsi muscle. When admitted to the hospital he was in a very bad state, but since, under careful nursing, good medical attendance and sufficient nourishment, he is progressing rapidly, as far as the malady under treatment is concerned. But the suppurative drain has been so great as to leave the patient very weak. It is morally certain that if he had not been admitted to the Nicholls hospital, and got the benefit of the treatment, nursing and nourishment which he could not have otherwise secured, John Brown's body would have, today, been mouldering in the tomb. The two other patients are doing well.

On this side of the hall is the office and private room combined, of

THE LADY SUPERINTENDENT,

Miss Hannah Dalby. On the wall hangs her diploma of qualification as a trained nurse, issued from the St. Catherines Training School for nurses, also her certificate, of her having taken the required course in anatomy and physiology. She has had about a dozen years' practical experience and seems, in every way, well qualified for the position she holds, as shown by the scrupulously clean condition of the hospital throughout, the perfection of the arrangements, and the comfortable condition of the patients.

On the other side of the hall are the female wards, now occupied by six patients. One of these, however, a diphtheria patients, is in the isolated ward, entirely separate from other patients. From the time of this patient coming under hospital treatment and nursing, the amendment of her condition was marked.

One or two of the patients are convalescent, and on Sunday morning they were singing part hymns with a good deal of credit to their vocal powers and to the entertainment of the other patients, none of whose ailments are serious enough to interfere with such an enjoyment.

The staff proper of the hospital consists of the lady superintendent and two trained nurses—a night and day nurse—whose qualifications include a thorough knowledge of their duties, lightness of touch and delicacy of manipulation. Any patient entering the Nicholl's hospital can be assured of careful medical and surgical treatment, the best of nursing, and good nourishing food and what deficencies their condition requires. In this respect, the humblest patient is on an equality with a sick prince attended by a physician extraordinary, with a title in front of his name to balance an array of initial suffixes, indicating his collegiate conquests.

The bedsteads are all of iron with woven white wire mattresses. These are only samples of the first-rate character of all the furniture and appointments of the hospital.

Still there are some deficiencies, which should, to bring the hospital up to its

be supplied. Already it is apparent that there is not enough of room. In case of the admission of several patients with infectious diseases, the isolated ward is not extensive enough and there is need for store-rooms for the clothing of infectious patients and the abundance of soiled linen, etc., that accumulates from day to day in a hospital.

The present building is admirably adapted for the administrative department of a hospital, and it would also afford sufficient private wards for pay patients, if, as has been suggested, a wing were thrown out southward from the rear of the present main hospital buildings. The desideratum of more room would have been attained. This would not be a very great expense, the principal being the walls and flooring. The interior furnishing of a hospital, to best meet the desired end, should be simply plain and substantial. When the munificent nature of the gift of Mrs. Nicholls is considered, it furnishes an example worthy of imitation to some large hearted and lengthy pursed citizen. The benefit of the hospital could never have been appreciated had not the great work it is doing, shown how much of alleviation of human misery and of the successful treatment of maladies, which must, without it, have, to a great extent, pursued unrestrained their destructive course, it is capable of accomplishing. The noble private benefaction of the founder of the hospital should be nobly supplemented as need arises by a generous public.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Fifth Parliament—Third Session.

FRIDAY, FEB. 19th.

At the sitting of the Ontario Legislature to-day, after routine, Bill No. 13, respecting the Leamington & St. Clair Railway Company, was read a third time. The following bills passed their second reading, and were referred to the proper committees: No. 60, to amend Cap. 157 R. S. O., respecting joint stock companies for supplying cities, towns and villages with gas and water; No. 74, to amend the Municipal Act; No. 38, to incorporate the Toronto Fire Insurance Company; No. 40, to authorize the village of Caledonia to issue certain debentures; to incorporate the village of Huntsville; respecting the Midland Junction Railway Company.

The House then went into Committee of Supply and passed the item of $3,980 for the Lieutenant-Governor's office.

On the item of $15,630 for the Executive Council and Attorney-General's Department, Mr. Meredith took exception to the salary of $3,000 being paid the new Deputy-Attorney-General on the ground that a young man should not receive the same salary on his appointment to an office as that paid the old and tried officer. After some discussion the item was passed without amendment. The following other items were also passed: $21,000 for the Education Department, $48,000 for the Crown Lands Department, (this included an increase of $3,350 made up by salaries of three officers formerly paid out of contingencies and increase in salaries), $18,180 for Public Works Department, $17,975 for the Treasury Department, $30,650 for the Provincial Secretary and Registrar's Department, $1,600 for Immigration Department, $9,274 for public institutions, $8,400 for the Provincial Board of Health.

The Committee then rose and reported, and the House adjourned at 6.10.

Burdette's Little Wife.

The Humorist Pathetically Depicts a Touching Death-bed Scene.

We have been requested to publish the following letter written to a friend by Mr. Robert J. Burdette, (who recently lectured in Peterborough), describing the death of his wife. It shows that while he is a humorist, he is capable of writing touches of pathos that approach the melting tenderness of many penned by the master hand of Dickens. The following is the letter:—

ARDMORE, July 3, 1884.—Dear Mrs. Pilling: So many times I have tried to write to you since Carrie fell asleep, and so many times I do not write because I have so much time. It is not easy to do anything when one has too much time. I wrote more, and wrote more easily—I accomplished more when there was a restless little head to be soothed and petted; when there was a hot, tumbled pillow to adjust; when there was a helpless little head to hold until the ache went away. Now I have nothing to do, and so do nothing.

She did not pass away in forgetfulness of you. Too many times your coming had brought comfort to our home; too many times you had come with hope and courage and strength in your hands. She thought of you in the closing days, and often spoke of you.

I wish you might have seen her when she lay at rest. I would like you to have that picture of perfect rest, of eternal peace, of quiet, untroubled sleep—the dear little face not marked by one line or mark of pain and sickness; I would like you to have that picture of her to carry in your heart, because I know how dearly you loved her.

Her last Sunday on the earth was without acute pain, but she was very restless, her breathing was distressed, she ate nothing. She wanted us, Dora and Robbie and myself, to be near her all the time, as for months past she had constantly expressed the same desire. Many times she hoped we could be alone, just our own little family, when she passed away.

Several times this afternoon she asked, "How does the day wear on?" During the closing weeks of her earthly life she had always used that expression in asking the hour. Dear, patient, little sufferer. The day did indeed "wear on" with her.

Suddenly night came on; she was weary, but complained of no acute pain and seemed glad. When the darkness came on Dora took my place at her side; at sunset and until 9 o'clock I walked on the lawn: for weeks past Dora and I divided the watching between us. Carrie seemed so content and happy to have one of us near her all the time.

When I came in at nine o'clock there was no change to make us apprehensive. A score of times within the year we had felt more fearful that the end was near. It made Carrie restless and distressed her to have us sit up, so I partially undressed and lay down by her side. The night grew cold, but she did not appear to notice it. The windows were wide open for air, but her breathing was no easier. She did not sleep. Part of the time she closed her eyes, but for the greater part of the night the soft brown eyes were open, the patient light that blessed our home shining in them.

At times her mind was busy with persons and places and scenes remote in time and distance. All the night long I heard her whispering softly, as though she talked with the angels who were ministering unto her. When I leaned closer to listen she would turn her face towards me, smile, and bid me never mind; she was only dreaming. Constantly the position of her head had to be changed; her pillows grew hot, she said. Four or five of them were kept in almost continuous rotation, changing every two or three minutes. She did not complain; she did not appear to notice that she was so restless. About 2 o'clock in the morning she asked again, "How does the night wear on?" and then I wanted to call the family, but she said "No, it was not necessary." "I do not think," she said, "the end is very near."

"The morning air was blowing chill and strong through the room, but she did not appear to feel the cold very much and only had one light extra blanket thrown over her. About 4 o'clock I heard her say softly and lovingly:

"Sit closer to me, Dora."

"And then she added:

"How quiet and beautiful the lake is to-night."

Then I knew she was back in her old home on the bluff in Peoria, the beautiful home of her girlhood; once more she was sitting on the white-columned porch with Dora, her darling sister, always dear to her and always by her side, and they were looking at the sleeping waters of the star-lit lake. She was sitting alone with Dora. Just pluming its snowy wings for flight, the soul turned back one moment to the morning of life, and my darling nestled close to the side of the loving and beloved sister.

The grey light of the early morning was creeping in through the open windows, and on her patient face, glorified by suffering, was shining another, fairer light, that I knew was streaming from celestial portals opening for her. She smiled sweetly as I crossed the room and stooped to kiss her, and said:—

"Bob, dear, it is

The chill before the dawning,
Between night and morning."

It was the hour at which she had expressed the wish that she might pass away, and I knew that she referred to a favourite verse of a poem that she loved. I said:—

"Yes, dear, I think the sun will come very soon now."

Her face grew radiant as she smiled again, and said:—

"Yes, He will come for me this morning."

Dora was quickly at her side, and we knew there were watchers whom we could not see standing in the room. She who was so nearly past all suffering was solicitous only for our comfort, and in quiet loving tones gave some little instructions:—"You must keep well and strong."

"The nurse entered the room, but Carrie could take neither nourishment nor medicine. "I want nothing," she said. Her breathing became more laborious. The doctor arrived, but she could not swallow her medicine, and he held her hand, bade her good-bye, and went away, promising to come in again during the morning. About six o'clock Robbie came into the room, kissed his "little mamma," and stood close by her side.

There was no fear, no dread in all the scene. She could speak only in short, broken sentences. As I repeated the beautiful promises to her, how her face kindled, as she smiled upon us, turning her dear face from one to the other. Even as she entered the river she said, "the sun was shining on it." She did not shrink. The waters were not so cold nor so bitter. She had no fear, for she relied on the strong, right arm of the righteousness.

Moved by a sudden impulse, about half an hour before she passed away, Robbie rushed to her side, threw his arms about her, holding her close kissed her. She kissed her boy, and tenderly said:

"God bless my baby."

It was her last blessing on earth. "Lord," she said in broken accents, checked by her troubled breathing, "into Thy hands I commend my spirit." Still she looked at us, smiling, until a few moments before the end. She asked for a drink of orangeade, but could not swallow. "Even so," she whispered, "come quickly, Lord Jesus." Her head fell back in my arms. Like a flash of sunlight the "bright white light" swept across her face, carrying away the stain and cloud of disease, her face turned upward, and her eyes grew strangely radiant. "Mother!" she called joyously, as a child springing into a mother's arms, "mother," "mother," and she was folded in the arms of the angel mother, who passed away when she was a child. Her face was white as the starlight, her radiant eyes were not dimmed when she closed them, and for the first time in many years she slept without a pain.

Velvet mosses cover the little mound where she sleeps, and graceful ferns fringe it around. She rests in the church-yard of quaint old-fashioned Lord Marion church. It was her own wish, made nearly or quite a year ago.

I think the angels must have been glad to see her come. So many of them had ministered unto her, and strengthened her in her pilgrimage of suffering, and I know they rejoiced when she came to be with them. There never was so brave, so patient a life among men; there could be no life braver even among women.

We will always be glad to hear from you Mrs. Pilling. We will remain in Ardmore, in the house sanctified by her life and death, until next April, anyhow.

Robbie and Dora unite in sending love to you. You'd hardly know your little white-faced boy, he is so ruddy. Good bye. Sincerely your friend.

PROFANE LANGUAGE.

There is hardly any vice so shocking to finer sensibilities, so debasing to the purity of good society and so infallibly indicative of a coarse and brutal nature, as the habit of profanity. It hardens men's hearts to an extreme degree and its constant tendency is to supplant all reverence for higher things, by a contempt and scorn of what is holy and just and true.

Such is the present condition of the world, that a man who would openly deny the existence of a Supreme Intelligence would be denounced by most reasonable people as he has always been denounced by the Bible, namely, as a fool. One would naturally suppose that the man, who habitually uses profane language, has no regard for Divine things, and no real belief in the existence of One, Whose name he habitually hurls about in oaths and curses. But here one would greatly err. Many who are guilty of blasphemy, publicly and privately, do certainly profess to believe in the existence of a Supreme Being.

That is the surprising part of the whole affair. It would be a decided relief to those, whose feelings are constantly very deeply wounded by horrible oaths on our public streets and thoroughfares, if they could excuse the language of the swearer, as they excuse the gibberish of the idiot. The oaths of many among both the young and old, which constantly taint the air and sully the purity of conversation, are alas! not a denial of God's existence, but worse, far worse—a bold and ribald insult to Him Whom they purposely disregard, and Whose explicit command, "swear not at all," they constantly set at defiance.

Profanity is the language of those who belong to the very lowest a dregs of humanity. It is the invariable habit of the basest criminals. Young men, for the sake of common decency, if for on higher reason, should surely rise in their habits and tone of speech, above the level of debauchees and castaways. Who is responsible for the low tone which pervades society, especially among the middle and higher classes as regards impurity and blasphemy in speech? Some would say it is due to the secular mode of education, to which the Dominion is committed, and by which our young people are taught knowledge simply, without religion. But are not the older and the so-called "respectable" men of the community largely responsible for the wide-spread habit of profanity, which may be called a national sin? Truly, we think so. Men who ought to be lights in this dark world, laugh heartily at a so-called joke in which the Divine name is irreverently spoken. When seasoned with coarse oaths, the story always receives greater applause. As the poet Cowper says:

"In every tale they tell, or false or true;
Well known, or such as no man ever knew,
They fix a random, heedless oath of your pain.
With as he like rivets fo ced into the brain;
And even when sober truth prevails throughout,
They swear it t.ll affirmance breeds a doubt."

The careless and blasphemous words uttered by the young are passed by without a single reproof. The godless can use the most dreadful language even in the hearing of the police, and not a word of remonstrance will be uttered. We must in some way show our dislike to this evil custom, if we would have it completely ostracized. If gentle reproof and kind correction fail, profane language must be frowned down, and the man or boy who uses it must be shown that others forsake his company because he persists in the disgraceful and scandalous habit. Masters must plainly tell employes who are guilty of irreverent and scandalous speech, that such conduct will no more be tolerated than drunkenness or dishonesty. The police must be on the alert, and when the vile phrases are heard which are so painfully common on our streets, let the offender receive a warning, and on the second offence let him be severely punished.

Our city fathers could aid greatly in checking this and other scandalous affairs in our fair borough, if they would determine to appoint a capable and efficient Chief of Police. A town of this importance requires the services of the very best man that can be procured. We want a chief who will wink at no evasion of the law; one who will fearlessly and impartially carry out the provisions of the enactments relating to the administration of justice and who, at all hazards, will do his duty. The town needs a man who will be alert and active in ferreting out offenders, one who will put down villainous speech, riotous conduct, loafing on street corners and all other scandalous, disgraceful and low habits. In days gone by, houses of ill-fame could ply their nefarious arts without let or hindrance. A live police officer would soon make the town too hot for such unwelcome visitors. And it is just such a man the present occasion demands.

We trust our civic fathers will bring common sense to bear upon this question at their next meeting, and rise to the importance of securing a capable, efficient and energetic chief. No appointment in their gift deserves greater consideration. The growth of the town and its position on important lines of railway are elements in deciding the question which should not be overlooked. This place will inevitably be the resort of thieves, confidence men, burglars, et hoc genus omne in the near future and self-preservation, which is a law of nature, demands that the interests of the people and their property and morals should be protected to the very utmost limits possible. We hope the new chief when appointed, will have a sharp ear and a quick hand, to check, in public places, all profane language; rude conduct and street-corner loafing, so that our streets will be, to any unescorted lady, as safe, as free from course or insulting speech; as the precincts of her own home.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[The publisher of THE EXAMINER does not hold himself responsible for the facts asserted, nor the opinions expressed by correspondents.]

An Explanatory Epistle.

To the Editor of THE DAILY EXAMINER:

SIR,—Would you allow me to correct some errors in your report of what I said at the T. V. C. convention held at Peterborough, on the 10th inst., which make me speak rather against the canal than for it, which was certainly not my intention. I did not say "in addition to the Northwest products, etc," but that even if the colonization of the Northwest were a complete failure, etc., the canal would have sufficient employment in carrying the products of the Western States. I did not say that "five millions of bushels of grain are carried now yearly from Midland Belleville." I said that five millions were carried last year. Such may not be the case this year. "Sir John said the canal was a mistake." Sir John acknowledged that the Welland Canal was a mistake, and that if it were not now in being, would never be. This is my reasoning on the subject; if it was a mistake to build the Welland Canal on which $14,000,000 have been already spent, it is another mistake, to spend several millions more on it. The second mistake is to try in some way to correct the first. What was the Welland Canal built for? To try to divert the grain carrying trade of the Western States to the harbour of Montreal instead of to New York. All the grain that finds its way from the Western States to Montreal by the Welland Canal is brought within twenty miles of the mouth of the Erie Canal, when one cent per bushel would take it to New York instead of Montreal. If the Trent Valley Canal had been built instead of the Welland, and at that time, the dangerous and circuitous navigation of the lakes in reaching the mouth of the Erie would naturally have forced the carrying trade by the Trent Valley to Montreal; and even now were the canal built it would be so to a very great extent. My intention was to prove that such would be the case by giving the fact that five millions of bushels of grain had been transported last summer by rail from Midland to Belleville in preference to taking it by the lakes.

WM. LOGAN.

Fenelon Falls, Feb. 19th.

[We publish Rev. Mr. Logan's letter quite willingly. We had no desire to misreport him at the meeting mentioned. Our reporter on referring to his notes finds the words "Trent Valley Canal" where Mr. Logan says he used "Welland Canal." It is probable that Mr. Logan made one of those lapsus linguae so often made by experienced speakers, such as was made by Hon. Provincial Treasurer Ross, in his budget of speech, where he used repeatedly in the course of his speech the words "17 cents per $100," when he meant "$17 per $100." We should be very sorry to misreport Rev. Mr. Logan or lay one straw in his path in the political career that rumour suggests he is about to enter upon.—Ed. EXAMINER.

"Splendid old place," says the Major—antique, picturesque—pure Gothic, you know, and all that sort of rubbish! The drawing-room is a study in mediævalism, and the old china is priceless."

"Oh, yes, those beautiful old Queen Anne cups with the tiny gold tracing!" exclaims Cecil, leaning forward, and forgetting in her eagerness all her words may convey to the Major.

"Eh? What!"—suspiciously. "I thought you said you had not been there. Then how did you see the china, Miss Cecil—eh?"

"I heard of it," replies Cecil, blushing nervously.

"Heard—eh? Very accurate description from mere hearsay."

"Really, Major," says Mrs. Rivers, half smiling, yet wholly angry, "Cecil will not be pleased with you if you doubt her word. Some day we are all going over to see those wonderful things. Mr. Craven has kindly expressed a wish that we should go and look at the old place."

"Ah, yes, no doubt!" growls the Major. "Not that I think it would be an advisable step on your part, my dear madam. If you will allow an old friend of the family to give his opinion on this subject, I should say young ladies are better out of bachelors' quarters! They are hardly suitable for young unmarried ladies, I should think. Better at home, eh? But, of course, my dear madam, you are the best judge of all that."

"Yes, I think so," returns Mrs. Rivers, a little haughtily; but this terrible old man is not to be rebuked.

"No offense," he says. "A word in season, you know; and—er—my young friend Craven is rather a gay fellow—nothing very much against him, you know, my dear madam, only young men will be young men to the end of the chapter! Ha—ha!"

His words mean nothing, his manner a great deal. A vague shadow as of coming grief falls upon the heart of Mrs. Rivers as she turns almost instinctively to look at her pretty Cecil.

Her pretty Cecil is looking utterly unconcerned, and is simply regarding Major Jervis with a glance suggestive of indifference and contempt. Mrs. Rivers sighs, and wonders inwardly whether she is doing a wise thing in allowing this acquaintance with Duke Craven to ripen into a friendship—nay, into something that may prove even warmer than friendship, and more capable of bearing fruit either of joy or sorrow—what if it should be sorrow? After all, what do they know about this young man Craven? He has fallen into their lives by the merest chance, and is literally unknown to them beyond the fact that he is of good family and has a house and some considerable property. Of his character or his usual habits they have learned absolutely nothing. And even now is not the Major throwing out hints of a most unpleasant nature about him?

Meanwhile Ronnie is cross-questioning Major Jervis about Craven Court.

"Yes, it is a capital place," he says, "but draughty—very, and haunted into the bargain."

"Haunted! How delicious!" Cissy cries, clasping her hands. "Do tell us all about it, Major!"

Whereupon the Major, who dearly loves the sound of his own voice, gives them a most extraordinary account of his pursuit of Cecil on that memorable evening now more than a week ago. He has hardly finished his highly colored recital when, to the surprise of all, Craven again enters the room.

"I really must beg your pardon," says the young man, blushing ingenuously. "But not until I had reached home, Mrs. Rivers, did I remember about that address for which you so wished. I have it with me now. As I was going to Carbery"—a village some three miles away—"I thought I might as well drop in again and leave it with you."

"Much better," answers Ronnie, graciously.

"Ah, Major, knew I should find you here!" says Duke, genially. "I hope you are making yourself agreeable."

"What an absurd question!" cries Ronnie. "When is the Major anything else? Just now, too, he is making himself more than usually charming, because he is telling us ghost-stories. Think of that!"

"Just that little adventure of mine the other evening," says the Major, airily. "Nothing much, you know; but of course it is something to have been face to face with a real ghost."

"Something! Everything!" exclaims Cecil. "Weren't you frightened to death, Major?"

"Not I, indeed! By Jove," he says, looking fixedly at Cecil, "I have it! There was a certain familiarity about that ghost that puzzled me at the time; I thought it resembled somebody, but could not make out whom. Now I know. It was you."

Mrs. Rivers looks a little nervous, and Cecil and Craven break into merry laughter, instantaneous and irrepressible.

"I think it is very unkind of you," says Cissy, presently, with a little laugh, "to compare me to a horrid ghost!"

"But the figure was marvelously like yours," persists the Major, in a puzzled tone, "and the side-face too."

"The story grows more thrilling every instant," observes Ronnie. "I do hope, Cecil, that you will not imitate your ghostly fetch and dissolve away into a gentle dew."

"Don't you feel very uncomfortable, Miss Rivers?" asks Craven, addressing Cissy.

"No—rather flattered than otherwise. A very little more thought on the subject would make me imagine I was the actual heroine of the story the Major has so kindly told us."

"Well, I must be going," says the Major, rising. "You will come with me, Craven?"

"I am going to Carbery," returns Craven, evasively.

"So am I," says the Major, determinedly; and so, sorely against his will, the young man is compelled to rise from his comfortable lounge, and follow him.

CHAPTER VI.

A month has flown swiftly by. Already the earth is whispering of spring, the trees are budding, the grass is throwing out fresh green shoots; and, indeed, all Nature is lifting up its head and rejoicing as "Spring come up this way."

To Cecil this past month has been one of intense happiness; to Ronnie one of unrest, though perhaps not altogether painful. Sir Sydney Walcott has been abroad, summoned there to attend the death-bed of a rich relative, but his letters have not ceased, and, though calm as the first she received from him at Branksmere, have been at least undeviating in their constancy.

Mrs. Rivers, however, has been seriously uneasy. The hint dropped by the Major about Duke Craven's not being all one could desire in the way of steadiness has lingered in her mind ever since, and tormented her by day and by night. This doubt, too, has been confined perforce to her own breast, as the Major returned to town the day after he had sown the seeds of distrust in her breast, and to Cecil or Ronnie she would not talk on such a subject.

Craven's evident admiration for Cecil is apparent to all eyes—so apparent that Mrs. Rivers longs daily for the hour that will see him present himself as her open suitor. But that day has not yet come, and misgivings oppress her in spite of her determination to have patience and let things take their proper course.

By nature a nervous woman, she is now doubly so, on account of her dependence upon her uncle, Sir Gregory. She would gladly see her girls married comfortably and beyond the power of any whim of his to hurt them. She is anxious, too, about Cecil. The girl, she can see, has given her whole heart to this acquaintance of only six weeks. She is blindly, utterly happy when with him—which is dangerously often—and plainly trusts him entirely.

Just now Craven is with her in the drawing-room, and both are standing in the big bay-window counting the pretty snowdrops that are coming up one by one. Duke is not talking. He is, indeed, almost deaf to what Cecil is saying, so rapt is he in contemplation of her own fair self.

She is dressed in a gown of dark-brown velvet, trimmed with coffee-colored lace at the throat and wrists, and is looking more than usually lovely. Presently she becomes aware that he is not listening to her, and turning to him, tells him so, with a pretty show of petulance.

"I confess my crime," he says, quickly, his voice full of eager passion. "How could I think of anything but you when you are opposite to me? Your voice, indeed, is sweet; but you are even sweeter. No, I heard nothing. I could only see."

"See what?" she asks, with an attempt at gayety, though she has grown a little pale because of his manner, which is strangely unlike his usual calm self.

"You, my 'dainty—riel'—my darling!" he whispers quickly. The words come from him almost involuntarily; almost unconsciously too he takes her hand and holds it closely. Cissy colors faintly, and then grows even paler than she was before.

"Why do you call me that?" she says. "Why? You have no right to—no—"

He interrupts her by a gesture, and draws her even nearer to him.

"Give me the right," he says eagerly. "You know—you must know by this time—that there is nothing in the world I love so well as—"

"Major Jervis," announces a servant at this supreme moment, throwing wide the drawing-room door.

With a smothered exclamation, Craven lets Cecil's hand drop, and, turning aside, steps through the open window on to the small veranda outside, which by stone steps leads to the ground. Descending these, he goes quickly out of sight, but not before the Major has had time to catch a glimpse of his departing coat-tails.

"Hum! hah!" says the Major. He has hardly had time to return Cecil's somewhat cold greeting when Mrs. Rivers and Ronnie enter the room. There are signs of very distinct irritation about the Major. He blows his nose somewhat effusively, and refuses to let his eyes meet those of any one else present. "I think I saw Craven going out of that window just as I came in," he says, staring at Cecil.

"Yes," she returns, slowly; her mind is still full of Duke, and she is wondering what it was exactly that he was going to say when interrupted by this troublesome Major.

"He didn't expect me down to-day," the Major goes on. "Thinks me safe at home at this moment, no doubt."

Again he looks at Cissy, as if expecting her to answer. He is in truth curious to know if Duke saw him coming or heard him announced by the servant, and, if so, whether he ran away to avoid the bore of having to speak to him.

"He will be all the more delighted to see you at the Court, of course," says Ronnie, ironically. "Surprises of that sort are so pleasant!"

"Quite so," and the Major directs a withering glance at her. "Fact is, I hardly knew I was coming down myself until this morning. But business must be attended to, you know. Business for the fair sex especially—ha, ha! I've come indeed to carry Craven back to town with me. I bring a letter from his cousin, Lady Maud Esterdale, demanding his immediate attendance."

"Who is this Cousin Lady Maud?" asks Cecil, quickly.

"Oh, don't you know?" inquires the Major. "It's not quite settled, I believe; but—"

"What is not quite settled?" demands Cecil again. She is quite calm but deathly pale.

"His marriage," says the Major, quietly. It is true that he shifts a little uneasily in his seat as he says this, and refuses to lift his eyes from the carpet; but nevertheless he says it.

A dead silence ensues—a silence short in reality, but of intolerable length to some in the room. Then Cecil laughs—quite a natural little laugh, too; so natural, indeed, that both her mother and Ronnie turn involuntarily to look at her.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $250 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to every out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 20th, 1885.

GENTLEMEN.—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, I looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two springless trusses made in York State, costing me $40. Nothing would retain my Hernia. I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down, it holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. B. KING.

This new Spiral Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every case; and in one of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. When writing please mention this paper. Address

St. Luke's Concert.

Yesterday evening another of the winter series of concerts was given in St. Luke's school room. It was largely attended, and in point of excellence was fully up to the high standard of the entertainments given in the school. Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, as usual, presided. The opening piece on the programme was a skillfuly executed piano duet by Misses Katie Calcutt and Lizzie Rombough. Rev. Mr. Bradshaw, gave three short and interesting readings, taking the places of Messrs. O'Meara and Hooper. Miss McIlmoyle sang very nicely "I'll be True to Thee." A number of the Sunday school children gave four lively kindergarten choruses, which called forth hearty applause. The school children were admirably trained by Mrs. Jackson, Miss Grundy and Miss Eva Tivey, and the manner in which they gave the songs and appropriate gestures showed that these ladies had done their work well. Miss Eva Tivey contributed a charming piano solo. A number of boys gave an interesting charade, entitled "Coals of Fire." Ten little girls sang very nicely in unison, "Buy a Broom." Mrs. Jackson and Miss Grundy gave in excellent form an instrumental duet. The programme was concluded with the interesting play "Sleeping Beauty," which was presented in a very acceptable manner. It was announced that the next and last entertainment of the series would be given in two weeks, on March the 8th. The audience dispersed after singing the national anthem.

To Receive the Bishop.

Last Sunday after 10.30 mass in St. Peter's Cathedral, the male members of the congregation remained to arrange for the reception of Bishop Jamot, on the occasion of his return home from Rome, which, it is expected, will be in about a fortnight. Several committees were appointed to arrange the details of the reception, which will probably be an elaborate one. When in France, His Lordship had the pleasure of conducting confirmation ceremonies in his native parish. His Lordship left France yesterday for home.

Police Court.

A Lively Session and About a Hundred Dollars Added to the Town Treasury.

There was a full docket before Police Magistrate Dumble this morning at the police court.

The first case called was a charge preferred by P. C. Pidgeon against T. Giroux, for selling liquor during prohibited hours on Saturday night. Giroux admitted the charge and was fined $20 and costs.

Michael Sweeney, Joseph McDonagh and Patrick Carrol, three juvenile pugilists, were charged with assaulting Walter Squires. Carrol very emphatically pleaded innocence. The others pleaded innocent in a milder tone.

Walter Squires was sworn and stated that when on his way home from school, the boys in question had met here, telling him they were going to do him up in proper shape. Mike Sweeney struck him and McDonagh threw him down, and several kicked him. They were in the habit of assaulting him. There were about 25 at him. McDonagh demurred and stated that there were only eight, and explained that Squires had sent a challenge by Dan Cushin, offering to thrash Sweeney and himself. They had accepted the challenge, met him at the appointed place and thrashed him. He threw Squires down and Sweeney hit him. Carrol had nothing to do with the quarrel and was not present.

The magistrate said he would allow the case to stand over. He cautioned the boys to keep the peace, and when the constable called for them to appear in court.

A charge against J. E. McIntyre for keeping his billiard room open after proper hours was next heard.

Constable Adams stated that on Feb. 18th, about 12 o'clock, when he and P. C. Pidgeon were passing the Oriental, he heard the balls rolling and striking on the table in the hotel. He had been refused admittance a few nights before and he did not try to get in, but went around to the rear of the hotel and looked in at a window of the billiard room. The lower windows were frosted, and he had to kneel on the window to get a view of the room. He looked between the curtains and the sash. He saw six men engaged in the game, one of whom was a servant of the house.

Mr. C. A. Weller appeared for Mr. McIntyre. He said Mr. McIntyre knew nothing of the occurence. He was in the habit of going to bed early. He thought it must have been some of the servants of the house who were cleaning the room. He thought it could be clearly proven, and that Mr. McIntyre should have the benefit of the doubt.

The magistrate showed that it was in the power of Mr. McIntyre to call his servants to prove that it had been they who were playing, but he had not done so, and had made no attempt as a defence. He found him guilty of the offence and fined him $20 and costs, the lowest fine the law allows.

Walter Laduke, an employe of Mr. J. E. McIntyre, of the Oriental Hotel, was charged with refusing to admit P. C. Adams, an officer of the peace, in the discharge of his duty. Laduke refused to come for the name of Alfred, which was on the summons by mistake, but on the special ivitation of the Magistrate came forward. He admitted the charge and was greatly surprised when the Magistrate imposed a fine of $20 and costs.

J. F. and J. J. Daly were next called on, charged with a breach of the liquor law, by selling liquor after hours.

P. C. Adams stated that on Sunday morning last about one o'clock, when he and P. C. Pigeon were opposite the Grand Central bar room, he heard talking in the room. He went to the main entrance and rapped. He heard some person walk through the reading room and give three little raps on the bar door, when the noise in the bar ceased. He and Constable Pigeon were then admitted. He found the bar doors locked and demanded of the watchman that they should be opened. He refused and told him to go to Mr. Daly for the key. Mr. Adams then went outside and in company with Mr. Mr. Pidgeon walked up to Simcoe street. When they returned the noise and talking was again heard in the bar. There was no light to be seen as there was a heavy blind over the window. He recognized Joseph Daly's voice, and heard the clinking of glasses.

P. C. Pidgeon corroborated the evidence of Constable Adams. When they returned the second time and when P. C. Adams went to the front door he heard the three-rap signal repeated on the bar door and a voice from within say "all right." He heard the clinking of the glasses and recognised Joseph Daly's voice.

Mr. Moore, who appeared for the defendants objected to Joseph Daly giving evidence. The Magistrate noted the objection.

Jos. Daly was called but would not give any more information than that he was one of the proprietors of the hotel.

The Magistrate said that the evidence was all of a suspicious nature. Mr. Daly had been given a chance to clear himself and had refused. He was convinced that drinking had been going on, and imposed a fine of $20 and costs.

Mr. Moore asked for permission to appeal, which was granted.

A second charge of a similar nature was made against Daly Bros., and dismissed.

A charge was also preferred against J. E. McIntyre for selling liquor after hours. Mr. Weller for Mr. McIntyre admitted that on the night in question liquor had been supplied to a guest. The servant who supplied the liquor did not know that he was committing a breach of the law in doing so.

In this case the Magistrate reserved judgment.

A Successful Remedy.

Dr. Dorenwend's German "Hair Magic" has proved itself to be a first-class remedy for gray, and thin hair. The sale of it is rapidly increasing everywhere. Where the roots of the hair are not altogether destroyed, it will make it come in thick and strong, and restore the gray hair back to its natural colour. For sale by all principal drug stores. J. Tully, agent for Peterborough.

Don't be Duped.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brand of cigars, which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pay them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby.

It is not Disputed

That Nerviline, the new pain remedy, is a good article. Some indeed claim that the old fashioned preparations are just as good, but any sufferer can satisfy himself by expending ten cents on a sample bottle of Polson's Nerviline, that nothing sold can equal it for internal, local or external pains. Always speedy in effect, prompt and certain in every cure. H. S. Webber, Orangeville, writes: "My customers speak very highly of Nerviline as a remedy for toothache and neuralgia." All druggists and country dealers sel Nerviline. Try it to-day. d44-6t-w8-1t

"Work and its Worth."

An Eloquent and Interesting Lecture Delivered by Dr. Tiffany, in the George Street Church.

A large audience assembled at the George Street Methodist Church last evening, to hear Rev. Dr. Tiffany, of New York, lecture on "Work and its Worth, the Social Problem of Labour." The distinguished lecturer was warmly received, and his discourse was listened to with the deepest interest. Rev. I. Tovell, presided and introduced the lecturer to the audience.

Dr. Tiffany on rising was greeted with applause. He said in commencing that he wished to disabuse their minds with reference to any impression that the title of the lecture might have made upon them. He did not propose to discuss the large, vexed and very important practical question of the relation of work to wages, but he desired to find the worth of work in the character it produces; what we become by working rather than what we get by working. In order that the worth of work might be clear he first pointed out what were recognized by political economists as the sources of wealth. There were first, land. This included the soil and its products, the forests its products, mineral wealth and rivers and lakes. The second source of wealth is capital. By this he meant that part of accumulated wealth, which is set apart for reproduction. The third source of wealth is labor. This to be regarded as an effort put forth either to utilize or increase values, and appears as the supreme and permanent source of wealth, inasmuch as in itself and in that application it is necessary for all growth, developement and progress. The idea that capital paid the wages of work had been exploded, as work pays its own wages by the increment it gives to the capital invested; for as soon as the application of capital to work ceases to be productive to the capitalist he withdraws it from such employment, and does not bestow wages in charity upon the unemployed. Working men are rather glad to live in an age when they are paying their own way in the world, and building up and and adding to the wealth of others. So that while capital and labor are friends and allies, they are mutually independent—one cannot do without the other. The working man's hand is his own capital, the true symbol of power and the instrument of the mind. The lecturer devided people into two classes, those who do not work and those who do work.

In the first class he placed those who were sometimes called aristocracy and sometimes "upper ten," and also the paupers. Of the class which had work to do all history proclaimed that it had been the strength and hope of social order, it had ever been the groundwork of national independence and vigor. Contrasting these with the people who do not work, he said that the latter as a rule were not possessed of robustness of health and vigor of intellect. Referring to the pauper division, he said their condition was largely due to the carelessness of the other classes in society and by the unemployed. It was the same with women as men, and because some women sat luxuriously idle all day, others were sold in the shambles for sin and shame. Then overwork was another cause. The lecturer, in dwelling upon this point, used the "Song of the Shirt," and delivered it with rare power and feeling. Turning again to the larger class who have something to do, he said these are the men who were the aristocracy of intellect, and who make the bone and sinew and muscle of the world. It is the most virtuous class. Those who work are the most liberal of all classes in the community in proportion to their means in all benevolence and in all enterprises for good. The amount of benevolence of workingmen in supporting other men on strike when insisting on a principle the lecturer believed to be incalculable. Besides, these people are to be relied upon for the support of religion. Their ingrained common sense curbs the extravagance of theorists, their iron independence resists the domination of creed and clergy, and their practical morality keeps up the standard of public morals. They are the most patriotic of all people.

The lecturer then took illustrations from history to show the relations of the practical classes to national prosperity. The armies of ancient Rome were drawn from Germany. Poland was also a piece merely on the chessboard, because she never had a working class in all the ages of her history. Her people were all either nobles or serfs. As an illustration of the other side of the case he pointed to England, stable, strong and powerful, and she owes her proud position to her working classes. England's aristocracy was different from that of other nations, and her Queen was a model for all women, yet her greatness did not depend on these, but upon her working men and women whose industries are her reward and whose products make her wealth. And this country has had many children. One has set up in the northern part of this continent, Canada, he said, may exercise a tremendous power in the arbitrament of the destiny of the world if she pursues, as she is doing to-day, the culture and care of those who do the work which makes her greatness.

Referring to the other daughter of old England, on the other side of the river, he said the one wish and thought and feeling is that the old land shall stand strong, secure and dominant, and that the daughters shall live side by side in close amity and peace. The lecturer went on to say that in the United States there are some who are beginning to despise work. These he made the object of considerable ridicule. He pointed to some of the greatest of Americans as those who had come from the ranks of the working people, as Lincoln, Garfield and Grant. He condemned artificial social distinctions. Social distinctions must always exist, because people alike in circumstances and sympathies will form themselves into circles, but the wrong commences when any of these arrogates a superiority over any others. He believed the time is coming when society shall shake off artificial distinctions, and a man will be recognized as a man because he is a man.

On motion of Mr. Dumble, seconded by Mr. Geo. A. Cox, a vote of thanks was tendered the lecturer. Dr. Tiffany briefly responded.

Rev. Mr. Bell pronounced the benediction and the audience dispersed.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Fifth Parliament—Third Session.

MONDAY FEB. 22nd.

TORONTO, Feb. 22.—After routine in the Ontario Legislature the following among other bills were introduced and read a first time:

Mr. Carnegie—Respecting the town of Peterborough.

Mr. Carnegie—To enable the trustees of St. Andrew's, Peterborough, to borrow money etc.

In response to Mr. Mackenzie, Mr. Hardy said it was intended in the event of the Scott Act being repealed or becoming void in any county where a police magistrate has been appointed, that the appointment will be canceled should the county desire.

Mr Mowat, in reply to Mr. Ermatinger, said it was not the intention of the Government to introduce Legislation during the present session having for its object the removal or partial removal of the restrictions imposed upon coroners in respect to the ordering inquests to be held.

Mr. Mulholland obtained an order of the House for a return of copies of any correspondence between the Minister of Education or any other member of the Government and the authorities of any of the universities or colleges of the Province respecting a proposed federation of colleges referred to by His Honor the Lieutenant Governer in his speech on the opening of the Legislature on the 28th of January, 1885.

Mr. Carnegie obtained an order of the House for a return giving the following information with regard to all lots or parts of lots in the townships of Ashphodel, Douro and Otonabee, in the county of Peterborough, the arrearages on account of which have been reduced since the 1st of January, 1881, namely: The year in which such lot or part of lot was sold, with acreage, price and terms of payment; the amounts paid thereon, distinguishing between principal and interest under original contract; the amount to which the claim of the Province was reduced, and the terms of payment of such reduced amount, and copies of the valuations, recommendations or other data upon which such reductions were made.

Mr. Ermatinger moved the second reading of his bill to extend the hours of polling in legislative and municipal elections.

This brought Mr. Hardy to his feet to oppose the measure on the ground that there was no necessity or public call for the bill.

A discussion ensued in which Messrs. Pardee, Meredith Gibson (Hamilton) Morris, Phelps, French, O'Connor and Murray took part.

Loud calls were made for a vote, and the House was about to divide, when the Attorney-General rose and suggested that the bill be read a second time and referred to a special committee without the House being committed to the principle involved. This was done, and a committee consisting of Messrs, Ermatinger, Meredith, Morris, Baskerville, French, Gibson (Hamilton), Young, Awrey, Freeman, Fraser; Ross (Middlesex), and Phelps.

The House adjourned at 5.55.

Origin of the Rebellion.

The Dominion Government Directly Responsible for Provoking it.

Mr. M. C. Cameron, M. P., in his recent speech at St. Thomas charges the present Tory government with being responsible for the Northwest rebellion. As says: One of the tests of the honesty of the complaints of any people is when the people assemble at public meetings to express their grievances; examined by this test let us see if the half-breeds had grievances that remained unredressed for seven years. I will refer only to a few of those meetings:—

1. On the 23rd of February, 1885, a public meeting was held to consider of their wrongs. Father Andre attended that meeting and pointed out the petitions and remonstrances had been sent to the government at Ottawa to which no answer had been received. At that meeting resolutions were passed on the subject and petitions signed and sent to Ottawa and no answer was received.

2. On the 8th October, 1881, and 17th October, 1883, a public meeting of the half-breeds of Prince Albert, was held at which resolutions were also passed asking the government to make the half-breeds of the N. W. T., in the same position as the half-breeds of Manitoba. These resolutions were transmitted to the government at Ottawa, but the government never moved.

4. On the 21st Jan., 1884, a meeting of the half-breeds of St. Catharines' parish was held to consider the wrongs complained of by them. This meeting pledged itself to take every means in its power to have their wrongs righted.

5. In the same month another meeting was held at Lindsay's schoolhouse, Red Deer Hills, at which similar resolutions were passed.

6. In the same month another meeting was held at Halcross Settlement. On the South Branch there similar resolutions were passed.

7. In Feb., 1884, another meeting was held at Colleson's schoolhouse, in the same neighborhood, and there also similar resolutions were passed.

8. From that period until the half-breeds despairing of getting redress, got behind their Winchesters, almost every week witnessed similar meetings in the vicinity of Batoche. Resolutions were passed, pointing out the grievances complained of and praying for an investigation. But the government never moved; did nothing until the atmosphere was vibrating with the coming tempest, and the thunders of artillery re-echoed along the banks of the Saskatchewan.

On March, 27th, 1884, I, in the most solemn way known to parliament, moved a resolution in going into supply, that the House should resolve itself into a committee of the whole to consider the grievances of the settlers in the Northwest. I pointed out the dangers of delay; that hope deferred enhanced the price to be paid for it; that we were on the verge of a great crisis; that we lived from day to day on the brink of a volcano. My warnings, my entreaties, and my earnest prayer for justice to our countrymen on the Western plains were unavailing. The government closed their eyes, stopped their ears, and slumbered in profound indifference to the coming storm. They voted down my resolution amidst the triumphant cheers of every Tory in the House—cheers as triumphant as if a great battle had been fought and a great victory achieved. That vote was the prelude to the bursting of the gathering hurricane.

Young's Point.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Plenty of snow and bad roads now.

We are sorry to say that Mr. John Young, sr., is seriously ill.

Mr. S. Blewett has moved into the house formerly occupied by Mr. Alex. Wyna, and which he has purchased from Mr. L. G. Hebert.

The Pentypool Minstrels showed in Kearney's hall on Friday evening, but the attendance was not large, owing to the inclement state of the weather. The performance was especially good, especially an American sing dance performed by Mr. Beach, Peterborough, which received well-merited applause. The company showed at Burleigh Falls on Saturday evening and had a crowded house.

Mr. C. Courtmanche moved from here to Fenelon Falls on Monday last. We wish him success in his new home.

Last Friday was pay day at Burleigh Falls, and the usual "big drunk" followed on Saturday, but resulted more seriously this time. A man named Frank Ryan was wrestling with an Italian, and another Italian standing near remarked quietly "stop stop," whereupon Ryan wheeled and dealt the speaker a severe blow on the eye, from which it is feared the sight will be injured, as his eyes were sore before. As soon as the other Italians heard of the affair, they armed themselves with axes and sticks, and demanded admission into Mr. W. J. Kearns' house, where Ryan is boarding. Being refused they then broke open the door and a window, but by hard coaxing on the part of Mr. Kearns and others, they were prevailed on to stop at that, which they fortunately did, for there was no telling how it might have ended. It is said that Ryan would be safer away from there now, for though they have settled it for the present, they have not forgotten it. The Vendetta is yet to come.

One week of country life was enough for Mr. Alex. Wyna, and he has again taken up his abode in the village, going into the house vacated by Mr. C. Courtmanche.

ACTION INDICATED.

Reference to our advertising columns will inform the reader that the East Riding Agricultural Society is alive to the necessity of taking prompt action in promoting the interests, it is organized to subserve. It will be noted that at an "important agricultural meeting, called in Norwood for March 9th, radical changes are to be discussed respecting the mode of conducting the exhibitions of the Society. This meeting should be one of deep interest to the friends of the West Riding Central Exhibition, in view of the movement now on foot respecting the future relations of the two societies; and though not specially invited, we are sure that any representatives of the West Riding organization will be made welcome. It is high time that the friends of the latter entered upon some earnest and concerted action in its interests and the interests of agricultural exhibitions. The longer the question of amalgamation and organization on an expanded basis, are deferred, the greater will be the obstacles to success. If surrounding societies, which it is desirable should be secured to co-operate with the West Riding society, without any attempt of a practical character being made to secure their co-operation, are allowed to perfect, as independent organizations permanent arrangements, the difficulty of persuading them to unite with the home society will be greatly increased. In Ontario county there has been very recently organized, the "Ontario Central Agricultural and Live Stock Association," with a financial foundation which speaks volumes for the permanency and future prosperity of the organization, and to which we hope to have the pleasure of referring more elaborately hereafter. In the meantime it may be urged upon the promoters and directors of our own association, that all around there are sure signs of activity and energetic efforts at organization and consolidation, which put to shame the half-hearted efforts put forth in the interest of the Peterborough Central Exhibition.

FORTUNATE ONTARIO.

The Province of Ontario is to be congratulated upon the proud position it occupies as the keystone and milch-cow province of the Confederation. It is also the financial white haired boy of the Confederation family. Moved thereto by the recent budget speech of Hon. Mr. Ross, Provincial Treasurer, the Bobsaygeon Independent thus characteristically delivers itself:—

Ontario stands in the still more remarkable position of having no debt at all, and a revenue that amply supplies all her needs. There is no other civilized government on the face of the earth which occupies so proud a position as that of Ontario,—it can look all the world in the face and say it owes no man anything. Not only has it no debt but it has four millions in cash bringing in a handsome sum yearly as interest, and an unsettled balance still due to her from the Dominion and Quebec. Can anything be said more favorable of a Government than that after being in office for thirteen years it reported that it has no debt and possesses four millions in ready money,—a sum sufficient to defray all the expenses of the Province for a year. We are out of debt and have twelve months grub ahead! This journal is very proud of Ontario; it is also very proud of the public men who have managed Ontario's affairs so wisely and economically, in fact this journal is proud of everything connected with Ontario which is setting a noble example to the world in statesmanship and political morality. Hurrah for Ontario, Ontario the Beautiful! Ontario, the garden of America, where Liberty has made her home and where the financial goose hangs supremely high.

Our contemporary has good cause for its jubilation, especially when the conditions of the other provinces are compared with that of opulent and fortunate Ontario. The debt of the Dominion of Canada is three hundred millions—doubled under Tory rule, since 1878—with a deficit this year of five millions of dollars. The public debt of the province of Quebec, is close on to fifteen millions and all the other provinces have a tidy little incumbrance in the shape of a public debt. While all the other provinces are and have been continually drawing large sums in exceptional subsidies from the Federal treasury, Ontario has not only not been drawing its share, but it has contributed the large amount of the taxes that go to fill the Dominion Government strong box, yet in spite of this condition of things, Ontario has a surplus of $6,705,000 and no public debt. This is something to be proud of, and something the Liberal party has to be credited with. Since confederation—and especially during the last fourteen years, this province has been under Liberal rule. Since confederation the government of the Dominion and of the province of Quebec have been under Tory rule, with the exception of brief intervals of Liberal administration. The inference is too plain to need indication.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Mr. Gladstone is the only man—with the exception of the late Lord Derby—who has thrice been Prime Minister of Great Britain during the last century.

The Ottawa Citizen asserts that "the Riel matter has been forced on the ministerial organs." So was the rebellion practically forced on the country by the misgovernment of the Dominion ministers.

The Toronto Globe is apparently in doubt as to whether it should say that Mr. Meredith righted about or right-aboated. The London Tiser thinks that if you wish to write about Mr. Meredith either is about right—that is, when you apply either expression you are right about Mr. Meredith.

The Tory organs can regard Hon. Thomas White's "political exigency" statements with idolatious respect, but the moment Mr. M. C. Cameron proves from official documents that they are flat falsehoods, then he is hounded down and branded as a "forger and liar." The truth cuts the organs to the quick—they're not used to it and can't stand much of it.

A return brought down on Monday by order of the House shows that the Professors at the Agricultural College assisted at twelve Farmers' Institutes during the winter vacation of 1885, and at twenty-five during the vacation of 1886. They lectured 185 times at these Institutes, and visited thirty-two counties. Not so bad for holiday work.

Toronto City Council has a Legislative Committee, which has decided that it is desirable to borrow $2,300,000 for a trunk sewer, $300,000 to improve the Esplanade front and $300,000 for Don River improvements. There is nothing small about Toronto—not even the city debt, which will exceed $10,000,000 when these schemes are carried out

The alacrity with which the telegrams in the Kyle forgery case were produced contrasts strongly with the fight made to protect the bribers in the Bunting, Meek & Co. case last season. If, remarks the Chatham Banner, telegrams passing from Winnipeg, in a forgery case, are readily produced, why should telegrams from Ottawa conspirators to Toronto tools in a bribery case be held sacred?

A MAID FORLORN.

BY THE DUCHESS.

(Continued.)

"He is rather a scamp in some ways," continues the Major, in a genial way. "Now if you asked him about this marriage, it is as likely as not he would deny all knowledge of it, and declare he was never further from matrimony in his life. But don't you be taken in by him. He is a disgraceful fellow in the way of flirtations; makes love all round, you know, to every woman he meets, and makes some of 'em believe him, too. But he's not a bad young fellow at heart. No, no—far from that. But this marriage now will be a good thing for both of them; she with title, he with money."

"A charming arrangement indeed!" says Cecil, without so much as a quiver of her eyelids.

"Well, it is rather premature yet to speak about it," pursues the Major. "Craven mightn't like it, you know; so don't mention my name in the matter as having been the one to tell of it. You see, he is such a great friend here that I dare say he will wish to be himself the first to tell you of it."

"Of course he would like to tell us himself," returns Cecil, smiling calmly. "As you say, he is a great friend of ours, and he knows we will be glad to hear of anything likely to add to his happiness."

The Major watches her closely as she makes this set little speech, and she as closely returns his fixed gaze. Then, with a somewhat troubled and baffled expression on his face, he rises and bids them "good-bye" for the present. When the door has shut behind him, Ronnie turns vehemently to Cecil.

"I don't believe one word of it," she says hastily—"not one! He looks as if he were telling a falsehood."

"I saw no trace of falsehood either in his look or tone," answers Cecil; in a strange tone, "and, as for the rest, I believe every word he said."

She moves toward the door; her mother, with tears in her eyes, rises as if to follow her, but with a gentle gesture the girl prevents her.

"I want to be alone, mamma," she says entreatingly, "just for a little while; I shall be all right then. But there is one thing you can do for me," she cries, breaking suddenly out of her terrible quiet. "Never—never—mention his name to me again!"

Poor Mrs. Rivers is thoroughly cast down, and Ronnie scarcely less so.

"How shall we receive him if he calls to-morrow?" asks her mother, when poor Cecil has crept away from them up to her own room to cry her heart out on her bed.

"Just as if nothing had happened. Cecil, of course, will not appear. I will make her go for a walk at that hour, so that we can truly say she is not in. Mamma, if only for Cecil's sake, do not let him see we care about this thing."

So the next day, when Craven calls at his usual hour, Mrs. Rivers is as nearly as possible the same to him that she has been during the past month. Perhaps some subtle change in her manner might be noticed by a very acute observer, some vague irrepressible shrinking from all more open cordiality; but beyond this her demeanor is perfect.

As for Ronnie, she is a degree more sad than angry. She maintains an almost utter silence; but every now and then Craven, glancing at her, wonders vaguely why her eyes are so large and mournful, her whole manner so full of an uncertain depression.

His wonder on this point, however, is indeed vague, as his whole mind is filled with a longing to see a particular lounging-chair near the fire occupied by a little lissome figure whose smile is wont to beam at him, half roguishly, half with a tenderness not to be described. Where is she now—his little sweetheart?

"Where is Miss Cecil?" he asks at last, unable to restrain his impatience any longer.

"She has gone for a walk, I think," replies Mrs. Rivers, stooping to poke the fire.

"Let me do that for you," says Craven, taking the poker from her. "She has gone to the garden, perhaps." He is kneeling on the hearth-rug, and is looking very earnestly up into Mrs. Rivers's face, with his pleasant honest eyes.

"I think not—certainly not—she did not say exactly where she was going," returns Mrs. Rivers, evasively.

Ronnie at this sighs and sly, and Craven, turning, looks at her sharply. Something in her expression evidently strikes him as being peculiar, but he says nothing, and presently turns the conversation into another channel.

"I have a friend coming to stay with me next week," he says—"a friend of yours, too, I think. I met him in London, and he almost asked me to invite him down. He said he knew you all very well."

"I dare say. We lived some years in town," responds Mrs. Rivers, indifferently. "One gets to know so many people there."

Ronnie evinces no curiosity either about the new arrival at the Court; so Mr. Craven goes on—

"I'm rather sorry he is coming just now, as I am bound to be in town in the morning, and shan't be able to be back for a fortnight. I am afraid therefore he will have only a slow time of it."

He rises to go; as he does so, Ronnie rises too, and follows him into the hall.

"I think," she says, in a tone that falters slightly—"I think Cissy went in the direction of the beech-wood."

Before he has time to thank her for this hint or wonder at the strangeness of her manner, she has disappeared; and, somewhat puzzled, Craven takes his way toward the wood she has mentioned.

Just as he enters it, he encounters Cecil coming toward him, her head slightly bent, her face rather paler than usual.

"How d'ye do?" she says, quite calmly, but without an accompanying smile. She lets her hand lie in his unsympathetically, and then draws it away almost before he has time to know it was there.

"I was unfortunate to-day. I thought I should have found you within"—with an attempt at cordiality, though some inward misgivings have cast a shadow on his usual light-heartedness.

"For the future, I think you must not expect always to find me in," she replies, with a faint smile.

"Why?" he asks, astonished at her whole treatment of him.

"Because winter is at an end, and the fine weather tempts one to go out," she says, coldly.

"For that reason one loves the fine weather," he returns, striving against his growing anxiety. "May I not sometimes accompany you in your rambles?"

"No, I think not. When I go for a walk in these quiet woods, I prefer my own company to any one's. A strange fancy, and rather egotistical, is it not?"

"It is very unlike you"—gravely then, unable to control his uneasiness any longer, he says, anxiously, "What has happened that you treat me like this? What have I done to you?"

"Done to me?"—haughtily. "Nothing!"

"I am going to town this evening, Cecil. I shall not be back until—"

"I must ask you not to call me 'Cecil,'" says the girl, quietly, and with a certain amount of dignity. "I must always be 'Miss Rivers' to gentlemen-acquaintances."

"Am I only that? Only an acquaintance?"

There is a world of reproach in his tone.

"Yes, only that"—remorselessly.

"And yet yesterday—"

"Do not speak of yesterday!" she exclaims, putting up her hand impulsively, as though to ward off something that is hurting her.

"As you will, of course," he returns, in a tone nearly as cold as her own. "I have no claim, of course, to be considered even a friend. May I say good-bye to you, and let you finish your walk in peace? I am going away this evening."

"Where are you going?"

"To my aunt—Lady Eton."

"Ah, to your cousin, Lady Maud!"

"Yes, if you like. Who was telling you of it? The Major?"

"Yes, the Major. He told me everything."

"I don't know when I shall be back."

"Soon enough, no doubt. What are you going for—the wedding?"

"Yes, for the wedding." He speaks in a very low, depressed tone, because of her cruel coldness. To her his depression means only shame at the discovery she has made.

"When is it to be?" she asks, slowly.

"Next week."

"So soon? It is sudden, is it not?"

"Not very; I have known of it for some months."

"You knew of it before we came here?"

"Oh, yes; long before that! I wish you knew Maud—she is a very nice girl, and I am sure she would be a great friend of yours."

"I am equally sure she would not. I hate nice girls!" says Cecil, with sudden and most unlooked-for vehemence.

"Surely they are better than nasty ones, at all events!" he returns, somewhat aggrieved.

"I don't know. At all events"—defiantly—"I don't care to hear anything more about either you or Lady Maud."

Silence follows this outburst—a silence that lasts until they reach the small path that leads to the avenue.

"I think you are hardly kind to me," he says then, gently. "And I don't understand you at all."

"No"—in a very low tone—"I don't wonder at that. There are times"—bitterly—"when I can not understand myself. Well, shall I say then that I wish your Lady Maud joy?"

"Thank you. I shall give my cousin that message," he answers, gravely; then, holding out his hand, "Good-bye."

"Good-bye"—stonily.

"I shall not see you again for some time," Craven goes on, wistfully.

"Don't let that trouble you," she returns, with a little heartless laugh that certainly has no mirth in it.

"Does that mean that you do not care ever to see me again?" he demands, his face darkening.

"It means whatever you like," she answers, icily, though at this moment she would have given half her life to be able to fling herself into his arms and cry her heart out upon his breast.

"No; you shall tell me what you really mean now—at once!" he declares, sternly, compelling her to face him. "Is it that you honestly hope never to see me again?"

"Yes, that is my honest hope," she returns, calmly, her face deathly pale.

"Ah!" He draws his breath quickly, and for a moment his own face rivals hers in pallor. "You shall not be bored by me in the future," he says, slowly. "I shall not trouble this part of the world much again as long as it shall please you to remain in it."

So saying, he turns from her, and, with bitter anger in his heart, strides rapidly through the woodland, and is soon lost to sight amidst the shadows of the coming night.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brand of cigars, which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pay them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, on its MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $100 to $200 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and those we wish to send to every one out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents sewing machine solicitors and canvassers in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

Skating Party.

A party of about twenty couples assembled at the Parlour Roller Rink last night, and enjoyed themselves on the rollers for a couple of hours. The attraction of roller skating has not died altogether.

The Chilly East.

The Calgary Tribune good naturedly pokes a little paragraphic fun at the "chilly east." After recounting the way-down readings of the thermometer in various places in Ontario on a certain date our cotem says:—"On the same day the official readings of the thermometer in Calgary gave the maximum and minimum temperature at 53 and 31 above zero, respectively. Alas the chilly east." There is a slight mistake however, in placing the thermometer of Peterborough at 38° below zero. It hasn't been as cold as that this winter.

Market Moms.

There was an average market this morning. From appearances the conclusion might be drawn that the people of Peterborough are great beef eaters. Tons of tough and tender beef were offered at the usual prices, selling slowly. Butter, eggs and poultry were offered freely, and were purchased with avidity. Prices were as follows: butter, in prints, 20c.; eggs, fresh, 20c.; chickens, per pair, 50c. to 65c.; geese, 60c. to 75c.; turkeys, 80c. to $1; beef, per cwt. $5 to $6; mutton, per lot, 6c. to 8c.; potatoes, per bag, 60c. to 65c.; apples, per bag, 70c. to $1; hard wood, per cord, $3.25 to $3.75; soft wood, $2 to $3.

The Lakefield Concert.

The concert given at Lakefield on Monday evening by the children of the Hazel Brae Home and their assistants, under the management of Mr. Duff, was particularly successful. The special to this suburban was on time and so were the children, nearly 40, in Sunday best, as excited and happy and noisy as the circumstances of the case warranted. All went happily and well. The Lakefield friends were most kind in their welcome and considerate attentions to the comfort of the Hazel Brae party, for all of which, and the free use of the hall, Mr. and Mrs. Duff desire to return very sincere and hearty thanks. The very efficient help of the ladies and gentlemen of both Lakefield and Peterborough who so kindly aided and sustained the children, was also gratefully appreciated.

The Federal Life.

Elsewhere in these columns will be found the advertisement of the Federal Life Assurance Company. The only company in Canada working the popular Homans plan of life insurance, which is fully and emphatically endorsed by the most eminent actuaries on this continent, and approved of by insurance men everywhere, while the large amount of business done by the company in the past year (over $2,000,000.00) is sufficient evidence that the insuring public of Canada fully appreciate its merits. The Federal Life has about $200.00 of assets for every $100.00 of its liabilities to the public, exclusive of the large amount (over $600,000) of its uncalled guarantee capital, proportionately more security to liability for policy-holders than is afforded by any other company in Canada. Mr. G. H. Howson has accepted the general agency for the company, and will be glad to discuss their plan with intending insurers.

Pigeon Creek Bridge.

The arbitration committee from Peterborough and Victoria county councils, which had under consideration the amount to be contributed towards the repairing of the Pigeon Creek floating bridge, decided that $300 should be expended, to be divided evenly. Work will be commenced on the bridge as soon as spring opens.

A Rich Musical Treat

under the auspices of the Otonabee Lodge of Oddfellows, will be given on Wednesday evening, 3rd March, by the Redpath Concert Company of Boston, composed of Miss Ella M. Chamberlin, whistling soloist, Miss Edith Christie, solo violinist, Miss Louise Warner, concert soprano, Mr. Frank G. Reynolds, humorous vocalist, and Mr. John Francis Gilder, piano virtuoso.

Successful Entertainment in Smith.

The tea and entertainment in the Line Baptist Church, Smith, was a decided success. After the tea had been disposed of Rev. A. H. Munro, of Peterborough delivered his able and instructive address, on "How We Came by Our English Bible," followed by a stirring address on "Church Life" by Rev. Mr. Macfarlane, of Lakefield. Both addresses were very much appreciated by the audience and a hearty vote of thanks was tendered the lecturers. The choir discoursed excellent music, which added materially to the evening's enjoyment.

A Musical Treat.

The lovers of music of the community will be pleased to learn that the Otonabee Lodge of Oddfellows have decided to bring the celebrated Redpath Concert Company, of Boston, to Peterborough, on Wednesday evening next, March 3rd. This superb musical organization will no doubt draw a crowded house. Those who have heard the Mendalesohn Quintette Club can form some idea of the rare musical treat in store for our citizens, in the programme given by this company. The most eminent musical critics pronounce the Redpath Concert Company to be equal, if not superior, to any musical organization on the continent.

An Unusual Bustle at the Barracks.

Yesterday evening a young lady who attended the meeting of the Salvation Army had a strange experience or accident, being unburdened of her bustle on as short notice as Bunyon's Christian was of his load of sins. She was in the act of leaving the barracks when that part of her wearing apparel, owing to some unknown cause, fell to the floor with a "dull, sickening thud." The gallant and graceful Ted Webb went to the rescue and tenderly picked up the implement. The lady did not wait for her property and Mr. Webb has now on hand four small bags of sawdust with attachments complete, which the owner may have on application.

Still Another Vet.

Mr. A. R. Stephenson veterinary surgeon has decided to leave Cobourg and pitch his tent in Peterborough. The Dr. has a very wise horse in his stud—one that believes in sensational advertising on his own account, seeing that the code of ethics prevents his owner from elaborate indulgence in this respect. Yesterday a horse belonging to Dr. Stepenson, while being hitched to a sleigh, made a bolt and rushed through the back door of a shoe store, spreading destruction and demoralized stoves and furniture in his path. He thrust his head through the glass of the front shop door, carried the door from its hinges and pranced down street with the frame hanging round his neck, and was caught very little harmed. It would be hard to find a horse capable of bringing its professional owner's name more prominently before the public on the occasion of the latter opening out practice in a new town.

The Great Gough.

"Cheap,"—Why cheap is no word for it—a dead give-away is the term best descriptive of the slaughtering prices, which Gough, the wonderful cheap man, Arcade Buildings, south of the Town Clock grocery, places upon his clothing. Gough is the "fellow" next the "Hub," who hangs out his banners on the outer walls "and the tickets he places upon the goods displayed there for sale, fairly paralyze the public. The first surprise gives way to astonishment as the inspection of the goods and their quality is compared with the price, and amazement succeeds astonishment, as the spectator notes that the clothing is of a first rate quality and that the prices are fifty per cent. lower than the same goods can be bought for anywhere else. Gough has had his premises opened for only a few days, yet in that short time they have become the shrine at which thousands have bowed down and risen laden with first-class clothing, ready made, at absurdly low prices.

And still they come, and still the wonder grows,
That Gough can give such sacrifice in clothes;

Gough the wonderful cheap man has made a revolution in the clothing trade. Visit him, ask his prices, and no one will ask you to buy—you can't help it. Note the man and place—Gough, the wonderful cheap man, Arcade buildings, south of Town Clock Grocery.

Alexander Ferguson, a laborer employed by Jacob Powley of Cataraqui, has been committed for trial on a charge of indecent assault on the 11-year-old daughter of his employer. Prior to the present proceedings Ferguson had entered an action for $7000 damages for slander against Powley, for circulating stories about Ferguson's undue familiarity with the girl.

Personal.

Dr. Henry Willoughby, of Saskatoon, N. W. T., is in town for a short visit renewing old associations.

Mr. Van Zandt, of the Redpath Musical Bureau of Boston, was in town yesterday, arranging with the Otonabee Lodge of Oddfellows for the appearance of the Redpath Concert Company on March 3rd.

Messrs. Ed. Brown and Chas. Stapleton, jr., have opened a branch stock and grain commission office in Lindsay, for Messrs. Forbes & Co., brokers, of Toronto, similar to the one carried on in town by Forbes & Co

Mr. W. A. Dixon, of this town is a great favorite as a ventriloquist with the people of Oakwood. On his second appearance in that village at the concert last week he brought down the house. The Oakwood correspondent of the Post says of him:—"Mr. Dixon and his funny people made the old folks laugh in spite of themselves and the young people howl with very joy. He is indeed an artist." Mr. Dixon's abilities as a ventriloquist are recognized wherever he appears and he always pleases his audience.

Frankford.

A shocking death occurred about two miles from Frankford, Hastings County on Monday. A lady about seventy years of age, named Gallavan, was burned to death. She is supposed to have been kindling a fire (as matches were found near the stove), and her dress must have caught fire. When found she was lying near the the window dead, but still burning. Her body was burned to a crisp. The house was saved.

Bethany.

The Port Hope Times says: "We are pleased to hear that the new creamery in Manvers, at Bethany, is likely to be very successful. The farmers are taking a deep interest in it and a great many intend selling their cream to its proprietors, while the shares are being sold with encouraging rapidity. It deserves, and we feel sure will, have as prosperous an existence as its promoters hoped.

Interesting Social Event.

One of those happy events, the account of which is always of so much interest to our fair readers, took place at the residence of Jas. Bird, Esq., Oak Hills, last Wednesday evening. The occasion was the celebration of the nuptials, of Thos. J. Bell, of Beatrice, Nebraska, and eldest son of T. E. Bell, Esq., of "Ashbrook" Township of Smith, and Amy A., youngest daughter of Mr. Bird. The interesting ceremony was performed by Rev. O. R. Lambly, M. A., pastor of the Methodist Church, Stirling, and Superintendent of the Madoc District. The bride was attired in cream colored dress with lace to match, and the traditional wreath of orange blossoms. The bridesmaids, Miss M. Doak and Miss M. Bell, sister of the groom, wore dresses of the same colored fabric, trimmed with pure white lace.

The groom was supported on his right by Messrs. W. J. Bell, his brother, and Thos. Doak. The bridal party thus grouped together made a tableau both interesting and beautiful.

Immediately after the marriage knot was tied the wedding party adjourned to the dining-room, where a choice and sumptuous repast had been prepared by the hostess, to which ample justice was done by the numerous and happy guests. A large circle of friends were present to share in the festivities of the auspicious occasion, among whom were Rev. R. M. Pope and Rev. S. J. Thompson, of Fenelia.

The bridal presents were both numerous and beautiful, as will be seen by the following:—

Years of experience and successful trial have proved McGregor & Parke's Carbolic-Cerate the most complete and satisfactory compound for healing Old Sores, Festerings, Ulcers, Cuts, Wounds, Burns, Frost Bites or Felons, and for keeping out the cold and to cleanse or prevent proud flesh, sloughing or decay. I had for years been a miserable sufferer from Dyspepsia, and tried all known remedies and the best medical skill of my acquaintance, but still grew worse, until unable to eat anything without great suffering, or do any kind of work. I began to think there was no hope for me, and that I must surely die; when, like a drowning man catching at a straw, I determined to give McGregor's Speedy Cure a trial, I at once began to improve so rapidly that in two months I was as well as I had ever been in my life.—Wm. A Biography in Brief.

John B. Gough, it is claimed, has spoken in behalf of temperance to more than nine millions of people and travelled over five hundred thousand miles in meeting his appointments. A friend recently spoke of him as "first a pauper, burying his mother in Potter's Field; then an actor burlesquing temperance, then a drunken loafer, then a disturber of meetings, then a would-be suicide and finally the greatest orator of the country."

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 29th, 1885.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, I looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two springless trusses made in York State, costing me $40. Nothing would retain my Hernia. * * I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down, it holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. B. KING.

This new Spiral Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child sure; and 80 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. When writing please mention this paper. Address,

ECLIPSE POULTRY YARD.

Wyandottes, Partridge Cochins, Light Brahmas, Plymouth Rocks and Brown Leghorns.

I would take this opportunity to assure all in want of superior stock, to introduce new blood that will surely improve their stock, and also those who are about to start new in the breeding of Fancy Poultry, that my stock stands second to none in Canada. Having mated for this season's breeding 7 pens of choice birds, many of them prize winners of large size, vigorous constitutions, and extraordinary laying qualities, the chicks hatched from eggs laid cannot fail to please all.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

Fifth Parliament—Fourth Session.

The Speech from the Throne—A Very Meagre Bill of Fare—His Excellency Dodges the Deficit Question—Representation for the Northwest Territories.

[By Telegraph to the EXAMINER.]

OTTAWA, Feb. 25th.—The fourth session of the fifth parliament of the Dominion of Canada, was opened to-day with the usual ceremonies. The following is the text of

THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE.

Honorable Gentlemen of the Senate:
Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

On meeting you again, I have the pleasing duty to perform of congratulating you on the sufficient harvest of last year and on the prosperity and

SUBSTANTIAL PROGRESS OF THE COUNTRY,

since the suppression of the insurrection in the Northwest Territories. Peace and quiet have been restored and now prevail. After so serious an outbreak, some disquiet and apprehension of the recurrence of those disorders may naturally be expected to linger, and it will be the duty of my Government to make such precautionary arrangements as will assure the present inhabitants as well as intending settlers of efficient protection against all disturbance. I warmly congratulate you on the practical and on the announcement that it will be open for the daily carriage of passengers and freight from ocean to ocean in the month of June next, this great work so important alike to the Empire and the Dominion, cannot fail to cause the trade between British Columbia and the other provinces to ensure the early development and settlement of Manitoba, and the Northwest and greatly, to add to the commercial prosperity of the whole country.

COMPLETION OF THE CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY,

Should the negotiations between Her Majesty's Government and that of the United States for the appointment of a joint commission to adjust what is known as

and to consider the best means of developing our international commerce, fail to secure any satisfactory result, you will be asked to make provision for the protection of our inshore fisheries by the extension of our present system of marine policy.

The measure submitted to you last session for the

and for the introduction into the Northwest Territories of a more simple and economical system for the transfer of land, will be again laid before you for consideration and legislative action. The acts of last session will be found to be included in the first of these measures.

You will also be asked to consider the expediency of which obtains in those territories.

Your attention will be invited to the propriety of amending the law relating to the business of and for providing for the more satisfactory working of the present system of government parliamentary printing.

THE OFFICE OF QUEEN'S PRINTER

A numerical census of the Northwest Territories has been taken and a measure based thereon for the representation of the people in parliament will be laid before you.

Other measures will be laid before you and among them will be found bills for providing for a better mode of trial claims against the Crown, for regulating post-office, savings banks in British Columbia and the Northwest Territories, for expediting the issue of patents for Indian lands, for the administration of the rights of the Crown in the foreshores of the Dominion, for the establishment of an experimental farm and for the amendment of the Chinese immigration act.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

The accounts for the past year will be laid before you. You will find that the

ESTIMATE OF RECEIPTS

has been fully realized, but I regret to say that the outbreak in the Northwest has added largely to the expenditure of the country. The estimates for the ensuing year will be submitted to you; they have been prepared with due regard to economy and the requirements of the public service.

Honorable Gentlemen of the Senate:
Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

I commend these several subjects and the others which may engage your attention, your best consideration, and I earnestly trust that the result of your deliberations may, under the Divine blessing, conduce to the advancement and prosperity of Canada.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Fifth Parliament—Third Session.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 23rd.

After routine to-day Hon. Mr. Ross, Provincial Treasurer and Minister of Agriculture, introduced his bill to appoint an advisory board of five members in connection with the Guelph Agricultural College and model farm.

Mr. Ross explained the bill and spoke at length about a visit he made during last summer to the agricultural colleges of Ohio, Michigan, Iowa and Kansas. He found that these institutions, to retain their popularity, had branched out into industrial and mechanical studies. The Ontario college, however, had remained true to first principles. It was an agricultural college pure and simple. By an act of congress passed in 1872 all of these state colleges were handsomely endowed by the federal government. The colleges were under the supervision of a board of regents or trustees. He did not ask that this advisory board should have the control of the expenditure of sums of money that might be voted by the House from year to year. There had been an almost general demand that such a board, composed of practical farmers, should be appointed to make the college a success. He moved the second reading of the bill.

Mr. Carnegie was, of course, being a farmer and a politician, dissatisfied with the whole proposition. He was sure that the proposed Board would be a partisan one, that it would serve no good purpose, and that the student clause would prove mischievous and unworkable, that the Board of the Agricultural and Arts Association should be appointed, the Board for the College, etc., etc. Mr. Carnegie also assured the House that the College was not being properly conducted, that its management was extravagant, and generally recapitulated the long series of exceptions and objections he is accustomed to apply to the only Farmers' Institution in the Province. For whatever degree of partizanship entered into the debate the member for West Peterborough must be held responsible. Every sentence of his speech revealed the partisan, and exposed uncompromising hostility to the Bill, the College, and the Government.

Mr. Waters had no doubt the advisory Board would bring about many reforms in connection with the College.

Mr. Clancy regretted that the College had not received that countenance which an institution of the kind should have received.

Hon. Mr. Young laughed at the idea that over one hundred students could be taught practical and scientific agriculture at a College without a heavy expenditure of money. The Minister of Agriculture had yielded to a pretty general request among farmers for such a board, and the different county councils would be very much pleased that the Government had given them the privilege of selecting a student from their county. The effect would be that there would be students in the College from every section of the Province.

Mr. Waters expressed satisfaction with the proposed appointment of an Advisory Board, hoped Conservative farmers would not hesitate to serve on it, and believed the College would be benefitted by admitting practical agriculturalists to a voice in its management.

Mr. Clancy objected that the selection of students by the County Councils was confied to the sons of farmers. Hon. James Young deplored the permission of the Opposition in relation to all matters affecting the Agricultural College. The proposal to appoint an Advisory Board for the College was not an evidence of failure in the work of the College, but of a desire to promote its efficiency. He was not himself, convinced as to the advantages of, or necessity for a Board of Advisors, but as there seemed a desire among the farmers for its creation, he believed the Government was right in responding to the popular demand.

Mr. Ballantyne, who is always heard with much attention and acceptance, deprecated the disposition to look at all propositions from a political standpoint. There need be no politics in the Advisory Board. There was none in the Agricultural Commission which had largely promoted the interests of agriculture in the Province. He could not endorse the proposed mode of nominating students. He did not believe young men would consent to accept a course at college under conditions which might be regarded as reflecting on their independence. He hoped the Board would not overlook the dairying interests, in which were involved great possibilities of future development. He believed in high farming. He believed poor farming paid nobody, and that the College would render an important service by demonstrating the fact. He had no doubt by means of the Advisory Board the efficiency of the College would be promoted, and was in favour of pushing the work with all possible energy.

Mr. Wilmot astounded his colleagues by advocating the appointment of a new Minister who shall deal wholly with agricultural matters.

Mr. Laidlaw reviewed the career of the College, and declared its complete success. It was absurd to expect a revenue from it. None of our schools returned a revenue to the Government. He expected good results from the Advisory Board, but could not favour the students clause.

Mr Drury did not believe any young man would esteem lightly the compliment of being selected by their county to attend the Agricultural College. He could not see where an objection could be urged against this scholarship that would not hold against scholarship offered by any other institution of earning. The farmers had to pay largely for other schools and colleges, and were surely entitled to have the privilege of supporting one institution in their own interest. Osgoode Hall was supported at an annual cost of $10,000, but that was not attacked. He reminded the Opposition that in past one of their chief cries was against the admission to the College of any but farmers' sons, and contrasted that condition with the position now being taken by the Opposition. He met various other objections urged against the College, made a number of important suggestions, and closed an excellent speech amid the hearty applause of the House.

Mr. Meredith defended himself and his followers against the charge of political hostility to the College and its work. Mr. Awrey enlarged on the importance of the work done by the College, deprecated the continued attacks of the Opposition upon it, and emphasized the value of the reports circulated and the experiments carried on under its auspices.

Mr. Harcourt declared that too much was expected from the College. He showed that it was sought to apply to it a test that would not be applied to any other institution in the country; that naturally experience would suggest new methods of promoting the efficiency of the College, that our High Schools and Common Schools were more efficient than at the date of the establishment of the College. He remarked that in his own county the Germans were among the best farmers, and ascribed the fact to the liberal supply of agricultural schools in Germany. He had heard no complaints against the College or its management except from farmers who were Conservatives first and farmers afterward. He was convinced that the College reports, circulated so freely among the farmers of the country, were worth more than the whole expenditure on account of the institution.

Dr. McLaughlin exposed the hollowness of Mr. Meredith's energetic professions of friendship for the farmers, by showing that on the vote of the appropriation to defray the cost of the Agricultural Commission, Mr. Meredith and all his supporters voted in the negative. It is amusing what a number of sharp curves there are in Mr. Meredith's political part. He has talked and voted on both sides of almost every question he has been permitted to consider. It will soon be impossible for him to take a new position without going back to "first principles."

The Bill was read a second time, and a resolution assented to providing that the appointed members should receive $4 a day while attending meetings of the Board and their necessary travelling expenses.

The Treasurer then moved the second reading of the bill providing for the appointment of an auditor-general. Mr. Ross explained that the duties of the new officer would be similar to those of the dominion auditor-general. The bill was taken from the dominion act.

The bill was read a second time without further discussion.

The House then went into committee of supply and passed the thirteenth item (miscellaneous) under the head of civil government, where it left off last Friday night. The miscellanous item under this head amounts to $10,000.

Hon. Mr. Hardy laid on the table the annual report of the commissioner of crown lands.

Mr. Meredith asked if the evidence taken at the central prison investigation was to be printed.

Mr. Hardy replied that it was not. It was too bulky. Any member who wished to refer to it could do so. It almost filled a vault. The Provincial Secretary could not see that it would do any good to have the evidence printed.

The House adjourned at 10.15.

A Tailor of Many Suits.

George Tate, of Brampton, who was tried here a short time ago under the Charitan Act on a charge of abducting Eva Kempy, has gone into the business of libel suits very extensively. He wants $10,000 from the Globe, $10,000 from the News, $5,000 from the World, $10,000 from the Hamilton Spectator, $10,000 from the Hamilton Times, $10,000 from the London Free Press, $10,000 from the Palladium of Labor, and $3,000 from the Brampton Times. It is expected that the suit against the Globe will come on about the middle of March, and that that journal will endeavor to make as strong a defence as the facts of the case will admit. By the verdict in this case the other suits will no doubt be largely decided.

Dominion Doings.

The land granted to the volunteers who served in the North-west rebellion amounts to about 340,000 acres.

It is estimated that 1,500 new names will be added to the voters' list in Ottawa, making the total number of enfranchised citizens something like 7,000.

John Daly, a laborer, living near the Marchmont Home, Belleville, took brown ochre in a mistake for coffee last week. He has since suffered greatly and is dying.

Last week the eldest son of R. L. West, of Westmeath, Ont., was examining a gun when it was accidently discharged and the young man instantly killed. The charge entered his head.

Three young men employed by a Toronto butcher went to sleep in one room Sunday night, after blowing out the gas. Next morning they were found unconscious, but will recover. One of them, Geo. Frizelle, is still dangerously ill.

The express train from Montreal for Toronto on the Ontario & Quebec railway was wrecked near Sharbot lake, by the tender and four cars leaving the track. Express Messenger Fitzsimmons was the only person injured.

The young girl whose body was found in a C. P. R. culvert, near St. Martin's junction, turns out to be Exilda Charbonneau, daughter of a wealthy farmer of St. Rose, P.Q. It is believed she was thrown from the platform by a sudden jerk of the train.

In the case of Foster vs. the Ontario bank the Montreal courts rendered judgment in favor of the defendants. The plaintiff charged that the bank put a seizure on his property which was afterwards annulled. The bank held that he was speculating heavily with his firm's money which was the cause of the seizure.

The License and Police committees of Winnipeg have decided to recommend the suspension of Chief of Police Murray and detective Mckenzie, pending an inquiry into the charges of collusion with a certain Winnipeg lawyer to receive bribes from keepers of houses of ill-fame to refrain from prosecution.

A Hamilton policeman named Johnson is in trouble on account of arrogant arrest of a citizen named Thomas Stone. The constable kicked Stone's dog as it passed him on the street on Saturday and Stone remonstrated with him. The constable then arrested Stone, charging him with disorderly conduct.

It is expected that an unusually large number of ladies will spend the early weeks of the season in Ottawa, and this would seem to indicate the popularity of the gay season. The social ball will be set rolling on the 4th of March at Government House. Subsequent festivities, is understood, will be attractive.

A convention of temperance delegates from all portions of Nova Scotia assembled in Halifax on Tuesday night to discuss the position of the liquor question, the matter being in the hands of the Provincial Legislature. The convention urges such amendments to the laws as will practically make the license laws prohibitive.

The creditors of the Joseph Hall manufacturing works, of Oshawa, met in Toronto where a statement was presented showing that after all liabilities have been met the estate would yield a large surplus. Peter Ryan claimed he should be discharged from all liability, being satisfied to get out of the business with the loss of the money he had invested in it.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

The local executive committee has issued a circular, calling on the representatives of municipalities and of the various interests along the line of the Trent Valley Canal route to assemble at Ottawa on Thursday, March 10th. The object of the delegation, as is well known, is to impress upon the Government in the strongest manner the necessity of entering upon the work of the completion of another section of the Trent Valley Canal. The committee is desirous of securing as large, weighty, and influential delegation as possible, so that the Government may be as strongly convinced as possible, of the importance of at once beginning work. The Canadian Pacific Railway has decided to issue tickets from Peterborough and intermediate points, at single fares, good for three days, beginning Wednesday, March 10th, and it expected that the Grand Trunk lines leading to Peterborough, will issue single fare tickets to this point. With such arrangements there is no reason why a very strong and influential deputation should not be got together. It is advisable that the delegation should assemble promptly and agree upon some decided plan of action on the occasion. Next to the representative influence of the deputation, unanimity of opinion as to the best course to be suggested to the government, is of the utmost importance. It is to be hoped that such a pressure will result from the proposed visit, that the Government cannot avoid taking action. No stone should be left unturned to assist in the promotion of the work on this great national waterway, which, while of great importance to the general interest, of the Dominion, is of special importance to this district. Much depends at this crisis upon the interest shown by the Midland District in the enterprise, which can at this time be evinced in no better way than by the presence at Ottawa on March 11th, of a strong united representative deputation, which will submit to being put off with no evasive excuses and will be satisfied only with an expressed and definite declaration of immediate action.

FACTIOUS OPPOSITION.

The Opposition in the Ontario Legislature is largely composed of farmers, but there are among them, some who, while pretending to be farmers and friends of farmers' interests, are partizan politicians of the most unscrupulous type, who do not hesitate, in season and out of season, to make political capital at the expense of the interests of the constituents they pretend to represent. The Agricultural College is an institution established solely in the interests of the agricultural and stock raising portion of the community, yet it has been the subject of hostile attacks, repeated, with vindictive iteration by certain members of the Opposition. Amongst its assailants, who is most offensively industrious, is the member for West Peterborough, who has within the past few years developed an unusual hostility. He was at one time friendly to this institution and did not hesitate to avail himself of the advantages it presented. The reason of this persistent hostility to it of later days, other than political, is more evident in fact than in reason. As far as he is personally concerned, the Agricultural College has answered its purpose. The college was all right so long as he had a member of his family whom it was desirable to educate at an agricultural institution, but the moment he had received what advantages the Agricultural College was capable of conferring, that institution suddenly lost its importance in Mr. Carnegie's eyes, and now nothing good can be said of it. In like manner we see heads of families who, while they have children to instruct, can discover a thousand and one reasons in favour of our free school system, but the moment these children are educated, then the free school system becomes an odious and tyrannical imposition upon a free people. The antipathy of the opponents of the Agricultural College is born of unreasoning prejudice. It claimed that it is not giving the results which the cost if its maintainenance should yield. It is not to be expected that such an institution would give a direct dividend like an investment in stock or mortgages, yet it cannot be denied that its influence has been wide spread and potent for good in the elevation of the farming profession and the diffusion of methods in keeping with the universal progress of the age.

The Mail's advertising columns contain an advertisement, stating that the "Mail's Job Department" is situated "on the first floor of the rear building." Yet the Mail denies that it received one cent of the six thousand dollars odd which the public accounts say was paid the Mail for printing immigration pamphlets. Where is the key to the puzzle?

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The official returns, just issued, show that there were 3,164 deaths from smallpox in Montreal last year. The total deaths numbered 7,625, against 4,256 in 1884. Only one person of the seven thousand odd persons who died was over 100 years old.

A despatch from Winnipeg says that the City Council and the Board of Trade considered the question of the Canadian Pacific Railway monopoly on Monday night. They condemned the Dominion Government's policy and determined to take all steps possible to secure competition.

Mr. Mackintosh, M.P., made a speech on Wednesday night to an audience of 76, the majority of whom were Government employees and supplymen, who do not require further persuasion to induce them to vote the Tory ticket. Mr. Mackintosh made an elaborate defence of the Government's conduct in spending half a million dollars of the people's money for assisted immigration.

The session of the Dominion Parliament, which opens to-day, promises to be a lively one for the members—and not only for the members but for the tax-prayer, also. Government waste and extravagance have given us a deficit of five millions, and the taxes will be increased with no stinted hand. "Pa and Son" will make it lively for the tax-payers, and there will be an industrous hunt to discover what new subjects for taxation can be unearthed. It would be no matter of surprise to see the Finance Minister revert to the custom of old times, and impose a tax upon the windows in our houses.

One hundred and twenty thousand dollars does not appear to be a large sum for the great Province of Ontario to expend annually on colonisation roads, says the Montreal Herald. Ontario has an enormous body of wilderness land to open up for settlement, and although she has spent liberally in subsidizing railways, her territory is so vast that there must be many millions of acres which railways will not reach for many years to come. Aid in opening up ordinary market roads is necessary in many districts, and the sum to be granted by the Province this year would seem to be in the direction of judicious expenditure.

The carnival on Friday night last, owing to the inclemency of the weather was not so largely patronized as was expected, but all there seemed to take a lively interest in the different events. The Hasting's orchestra gave some delightful music.

Rev. W. Burns, of Workworth, is to preach the missionary sermons in the Methodist church next Sunday morning and evening and on Monday a public meeting will be held when addresses will be delivered by Rev. J. Leach, Brighton, Rev. W. Burns and others.

The St. George Church held their social on Monday evening last, in the Temperance Hall, and although the night was anything but what could be desired, there was quite a large gathering. About $10.00 was realized.

Quite a number are talking of attending the Keene carnival It is to be hoped the weather will be favorable.

Filling the ice houses seems to be the order of the day.

We are pleased to see Mr. Brough, of Madoc, son of Mrs. J. Wilson, improving so rapidly. Hastings air must agree with "Ed."

Keene.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The old folks' concert last week was a great success. The dresses were in good taste, and well represented the garb of a century ago. The singing was excellent, and many rapturous encores testified to the Keen appreciation of the audience. That exquisite old song "The Four Maries" was rendered by Dame Charity Harrison with such perfect voice and sympathy, that there were tears in many eyes. She was loudly encored and responded with sweet old "Annie Laurie."

Many other songs received peculiar favor and the recitations fairly brought down the house. Miss Griffin, in particular, convulsed the audience with her apt and natural rendering of an old lady's opinions of things as they are, compared with what "they used to be," and her quaint figure and "folks don't do as they erter," will be remembered with delight for many a day.

We understand that Mr. Mather has bought the corner lot next the drug store, and proposes erecting extensive premises for the manufacture of wagons, carriage, sleighs, and all articles pertaining to that line of business. 'Rah for Keene. Success to him, and may many men of means come and do likewise.

The missionary meeting in the Presbyterian church on Monday evening last was not very fully attended, owing to the stormy weather, but was a successful one notwithing.

The Rev. Messrs. Bell of Peterborough, and Ewing of Millbrook, addressed the audience on the subject of missions, and Mr. Andrews, of Keene, spoke of the pleasing fact that the new church here, was nearly out of debt. The collection, in aid of missions, at the close of the meeting was about twenty nine dollars, a very generous sum indeed, considering the number present. The choir sang suitable selections during the evening, and the meeting broke up a little before ten.

Great preparations are being made for the grand carnival in the skating and curling rink, to-night (Wednesday). We hope to see many Peterborough friends, as the weather is all that can be wished, and the sleighing capital.

We hear that Mr. Owen McCarthy is still very low, and fears are entertained for his recovery.

Trains from the east are usually late in arriving these days; however, we are punctuality itself in comparison with the trains of the great C. P. R.

High License.

The Ontario Government, in proposing to increase the amount of license fees under the Crooks Act, certainly acts in accordance with the drift of public opinion. The temperance people will endorse the step; and it is probable the better class of licensed victuallers themselves will do the same, because it relieves them from the competition of questionable characters. The operation of high licenses will be to throw the liquor traffic into the hands of responsible men.—Ottawa Free Press.

The Irish Question.

It is said that the first step of the Government of the United Kingdom will be to stop evictions in Ireland so as to preserve order, and that immediate steps will be taken to introduce measures relating to the land question and Home Rule. The land measure will be one providing for purchasing the rights of the landlords, and would seem to be somewhat similar to the measure introduced into the Canadian Legislature a few years ago, extending the rights of the stegneurs. It is not improbable that Mr. Gladstone, instead of bringing forward a detailed measure on the subject of Home Rule, will bring forward a resolution affirming the principle, and if carried after being committed to the House, will take further time for the preparation of the measure. The Government do not propose to declare their policy in detail before the 22nd of March. Mr. Parnell said that it was only reasonable that the new Ministry should be allowed the time Mr. Gladstone asked for the construction of the proposed measures.

CHAPTER VII.

A miserable week, fraught with bitter grief for Cecil and even bitterer disappointment, goes slowly by. No one has said a word to her about her faithless lover, no one has even ventured to mention his name in her presence; but just now, when she and Ronnie are standing alone in the pretty morning-room, Ronnie goes up to her and places her arm around her neck. The girl is impelled to do this because of the forlorn expression upon Cecil's face, and her disconsolate attitude. She is leaning against the shutter of the window, and great tears are shining in her mournful eyes.

As Cecil does not repulse her, Ronnie is emboldened so far as to lay her soft cheek against her sister's; and, being still further encouraged, as no rebuff has followed on this overture, she whispers, tenderly—

"Do not be so sad, darling. It will be better by and bye. Time cures all things."

"Has it cured you?" asks Cecil, with a little catch in her breath.

"Nearly, I think," replies Ronnie, with a heavy sigh that belies her words.

"Do you mean to tell me"—glancing reproachfully at Ronnie—"that you have ceased to long and hope and pray, for Sydney's return?"

"I think so—I hope so," answers Ronnie. But as she says this there are tears in her voice and eyes.

"It is not true," says Cecil, regarding her fixedly. "You love him still in spite of everything."

"Why should I love him?" demands Ronnie, with much agitation. "Why should I let one thought of him find harbor in my breast? He has forgotten me—has rubbed me out of his life without even a passing pang. I hope," she cries earnestly, "I shall never see Sydney Walcott again."

"Sir Sydney Walcott," announces a servant, almost as she ceases speaking, and then both girls become aware that the door is open, and that the young man upon the threshold has in all probability heard every word of Ronnie's passionate little speech.

Cecil, advancing to cover her sister's confusion, greets him kindly. Ronnie, who has turned first pale and then red, and finally pale again to the very lips, comes toward him now, and gives him her hand in silence; then, summoning all the courage she possesses to her aid, tells him in a conventional tone that it is really quite a pleasure to see him again.

This remark is so palpably insincere that the young man she addresses forgets to make any immediate reply, and only stares at her in a reproachful fashion.

He is of middle height, with a quiet, kindly expression, and a manner pleasant, if a little languid. When they have all seated themselves, he makes no attempt at promoting conversation, and even while answering the questions put to him appears very far away from them all in spirit. It is quite evident to Cecil that his thoughts are elsewhere, and that he is in the very lowest of low spirits.

Presently she rises, with the expressed intention of seeking her mother, and, in spite of a beseeching glance from Ronnie, deliberately quits the room.

Almost as the door closes behind her, Sir Sydney, rising from his seat, goes over to the hearth-rug, and standing opposite to Ronnie, leans his arm upon the mantel-piece and gazes down upon her.

"I hope Cecil will not return for some time," he says, slowly, "because I have a great deal to tell you. What was it you were saying just as I came in? That I had forgotten you—rubbed you out of my life—eh?"

"Well, was it not true?" asks Ronnie nervously, twining her fingers idly together.

"There could hardly be anything less true; but let that pass. You said also—if I remember rightly—that you hoped you would never see me again. Was that also true?"

"If you won't believe me in one instance, I suppose you won't in another," says Ronnie, evasively. "And yet I think—it ought to be true."

"Well, it isn't," returns Sir Sydney. "I don't believe a word of it. I won't; so you need not say it again." Then, suddenly—"I've been abroad, you know. My uncle is dead."

"I am very sorry," begins Ronnie.

"Don't be. I'm not," answers Walcott, calmly. "He was as disagreeable an old beggar as any one could possibly meet. However, I forgive him. He died—and left me all his money."

"I congratulate you," says Ronnie, icily.

"It is a case for congratulation, certainly," he replies, coolly. "And yet something is lacking to me that damps all my prosperity. That time last spring, when we were in town together, I was miserably poor. Nobody knew it, I think—at least, I hope I didn't look poor. But there were any amount of debts that should have been paid off, incurred by my—Well, never mind that; I paid them—they were debts of honor; but the paying crippled me so much that I was afraid to ask you to marry me in those days. Now I am not. I have got the title, you see, and the estates, and—and that."

"The title!" repeats Ronnie, in a low tone.

"Yes. My uncle was Earl of Errington, and there wasn't any son to inherit. That was my luck, you know."

"I suppose I ought to tell you again how glad I am or your—"

"Say nothing of the kind; say only you are glad to see me. Ronnie"—with an utter change of tone—"my dearest love, tell me you will marry me as soon as you can."

When Mrs. Rivers and Cissy came into the room, a few minutes later, they find Ronnie standing on the hearth-rug with Lord Errington's arm round her, and a smile upon her mobile lips that has been absent from them for many a day. A few words explain everything, and then the future Countess is caressed and made much of by her mother and sister for a little while.

"I had no idea that you were the friend who was coming to stay at the Court," says Mrs. Rivers, presently, smiling at Errington.

"No? Didn't Craven tell you? I chose a rather peculiar time for my visit," he adds, with a little laugh—"just when Craven was about this wedding."

"Yes, yes," says Ronnie, in an agony. In vain she tries to think of something to say that will turn the conversation into another channel.

"Very pretty girl, Lady Maud," he goes on, unsuspecting; "and enormous fortune. I think myself she is rather throwing herself away upon McGregor!"

"Upon whom?" asks Ronnie, breathlessly. Cecil, who has placed one hand upon the back of a chair to support herself, is looking at Sydney with all her soul in her eyes.

"McGregor," he repeats carelessly. "He's a sort of distant cousin of hers, and really nothing much in any way. But she likes him, and has married him—the wedding took place on Thursday—in spite of every one."

"This is dreadful!" says Ronnie, in a frightened tone. She would perhaps have said a great deal more; but Errington with a smothered exclamation, goes quickly forward, and catches Cecil in his arms. She has not quite fainted, but for a minute or two is compelled to lie passive in his arms, her breath coming and going in little fitful gasps.

After awhile she opens her eyes, and tries to smile, and murmurs feebly that it is only the heat—nothing more; that she is very foolish, and so on.

"You are not foolish, and it is not the heat!" cries Ronnie, with tearful indignation. "It is only that hateful Major!"

After this, everything is explained to Errington, who looks as concerned and is really as distressed as any one could possibly desire.

"Do not let us talk any more about it, Ronnie," says poor Cecil, at last. "It is all over, and it was all my own fault, and I will not have Sydney worried about my grievances. I shall go for a walk in the beech-wood and try to leave my troubles there behind me."

She smiles a little wintery smile as she says this, and, softly beckoning to her mother, they both go out of the room, leaving the lovers alone.

Down the bare leaf-strewn path goes Cecil, her mind full of bitter thoughts. Entering the wood, she strays deep into it, thinking always of that last day when she was there with him, and when she had so willfully put from her the one chance of happiness she most desired. Two tears spring into her violet eyes and linger there. They do not fall, but shine like twin stars in the last beams of the sinking sun.

She has now reached the very spot where last she saw Craven. Up to this she had been walking with bent head; but now, lifting her eyes, she looks around her. As her glance slowly travels—

"And—and now you know the whole truth—do you love me, Cecil?"

"I do"—still more shyly.

"My dearest heart!" murmurs Craven; and then somehow she finds herself in his arms with her head against his breast, and knows that she is utterly and entirely happy.

"What misery I have endured since we parted!" says Craven, after a little while. "It is quite a year ago now; isn't it?"

"A year! A week," she corrects, lifting her brows.

"Oh, nonsense! It might be a century at least," he says. "Well, you shall never know what unhappiness means again, if I can help it," he adds, tenderly.

Then they wend their way slowly homewards. In the hall they meet Mrs. Rivers, who regards them, naturally enough, with astonishment: and they have hardly explained matters satisfactorily to her when Ronnie and Errington join them, when it has all to be said over again on both sides.

Whilst they are in the very midst of their double congratulations, one of the servants, coming into the little morning-room where they have seated themselves, tells them that Major Jervis is in the drawing-room.

"I'll go to him," says Ronnie, rising; "you are too nervous to-day, mamma, and Cecil's eyes are pink—she has evidently been enjoying herself excessively with Duke."

With this, and a little laugh, she rustles out of the room and into the next by a folding door, which divides the two rooms from each other. There she finds the Major.

When he has gone through the ordinary questions about her own and her mother's and sister's health, he says, somewhat jerkily—

"Seen our friend Craven lately?"

"Yes, to-day. But he is not so interesting, I think, as he used to be."

"Ha! How is that?" asks the Major, in a delighted tone.

"Well, he is engaged, you see," answered Ronnie, as if reluctantly, "and young men engaged are young men lost, so far as their being entertaining goes. You know you gave us a hint about his being bent on getting married

It is not Disputed

That Nerviline, the new pain remedy, is a good article. Some indeed claim that the old fashioned preparations are just as good, but any sufferer can satisfy himself by expending ten cents on a sample bottle of Polson's Nerviline, that nothing sold can equal it for internal, local or external pains. Always speedy in effect, prompt and certain in every cure. H. S. Webber, Orangeville, writes: "My customers speak very highly of Nerviline as a remedy for toothache and neuralgia." All druggists and country dealers sel Nerviline. Try it to-day. d44-6t-w8-1t

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, on its MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the patent is protected in the strictest possible manner. Our agents do a cash business and every dollar is made secure from us. With all these advantages in our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its salability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $200 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $120 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through subagents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and about one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the season, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

Curling.

The thirteen point game is drawing to a focus. There are only four contestants left, viz.: Messrs. W. G. Ferguson, C. A. Weller, W. H. Badden, T. P. Attrill. Messrs. Ferguson and Weller will play this afternoon. The victor in this game will play Mr. Badden for the glory of opposing Mr. Attrill in the final draw.

"MADRE E'HICO!"

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

Moving.

Mr. Geo. A. Cox yesterday, commenced moving into the new and handsome offices of the Canada Loan and Saving Company, of which a description was given in a previous number of the EXAMINER. They will be occupied as the headquarters of the company in a few days. The offices will be much more convenient to depositors and all who have business with the company.

A Conservative Meeting.

The Conservative delegates from the West Riding of Peterborough, met yesterday afternoon in the Young Conservatives club room. Mayor Stevenson occupied the chair. The attendance was not large, and nothing of a very important character was transacted. It was decided to form associations in each municipality.

A Phantom Fight.

Two pugilistically inclined young men had a set-to in the shade of the Arcade last night. Blood and buttons flowed freely. A third party appeared upon the scene as they mutually threw up the sponge, much the worse for wear. The combatants separated, tired, weary and nose-sore, with as little demonstration of ceremony as a person does when he takes a tumble at the rink, gets up quickly and skates ahead, trying to persuade himself that nothing fell.

Teacher Taken Ill.

This morning, just after the opening of the school in Miss Nicholls' room, Central School, that lady was seized with a sudden illness. She retired for a moment from the room, and soon afterwards was found on the stairs, having fainted. She was soon restored and removed to her home. Principal Smith dismissed the room, and told the pupils to be on hand to-morrow morning; therefore it is not probable that Miss Nicholls' illness is of a serious nature.

Norwood Races.

The Norwood races which came off on Tuesday and yesterday, were quite a success. The prizes were liberal and entries were numerous and speeding lively. Peterborough sporting fraternity was well represented. Messrs. H. Calcutt and J. E. McIntyre acted as judges and gave entire satisfaction. The only races in which local fliers competed was the Farmers' race and the Green race. In the former a Smithtown horse was a good first, and in the latter race Geo. Lipsett's "Alice L." won second money.

The Oddfellow's Offering.

The criticisms in the American newspapers speak of the Redpath Concert Co., of Boston as "A Great Popular Success." Miss Chamberlin 'electrifies her hearers by her scientific whistling accompanied on the piano especially in the solo entitled, "The Mocking Bird." Miss Christie, in her selections on the violin, elicits applause everywhere, as she is indeed a wonderful player. Mr. Gilder is perfectly at home on the piano, and has a fine touch. Mr. Reynolds has a fine, rich voice with full compass, and is inimitable in his humorous recitations and songs. Bradburn's hall, Wednesday 3rd March.

Sunday Shaving!

Return Match with the Granites.

Five rinks of the Toronto Granites will play the return match with the local curlers in the Charlotte street rink to-morrow. Preparations are being made to give the Granites a fitting reception. A lively game is expected and it is hoped the Peterborough curlers will return the compliment of the Granites, and as the little boys say "do them up in proper shape."

What We May Expect.

That a big Trent Valley canal deputation will go to Ottawa.

That the delegates will chin the Minister of Canals, without fear or affection.

And that the minister will say, that the plans are not ready.

The Colonial Exhibition exhibit at the lock works to be visited and admired to-morrow afternoon.

Sunday shaving and hair-cutting to be sat on,

And slow sinners to wear stubbly chins at their church devotions.

A high old harmonious bowl at the Salvation sing-song to-night.

The Toronto curlers to be at the Charlotte street rink to-morrow,

And the contest to go on swimmingly if the weather is too soft for shoving the stones.

The local club to dine the visitors first, and "do them up in proper shape" afterwards.

And a report of the match to appear in the papers.

The thirteen-point game to increase in interest as the crisis approaches.

Strong winds or gales from the southward, cloudy, mild weather with rain or sleet, followed to-night by high west and northwest winds and colder weather with snow.

Personal.

Miss Annie Delaney, a pianiste and vocalist, who has won a high reputation in concert circles, having reached the limit of local instruction, leaves town to-day for Boston, where she will take a course at the Conservative of Music, at the conclusion of which she will return and resume her teaching classes.

The Dynamite Thawed.

Ottawa, Feb. 14.—Last evening, while a young man named Graton, employed by the Scottish-American phosphate mining company, in the township of Portland, was attempting to thaw out some dynamite cartridges, one of them exploded, throwing him through the roof of a building and landing the body one hundred feet from where the accident occurred. When picked up life was extinct.

Amherstburg.

Amherstburg Bemoaning Milling and Manufacturing Interests.

Amherstburg, Feb. 24.—The Amherstburg Town Council to-day entered an agreement with Colin Wigle, of Kingsville, to erect and operate an extensive roller process mill here. The council gave him a site with dock on Detroit River, and exemption of taxes. Other manufacturers are negotiating to locate here, and accept the inducements offered.

Smallpox in Ottawa.

The Disease Makes its Appearance in the Maternity Hospital.

Ottawa, Feb. 25.—Quite a sensation was caused here to-day over the announcement that smallpox had broken out in the maternity hospital in this city, controlled by the sisters of charity, and one of the largest institutions of the kind in the Dominion. Four cases are reported and the medical attendant states that in view of the patients having mingled with others residing in the institution he fears serious results will follow. The appearance of smallpox here, just as Parliament is about opening, will have the effect of keeping away many who, under the circumstances, would visit the capital. Several cases are reported which, in the interest of the city, the local press are endeavoring to keep quiet. Three days ago a young lady who had been employed cancelling old government notes, was taken with the disease, which is attributed to her having come in contact with old bills, which had passed through the hands of some party who was affected with the disease.

Thomas A. Edison, the electrician, was yesterday married to Miss Nina Miller, daughter of Lewis Miller, a prominent manufacturer of Akron, Ohio, and President of the Chautauqua Sunday School Assembly.

EGAN'S IMPERIAL TRUSS.

Read the following extract from a letter of a well-known citizen of St. Catharines,—hundreds like it:

St. Catharines, Sept. 30th, 1885.

Gentlemen,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, I looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two springless trusses made in York State, costing me $40. Nothing would retain my Hernia. * * I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down. It holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, Capt. B. King.

This new Spiral Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child born; and 90 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. When writing please mention this paper. Address,

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Fifth Parliament—Third Session.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 24th.

After routine, the Attorney-General introduced his Bill to facilitate the quieting of titles where the Land Titles Act is not in force.

Dr. McLaughlin was granted an order of the House for a return, showing the cost incurred by the Province in resisting Dominion aggressions.

Mr. Awrey is moving for a return showing the receipts of the Agricultural and Arts Association.

A lively debate followed in which several members took part. The debate as a whole was favourable to the maintenance of the Provincial Exhibition.

Returns asked for by Mr. Ferris with respect to University matters, and by Mr. Bishop as to Upper Canada College, were granted.

On motion of Mr. Drury, a committee composed of Messrs. Bishop, Broder, Clancy, Creighton, Drury, Dryden, Gibson (Huron) Gillies, Lees, Merrick, Murray, Rayside, Ross, (Huron), Waters, Widdifield, Wood, White, and Harcourt, was appointed to consider the advisability of so amending the Municipal Act as to reduce the number of members in County Councils.

In connection with the motion of Mr. Meredith's for a return of judgments or decisions in any Division of the High Court of Justice, as to the liability of railway companies for accidents to workmen, where the company has failed to comply with the provisions of the Railway Accidents Act, 1881, and the accidents have happened by reason of such non-complainance, Hon. C. F. Fraser explained that the Government were disposed to exercise all the authority possessed by the Province to legislate in this direction, and if anything stronger than was embodied in his Bill to provide compensation for injuries sustained by workmen could be suggested, the Government would be disposed to give it every consideration.

Mr. Balfour moved the second reading of the Bill to amend the Franchise Act. The object of the Bill was to give greater facilities to landholders' sons employed as mariners, fishermen, or students to exercise the franchise. It provided that the time spent away from home by pursuing their occupations should be counted as time spent at home. The Bill was read a second time.

After the second reading had been given a number of private bills, the House adjourned.

The Retort Courteous.

If the Hon. Thomas White and the Tory papers had been wise, they had left Hon. M. C. Cameron, of Huron, alone. He had made to his constituents a statement of political affairs as he found them, and because that statement was damaging to the federal government its members and their apologists and organs attacked him in a vicious and vigorous manner. They branded him as a falsifier and economiser of the truth. They mistook their man if they thought he was unprepared for conflict, and in a later speech he made public this indictment:

It is a scandalous thing for Ministers to parcel out among their camp followers the property of Ontario. It is still more scandalous for Ministers to parcel out to themselves and their relatives any part of the public domain. A Minister of the Crown should stand as a wall of adamant between the people and the plunders of the Crown sharing in the spoils. With a government so corrupt, with a thoroughly venal House of Commons, with a subsidized press, with the representatives of the people participes criminis with the government in a wholesale system of public plundering, you cannot expect honest legislation or that the public interests will be protected.

Turn with me to the sessional papers for 1882, No. 30, and there you will find the twenty-eight men who obtained licenses to cut timber on the public domain. Almost every man of them is a pronounced Tory, and seven licenses are in the disputed territory.

"In the sessional papers for 1883, No. 118, you will find that this government between August, 1878, and 15th March, 1885, granted thirty-three licenses or permits to cut timber on the disputed territory, and every licensee but one or two is a pronounced Tory.

In the sessional papers for 1885, No. 52, you will find the names of 136 applicants for a license to cut timber on the disputed territory between the 1st April, 1879, and the 2nd September, 1885; 29 of these appear to have been granted to supporters of the government. How many more were granted no man outside of the department can tell.

In the sessional papers for 1885, No. 52, you will find the names of 137 who, according to that return, paid dues to the government for timber cut in the disputed territory only 27 of whom were given by me in my Bruce field speech, and almost every man is a Tory.

useful at elections. In the face of these returns I ask the people of this country to say that the bold and brazen statements made by the Hon. T. White at St. Thomas are bold and brazen suppressions of the truth and misrepresentations of the facts.

But this is not all.

My charge was that this government parcelled out among 23 of their political hacks a large portion of the disputed territory. I have shown you that about 230 shared in the public spoils. I now go a step farther.

In the sessional papers for 1882, No. 30, you will find 477,200 acres of the public lands divided among Pat Kelly, a Huron Tory hummer, and a few others. In the same sessional papers you will find 342 square miles given to a few government favorites. In the same sessional papers you will find 1,056 square miles secured by 32 men, nearly all of whom are Tories.

In the sessional papers for 1885, No. 117, you will find that the colonization companies secured in the public domain in the years 1882-3-4, 125 townships of the choice lands in the N. W. T. No greater curse to any country could exist than the creation of such companies. They were created for a wholly illegitimate purpose, to boom the Northwest, to give the garden of the country to political supporters, and to secure from these supporters liberal contributions to Tory election funds. These corporations checked the progress of the Northwest, stunted its growth, and in no small degree fomented the rebellion.

In the sessional papers for 1883, No. 36, you will find the names of 353 applicants each for 320 acres of coal lands, embracing at the lowest estimate an area of 273,280 acres, and among these applicants you will find Tory members of parliament, Tory hummers, Tory hacks, Tory deadbeats from ocean to ocean.

In the sessional papers for 1885, No. 53, you will find that not less than 67 ranch companies obtained from this government at a nominal price in the years 1882-3-4 not less than 2,865,110 acres of the very best lands in the North-West. Of the 67 lessees only 23 stocked their holdings, and of these 23,14 had less than 1,000 head on each holding. Forty-four never put a single hoof on their land. They obtained these "principalities" for purely speculative purposes, and sold them at enormous profits. Ninty-five per cent. of these lessees are supporters of the government. In most cases these leases were undoubtedly granted as a reward for political services rendered and to be rendered. Are my Conservative friends satisfied? Are they convinced that my Brucefield speech proves altogether within the mark? Have they still any faith in Mr. Thomas White's veracity? If there is any doubting, hesitating, unbelieving Thomas in this audience let him step up to the platform and I will put the evidence of every statement I have made into his hands.

Mr. White has not since been heard from, nor is he likely to be with the new light Mr. Cameron has been forced to give him.

Much Afflicted.

A Family Burned Out After Pulling Through Typhoid Fever.

WARKWORTH, Ont., Feb. 24.—The store and dwelling of John Robinson, merchant, of Codrington, a village seven miles from here, was completely destroyed by fire about six o'clock this morning. The loss will be in the neighborhood of $5,000, with hardly any insurance. Not a single article was saved from the store, and the family had a narrow escape from being burned to death. It appears that the whole family have been down with typhoid fever, and are now convalescent. Mr. Robinson just managed to get his wife out when one of the floors fell in. The unfortunate man has the sympathy of the community. Cause of fire, defective stove-pipes.

The Balkan Trouble.

LONDON, Feb. 25th.—The news form Servia continues to be of a disquieting nature. A Vienna depatch states that a renewal of hostilities on Monday is looked upon as certain, as King Milan is in so dangerous a position that he has nothing to lose and everything to gain by a desperate movement. The cabal in favor of Karageorgovitch is growing in strenth, and the overburdened people are ripe for revolt unless some coup d'etat by the King restores their confidence in the existing Government, and offers some hope of popular relief.

Suppression of Socialism.

VIENNA, Feb. 25.—A Committee of the Hungarian Diet has given its approval to a bill for the suppression of Socialism. Under the provisions of this measure, summary dealings with all Socialists are authorized and severe punishment will be visited upon any person having letters in his possession declaring Socialistic tendencies, or any one providing rooms for meetings of Socialists. The keepers of public houses allowing Socialists to hold sessions on their premises will be deprived of their licenses

A Perilous Journey.

Exciting Experience of a Sleighing Party.

Last night a jolly sleigh load of happily-mated humanity, composed of nine lovely Peterborough lasses, squired and shielded from the piercing wind by nine gallant lads, started at 6.30 o'clock, for Otonabee, to attend a social in aid of St. Paul's church, held at Mr. Stewart's. The party had a very diversified experience—a little of bitter with a good deal of sweet. For the first two miles everything went well and the boys had no trouble in keeping the sleigh robes adjusted, but here the fates were against them—one of the front "bobs" of the sleigh collasped and a whiffle-tree snapped in twain. Two of the young men had to plunge through waist-deep drifts of snow, to a neighboring farmers' house to borrow a whiffletree, but the granger who, by the way, lives in a neighborhood where the hay-fork "racket" who worked to his grief, regarded the stranded youths with suspicion and ordered them off the premises to the accompaniment of a whistle for a big bull-dog. The timely interference of the kind hearted farmer's wife secured the desired whiffl-tree, damages were repaired and on went the procession. A little further on, the road was lost and the deep snow making it impossible to turn the sleigh around, the whole party had to leap overboard and worry, waist deep—lads and lasses and all—across a field full of snow to the right road. After several more mishaps of a minor nature, the party arrived at its destination, where a hospitable reception, some hot coffee and a big party of guests clouded the memory of their sufferings and all went merry as the marriage bells for the ringing of which several arrangements were made, more or less matured, during the evening. They found a party of about 200 assembled, consisting of fifty from town, a like number from Millbrook, and the balance from the neighborhood. After passing a pleasant evening the party started on their return journey, and almost at once their troubles were resumed. Suddenly the covered sleigh went over on her beam ends, capsizing completely, and shaking up the occupants like dice in a box—constituting a melange,—of what might be literally called, mixed a weets. The driver, whose coolness was equal to the occasion, kept the horses quiet and before long the conglomerate chorus of shrieks and squeals, of laughter and lamentation, was quieted a little, the pigeon hole at the end of the covered sleigh was opened and the young men passed the young ladies through the opening like a clerk passing a valentine through a post-office wicket. By the way, it has leaked out, that at least two thirds of the girls had to submit to the departmental regulation of having stamps affixed to their lips during the first few moments of confusion and darkness, following the tip-over. At length the party reached home in safety—every member of it voting the expedition the jolliest little jamboree they ever experienced. The driver on examining the inside of his sleigh this morning, didn't know whether, it was a pawn-brokers' shop or a consignment of goods for a seven-cent store. He found frizzes, bangs, hairpins, sleeve buttons, scarfs, scarf fringe, boot hooks, pocket handkerchiefs, coat buttons, pipes, cigar stubs, and altogether the rarest collection of fragments of habilimentary toggery he ever set his eyes on. Still he says he never did and never expects to drive again a jollier dozen and a-half of boys and girls than those of the Otonabee outing on Thursday night.

LIKE MASTER LIKE MAN.

On Thursday, March 11th, an influential deputation will wait upon the Dominion Government, to urge upon them the importance of putting the Peterborough-Lakefield section of the Trent Valley canal under contract. But it will be found that the "plans are not ready." For years a corps of special engineers have been ostensibly engaged upon the work, and the "plans are not ready." Why are they not ready? That is a question the Government must answer. They are responsible for the action, or inaction, as the reader pleases, of their subordinates. If the engineers have not received specific instructions from the government not to hurt themselves in hastening forward the plans, they have at least been subject to an equivalent influence. The mode of action of government employes is moulded on the attitude of their superiors. If the government shows indifference and entire want of interest in any work, then the subordinates take their cue accordingly. If the government had been in earnest in reference to the prosecution of the work there is no doubt that the plans could have been ready months ago. The government, will stand a good deal of vigorous stirring up on the question, and we hope, the deputation will use no honeyed words in asserting their demands.

THE GOVERNMENT'S PLEA.

A beggarly bill of fare, describes the speech from the throne at Ottawa, put into the mouth of the Governor-General by Dominion Ministers on the opening of the fourth session of the fifth parliament. First we have congratulations or a "sufficient harvest"—"sufficient" of course to stave off starvation, but not a deficit. But there is no reference to wheat being only 75 or 80 cents per bushel caused, according to Tory reasoning, by the N. P., for if the N. P. raised the price of produce when we had good prices, it must be held accountable for a low price. The allusion to the Northwest insurrection is made in the most gingerly and noli-metangere manner. There is no allusion to the responsibility of the the Government in causing the outbreak by its oppression and misgovernment. This grave matter, involving the loss of 200 lives and causing the expenditure of about ten millions of dollars, besides establishing a permanent heavy expenditure to repress the "recurrence of disorders," cannot and will not be dismissed by a mere deprecatory paragraph in a formal document. The country, the House and the Government will hear of it again on the floor of Parliament to the enlightenment of the one and the confusion of the other. The neglect of the Government in reference to the fishery negotiations is also slurred over. The Opposition exposure of the printing frauds which have cost the country so heavily, has forced the Government to propose legislation on the subject. While the speech refers in terms of warrantable pride to the completion of the Canadian Pacific Railway, there is a very prudent silence in reference to the financial condition of the country and the deficit of five million dollars in the current financial operations of the year. Altogether the "speech" is a very flabby affair, and only faintly foreshadows the momentous issues in respect of Government shortcomings, which the Opposition will, during the session, force upon the House in the interests of the country. The speech from the throne may be described in familiar terms, as being remarkable more for what is omitted than for what it contains.

REPRESENTATIVE REDUCTION.

The bill now before the local legislature respecting the reduction of members of County Councils, introduced by Mr. Drury, and which has been referred to a special committee, is one deserving the attention of the public. The proposal to reduce the number of members composing County Councils, is in accordance with a sound principle, which tends to promote a more economical administration of municipal affairs without in any respect impairing the usefulness of County Councils. No one will for a moment argue that a county council composed of a single representative from each municipality, composing a county could not as efficiently deal with its matters as two from each township or village. At county council meetings with few members there would be less discussion, and decisions would be arrived at much sooner. Taking the country as a whole, the numbers of members of county councils could be reduced one half with, as the speech from the throne usually puts it, all "due regard to the efficiency of the public service." If this were generally done the cost of each session of a council could be reduced on an average throughout the province by probably two thirds—certainly by one half. This would result in the course of the year in a saving of thousands of dollars. It is to be hoped that Mr. Drury's bill will at least result in a modification of the compositions of county councils, and prove to be the entering wedge that will open out the question of the reduction of the numbers of all representative bodies. The representative bodies of the Dominion, federal and local at present number some 650 members, and in the course of a few years when the different provinces shall have increased to, say, the numerical size of Ontario, the number will have increased to the thousands. The measure of reduction will have to be considered some time, and no time is better than the present for beginning. The principle of representation by population is all right, but the mistake is in making the representation of the basis province of confederation too large. The question will have to be volantarily attacked or it will ere long force itself upon the attention of legislators.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Eighty three private bills are, so far inscribed for presentation to the Dominion house.

The latest rumor in Toronto is that Hon. John Carling will be the new Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario.

There is a good deal of significance in the attitude of the Tory organs in relation to the criticisms on the corrupt extravagance of the Dominion Government. There is no attempt at denial or justification the only answer is the insolent question, "Well, what are you going to do about it? The robber enters a house and binds the strong man and all the satisfaction the latter can get for his remonstrances is the taunt, "Well, what are you going to do about it."

Whenever a suit is carried to the British Privy Council, a decision is given in a very short time, and the litigants are at the end of their agony. How different, says the Hamilton Times, it is in the Supreme Court of Canada. There cases drag on for many months, and are often forgotten by all but those who have to foot the bills before the judges find opportunity to collect their scattered thoughts and judgments. If Dickens had lived in these days of Canadian law's delays, he would never have laid the scene of Jarndyce vs. Jarndyce in the heart of London. The Supreme Court judges need stirring up.

Confirming the Town By-laws.

The following is the text of the bill which has passed the first reading in the Ontario Legislature, confirmatory of municipal legislation :—

Whereas the corporation of the Town of Peterborough has by petition prayed for an Act to authorize the said corporation to enter into contracts for a supply of water, gas or electric light, and for similar purposes, for a period of ten years; and to confirm by-law 498 of said corporation, to provide for a supply of water within the Town of Peterborough for fire purposes, and for other public uses; and by-law No. 497, to provide for a new town hall and lock-up for the said Town of Peterborough; and to confirm the purchase by the Little Lake Cemetery Company of land within the Town of Peterborough, as an addition to the present cemetery, and to close portions of Haggart and Ware streets in said town, and it is expedient to grant the prayer of said petition;

Therefore Her Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario, enacts as follows:

1. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Act of the Parliament of Canada passed in the 24th year of Her Majesty's reign, chapter 61, it shall be lawful for the corporation of the Town of Peterborough to enter into contracts for a supply of water, and the renting of hydrants, and for a supply of gas or electric light, and for similar purposes, for a period not exceeding in the first instance ten years, and for renewing any such contract from time to time, for such period not exceeding ten years, as to the council of said corporation may seem expedient.

2. The by-law of said corporation numbered 498, intituled "A By-law to provide for a supply of water within the Town of Peterborough for fire purposes and other public uses," and the contract made thereunder between the said corporation and the Peterborough Water Company, dated the 23rd day of November, 1885, are hereby confirmed and declared legal, valid and binding upon the said corporation and the said Water Company, for the full period mentioned therein, in the same manner and to the same extent as if the same had been passed and entered into respectively after the passing of this Act.

3. The by-law of said corporation numbered 496, entitled "A By-law to provide for a new Town Hall and Lock-up for the Town of Peterborough," is hereby confirmed, and the said by-law and the debentures issued or to be issued thereunder are hereby declared legal, valid and binding to all intents and purposes whatsoever, and such debentures shall be deemed to have been duly issued in accordance with the provisions of said recited Act.

4 The purchase by the Little Lake Cemetery Company of a parcel of land within the said town lying west of and adjoining the cemetery already existing is hereby confirmed, and it shall and may be lawful for said company to use such addition as a cemetery, notwithstanding the said land is within the present limits of the Town of Peterborough.

5. Upon the said Cemetery Company opening and grading a new street parallel to Haggart Street, at the west of their property from Crescent Street, and continuing the same easterly to connect with the portion of Haggart Street, remaining inclosed, the portions of Haggart Street, otherwise known as the original Road Allowance between lots fifteen and sixteen in the twelfth concession of the Township of North Monaghan and of Ware Street, included within such extension of the cemetery, shall be closed and vested in the Little Lake Cemetery Company for the purpose of said cemetery.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $200 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who needs this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

EGAN'S IMPERIAL TRUSS.

Read the following extract from a letter of a well-known citizen of St. Catharines,—hundreds like it:

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 25th, 1885.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, I looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two spring-less trusses made in York State, costing me $40. Nothing would retain my Hernia. * * * I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down. It holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. H. KING.

This new Spiral Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child sure; and 99 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbours' testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. When writing please mention this paper. Address,

She has now reached the very spot where last she saw Craven. Up to this she had been walking with bent head; but now, lifting her eyes, she looks around her. As her glance slowly travels from tree to tree, her sadness increases. Now she is looking wistfully at the little babbling brook in the distance, and now at the mossy hillock beyond, and now—

Who is that coming toward her? Her heart stops beating for a moment, and then throbs frantically. It is Craven, looking sad and careworn and full of dejection. As he sees her, he checks himself for an instant, and then comes resolutely onward. Flinging away the cigar he has been smoking, he stops just before Cecil. He does not offer to shake hands with her, but stands regarding her fixedly.

"You!" he says at length. "What has brought you here?"

"I don't know; I wanted to come here—I—" She feels a little choking sensation in her throat, and stops, unable to proceed.

"I didn't mean to come back again so soon," says Craven, who has never once removed his eyes from her face, while she, on the contrary, has not had the courage to lift hers to his.

"I thought you meant never to come back," she answers in a low, husky tone.

"So I did—but"—bitterly—"you see I could not help myself; you ought to be proud of that, ought you not?"

"Oh, do not speak to me in that tone!" she entreats, at last letting her eyes meet his, and he can see the heavy tears lurking in their soft depths.

"How would you have me speak to you?" he asks, reproachfully, but not so coldly as a moment since. "When last we met you scorned my advances, and told me that you hoped never to see me again; and that, too, at a time when I was consumed with a desire to tell you how I loved you—how that every thought of my heart was yours."

"Ah, if you could only understand," she murmurs desperately.

"Understand what?"—eagerly. "Cecil—speak to me, tell me what you mean."

"Major Jervis said you were going to be married to your cousin, Lady Maud," says Cecil, in a stifled tone.

"The old scoundrel," he mutters. "Was that why you behaved so cruelly to me on that wretched afternoon?" he asks presently, when his wrath has somewhat subsided.

"Yes"—shyly.

"And—and now you know the whole truth—do you love me, Cecil?"

"I do" still more shyly.

"My dearest heart!" murmurs Craven; and then somehow she finds herself in his arms with her head against his breast, and knows that she is utterly and entirely happy.

"What misery I have endured since we parted!" says Craven, after a little while. "It is quite a year ago now; isn't it?"

"A year! A week," she corrects, lifting her brows.

"Oh, nonsense! It might be a century at least," he says. "Well, you shall never know what unhappiness means again, if I can help it," he adds, tenderly.

Then they wend their way slowly homewards. In the hall they meet Mrs. Rivers, who regards them, naturally enough, with astonishment; and they have hardly explained matters satisfactorily to her when Ronnie and Errington join them, when it has all to be said over again on both sides.

Whilst they are in the very midst of their double congratulations, one of the servants, coming into the little morning-room where they have seated themselves, tells them that Major Jervis is in the drawing-room.

"I'll go to him," says Ronnie, rising; "you are too nervous to-day, mamma, and Cecil's eyes are pink—she has evidently been enjoying herself excessively with Duke."

With this, and a little laugh, she rustles out of the room and into the next by a folding door, which divides the two rooms from each other. There she finds the Major.

When he has gone through the ordinary questions about her own and her mother's and sister's health, he says, somewhat jerkily—

"Seen our friend Craven lately?"

"Yes, to-day. But he is not so interesting, I think, as he used to be."

"Ha! How is that?" asks the Major, in a delighted tone.

"Well, he is engaged, you see," answered Ronnie, as it reluctantly, "and young men engaged are young men lost, so far as their being entertaining goes. You know you gave us a hint about his being bent on getting married without delay when last you were down. We have discovered that your surmise was correct."

"Eh—eh?" he says, fidgeting anxiously in his chair. "But I was wrong then. I alluded to his cousin, Lady Maud; but she has married McGregor since that. May I ask whom Rumor has given him to now?"

"Well, to Cecil, I believe!" returns Ronnie, with provoking unconcern.

This is a death-blow. The Major turns pale, and blows his nose violently to cover his chagrin.

"Ah, Rumor is a worthless jade!" he says, with a miserable attempt at disbelief in her news. "As a rule, she tells more lies than truth."

"This time she has varied it," returns Ronnie, "by telling more truth than lies. My sister and Mr. Craven have quite made up their minds and are engaged to each other."

"I don't believe it!" cries the Major, rising to his feet.

At this instant the folding doors are flung open, and Craven, appearing on the scene most unexpectedly, enters, leading Cecil by the hand. He draws her gently forward, until they both stand before the discomfited Major.

"Major Jervis won't believe you are going to be married," says Ronnie, with a little laugh.

"Oh, yes, I am! Am I not, Cecil?" asks Duke, glancing down lovingly at his betrothed, who laughs a little too and blushes deeply.

"You will come to their wedding, won't you, Major?" asks Ronnie, mischievously.

The Major, though overpowered by numbers, still lets his evil humor have full sway.

"With pleasure," he replies, with an ill grace. And then, maliciously, "Only sorry I can't come to yours too, Miss Ronnie."

"Don't be sorry another instant, Major," says Lord Errington, pleasantly; he has come up to them unnoticed by Jervis. "Ronnie and I will be only too glad if you will promise to dance at our wedding also. It will be quite simple, you know, as we all intend to be married on the same day from the same house."

"Very charming arrangement, I'm sure!" returns the defeated Major. "It would be quite superfluous to offer my congratulations. You all know exactly how I feel toward you."

He smiles grimly as he says this.

"Yes, we all know that," rejoins Errington, with emphasis.

"Dear me!" says the Major, pulling out his watch. "It grows very late. I shall miss the up-train if I don't make haste. Good-bye, good-bye!"

"Stay and sleep at the Court to-night," says Craven, hospitably, if a trifle coldly.

"No, thank you—no. I am bound to be in town to-night."

"Why, where are you going in such hot haste?" asks Craven, curiously.

"I'm—I'm going abroad!" declares the Major, desperately; after which he shuffles out of the room, and is lost to sight for many a day.

"Poor Major!" says Cecil. "How disconcerted he looked! I [illegible] he deserved anything bad, b[illegible] couldn't help feeling sorry for h[illegible]"

"He is unworthy of [illegible]ity," answers Craven, drawing her away from the others into the deep embrasure of the window. "Did he not very nearly take you from me?"

"Would that have been such a terrible thing?" she asks, with an upward glance, and a very pardonable touch of coquetry.

"Cecil, what a question!" he returns, reproachfully.

"I think you put it wrongly," says Cissy, softly. "I think he meant to take you from me."

"Would that have been such a terrible thing?" he asks, in his turn, with a little smile.

"I don't know. Would it?" she questions, tremulously.

"My love, my life—it would have been death," says Craven, with passionate earnestness. Turning to her, he takes her into his arms and holds her close clasped against his heart, where indeed her proper home most surely is.

[THE END.]

A Truculent Teacher.

VIENNA, Feb. 25.—At Mezo-Tur, Hungary, yesterday, a Protestant school teacher murdered his wife and three children, and then committed suicide.

A Priest Beatified.

ROME, Feb. 25.—The Pope has promulgated a decree beatifying Father Hofbauer, a priest who died in Vienna in 1820 at the age of 70 years. The action has long been urged by the Austrian Emperor on the ground that Father Hofbauer wrought many miracles.

A New Lake Formed.

BERLIN, Feb. 25.—At Zoschen, a village in Saxony, to-day, a piece of land, 20 acres in area, on which there were several houses, suddenly subsided, leaving a large lake. Three men were drowned. Most of the dwellers in the houses were absent at the time.

Looking After Boycotters.

DUBLIN, Feb. 25.—The Loyal Patriotic Union has issued a circular inviting interested parties to furnish authentic particulars of instances of boycotting and outrage in general.

C. P. R. Competition.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 25.—Officials of the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway are silent on the Chicago rumor that on the fifteenth of June through trains from St. Paul over the Canadian Pacific Railway will be run to Fort Moody to compete with the Northern Pacific. The officials of the other road credit the rumor and state that negotiation have been carried on for some time between the two roads to harmonize the interests in the North-Western traffic.

Weather Wisdom.

Nearly every day somebody unearths an "old rhyme of a meteorological character" such as, "If February gives much snow, a fine summer it doth foreshow;" or, "If March is full of wind and rain, the farmer will have a good crop of grain." These "old rhymes" are now manufactured in every enterprising newspaper office, and they are verified quite as often as the "old rhymes" made a century ago. Here's one, for instance, that may be depended upon:—"If in June, July and August no rain there be, a very dry summer you'll surely see."

The Amyot Affair.

QUEBEC, Feb. 25.—Some three hundred officers and men of the 9th battalion turned out last night in plain clothes and escorted their commander, Col. Amyot, M.P., to the railway station on his way to Ottawa as their protest against what they consider his malicious and unwarranted persecution by Government organs for his revolt against the Government in his political capacity. There was a considerable increase of the crowd at the station, where Col. Amyot thanked his escort and his friends for their sympathy and delivered a very excited and defiant speech in his own defence and against the Ministers and their chief organizer here, Mr. Tarte, which was received with enthusiastic cheers. Lieut.-Col. Roy, Mr. L. P. Pelletier and others also addressed the gathering, which separated quietly with cheers for Col. Amyot as the train moved off. The incident seems not only to have widened the breach between the Ottawa authorities and the battalion, but to have intensified the virulence of the organs opposed to Col. Amyot.

The Young Peoples' Literary and Musical Association of the Baptist Church will give a social and entertainment in the Baptist Church this evening. An invitation is extended to all. This society's entertainments are always meritorious and deserving of patronage.

Religious Tract Society Meeting.

The executive committee of the local Religious Tract Society met in the Y. M. C. A. rooms last night. The committee decided to hold the annual meeting of the society on Thursday, March 4th. The officers for the coming year were nominated and will be elected at the annual meeting.

Died of His Injuries.

Mr. Owen McCarthy, who was injured some weeks since by his horse running into a train on the Grand Junction, died at his home, Lot 15, in the 4th Concession of Otonabee, yesterday afternoon, from the injuries then sustained. The deceased gentleman was aged 47 years. The funeral will take place to-morrow at eight o'clock, a.m., from the family residence, and proceed to the Roman Catholic Cemetery in Peterborough.

Another Runaway.

As the Salvation Army were parading last night, and as they were turning the corner of George and Hunter streets, the noise they made frightened a horse which ran away, throwing the occupants, two gentlemen, out on the street. One of them pluckily held on to the reins and managed to hold the horse until it ran into a hack. Happily there was no damage done. When the police protect the army in their barracks, why not protect the public when the army are on the skirmish.

Following a Good Example.

Mr. J. S. Herring, of John Herring & Son, of the Napanee Agricultural Works, and Mr. Robt. Clark, long connected with the practical departments, were in town yesterday and to-day, visiting Mr. Peter Hamilton's Agricultural Works. The Napanee works, impressed with the excellence of Hamilton's Twine Binder and the flattering reception the farmers of this district have given it, have arranged to manufacture it this season, and these gentlemen are here to take personal observations and secure "pointers" from Mr. Hamilton's experience in the manufacture of these deservedly popular machines. They return home this evening.

Wind and Weather.

As the sun sunk to sleep in the west last night the north wind sprang off its roost at north pole and rushed over the land blowing and bellowing, cooling and congealing everything it came in contact with. The slushy streets were soon frozen into rough rinks and by the time the Salvation Army closed barracks the ordinary pedestrian found it safer to walk in the middle of the street than on the sidewalks. This morning ashes were used on the sidewalks to assist locomotion, but over an anon an over confident ped. might be seen to slip and caper like a jumping jack until he regained his equilibrium, only to go it again when least expecting. The curlers were delighted and didn't care a cent, how many in and out turns they were obliged to take before they reached their places of business, so long as the ice was in good trim for the match with the Granites. The weather was probably ordered by Mr. Carpmeal, of the Toronto weather works, alias Observatory, who will play first stone in one of the Granite rinks.

Band at the Rink.

The Fire Brigade Band will be at the Charlotte street rink to-night, and will enliven the proceedings with select music.

Order in the Court.

The police court was encroached upon this morning by an industrious individual who serenely sawed wood at one end of the room, as if he sawed by the cord and his contract was about to expire. He finished about ten minutes after ten, when the court was opened.

At Home at St. John's Church.

The "At Home" at the St. John's Church Rectory yesterday evening in aid of the organ fund of St. John's Church, was largely attended and a very enjoyable evening was spent. Over $18 was added to the fund. A choice programme of vocal and instrumental music, recitations, etc., was provided, supplemented by refreshments.

Police Court.

Mayor Stevenson occupied the bench at police court this morning, in the absence of P. M. Dumble. A batch of four cases was was presented for adjudication, viz.:—Two cases Pidgeon vs. Legros, for carrying on business on Sunday, Pigeon vs. Wamsley, for breach of liquor act, Leary vs. Darcey, breach of liquor act. His Worship quickly disposed of all the cases by enlarging them until Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

A Novel Case of Trespass.

Robinson's Island is an islet lying in the river Otonabee, a short distance below the locks, and belonging to the Indian Department of the Dominion Government. It is not very heavily wooded, but it is alleged that one, John Whittington, of North Monaghan, cut thereon this winter some twenty or twenty-five cords of wood and removed it to his premises. Acting under the directions of Mr. R. C. Strickland, Indian Agent, Mr. Geo. Cochrane, of Lakefield, has placed the forbidden fuel under seizure. It is not known what course will be further followed in the matter, pending instructions from the Indian Department at Ottawa, as this is the first offence and seizure of the kind that ever occurred in this district. In any case it is probable that Mr. Whittington will secure what he was looking after. If the wood from Robinson's Island doesn't make it hot for him, Indian Agent Strickland will, at least, try to do so.

A Ruinous Runaway.

Six Horses Catch the Contagion and Cause a Lively Scene on George Street, Regardless of Cost.

A little after eleven o'clock this forenoon one of the liveliest scenes that has ever graced George Street was presented to a large number of spectators. Harry Drake's team was painting the street red and kept up a running scene like a panorama, introducing new characters as often as possible, by drawing three other rigs into the runaway business. Mr. Drake left his horses in Lockhart's & Chowen's carriage building yard, in charge of a person, while he went up-stairs in the shop. The party who was in charge neglected his duty, and the horses probably thinking it was train time made a start for the station. In leaving the yard the cab was overturned and the horses went down Water and up Hunter Streets at a smart canter with the cab on its side. Several fruitless attempts were made to stop the them which only resulted in turning the wild steeds up Chambers Street. They trotted up this street and turned east on Brock until they reached George, where they again turned, going close to the west sidewalk at an easy trot. In front of Smart's music store they tried to pass between a Mr. Sidgwicks team and the sidewalk with the result of colliding with the sleigh and starting Mr. Sedgwick's team at a 2.40 rate, down George Street, hauling a heavy wood sleigh after them. Drake's team at this point straddled a tie post breaking away from the vehicle and without stopping for a moment continued their course at a wild speed down street. As the two teams neared Mr. Adam Hall's horse, it caught the contagion and joined in the race. Mr. Sedgwick's team collided with the telegraph pole in front of Taylor & McDonald's, breaking away from the sleigh and continuing their mad gallop straight for McClelland's second window on Hunter street. Happily there was another telegraph pole in front of this window, which the horses straddled, with such force that they were swung around it, coming to a full stop. The other horses continued down George street, as if bent on election. Mr. Hall's horse took the sidewalk at Kelly's corner, snapping a tie-post off short, but seeing the big cod with its mouth open, in front of Rush's store, dodged off into the road and did not stop until it had reached the C.P.R. station. Drake's team defied all attempts to stop them until they trotted into the G.T.R station stand, where they submitted to the reins. A horse attached to a butcher's cart also caught the epizootic and started to deliver meat on its own book. It was caught and brought back after a short run. The street was well lined with pedestrians, and for a time danger and excitement had full away. It was not safe to hide behind a telegraph pole and there was not much chance of a choice of position. After the excitement had abated and the horses gathered together, it was found that no person nor horse was hurt. Drake's cab was pretty well demolished. Mr. Sedgwick's whiffletrees were broken and his harness strained. The butcher cart escaped uninjured. Mr. Drake's loss will be considerable. It was a happy surprise to all that more damage was not done. All is now quiet on George street, with the exception that the affair is all the gossip and that everybody relates in glowing colors the part they took in the drama.

Our New Story.

On Monday next we shall begin the publication of a charming new story, "A Passive Crime," by the "Duchess." All who have read any of her delightful stories will know what treat is in store for them.

Prompt Payment.

The widow and the orphan can appreciate the benefit of life insurance, especially when the policy is issued by a company like the North American Life, which within two weeks from the time the policy became payable, settled the claim of Mrs. J. W. Alford. Mr. Andrew Wilson, local representative of company, handed her a cheque for the amount of the policy on the life of her late husband.

Curling.

Six rinks of the Toronto Granites arrived in town to-day on the noon train. They were met at the station by the local curlers and escorted to the rink, where Mr. R. N. Roddy, of the C.P.R. hotel, served up a sumptuous dinner in proper style in the refreshment room of the rink. At about two o'clock the six rinks commenced play, three rinks occupying the skating ice. The ice was in fine condition and a lively game was being played at the time of writing.

Lock Works Display.

The goods to be exhibited by the Peterborough Lock Works Company at the Colonial and Indian Exhibition was on display at the works this afternoon. The display consisted of about a dozen cases of goods, including seventy-six different styles of locks, sixteen varieties of knobs, door bells, window sash lifts, etc. The stores lock, sliding door lock, knobs and door bells were beautiful in design and finish and were much admired by the number who visited the works. The exposed parts of the locks are shown in several different and artistic finishes, viz: all bright nickel and brass, statue bronze bronze with dark background and burnished raised filigree design. Mortised locks will be shown from 3 to 5 inch, with iron, brass and bronze fronts. The gong door bells shown were particularly admired. Mr. A. Brooks, manager, very kindly explained the different pieces and gave all necessary information to enquirers. The goods will be screwed to cloth-covered cases, and will be shipped in an ordinary iron sample trunk. It is probable that no exhibit of any colony or country will excel that of the Peterborough Lock Works, when excellence of workmanship, beauty of design and finish are taken into consideration.

Norwood Trotting Races.

The First Meeting of the Norwood Trotting Association—Speedy and Successful Races.

The first meeting of the Norwood Trotting Association was held at Norwood Tuesday and Wednesday last, and was a decided success. The weather was favorable and the number of spectators very large. Messrs. S. Smith, J. Murphy and Underwood acted as judges during the first day. Notwithstanding the heaviness of the track, some good records were made, notably those of McGregor's "Maud S." in the green trot, making a mile in 2.50, and Mr. Lawson's "Bessie K." in the three minute trot.

FIRST DAY.

The first race called was the green trot, won by McGregor's "Maud S;" "Little Rock" owned by W. Morgan, of Peterborough, second, and J. Finlay's "Norwood Lady" third.

The three minute race, open to horses owned in the counties of Peterborough, Hastings, Victoria, Northumberland and Durham, was won by Lawson's "Bessie K." of Brighton, she in all heats making the mile in considerably less than three minutes. John Simpson's "Lapidist Chief," of Bobcaygeon, took second place; Mr. Morgan's "Maud S.," Peterborough, took third.

SECOND DAY.

The trot open to the Province, which was the first called on Wednesday, was the most closely contested of the series. The judge's stand was occupied by Messrs. J. E. McIntyre and H. Calcutt, Peterborough; S. Smith, Hastings; and J. Baskin and J. Murphy, of Norwood. The decisions of these gentlemen gave the utmost satisfaction, not a word of complaint being heard.

There were five entries in this race. "Mayflower," owned by W. McCrae, of Beaverton, won first money—$70; "Annie D.," Toronto, second—$25, and Santford's "Laura Cook," of Brighton, third—$15.

The farmers' race, open to all horses owned in Peterborough and Northumberland, was won by "Little Tom," owned by Mr. Elliott, of Smith; Elmhirst's "Gray Horse" taking second, and Walters' "Irish Boy" third.

The committee of management of the Norwood Trotting Association are to be congratulated on the successful issue of their first meet.

We select the above from the report of the Norwood Register.

The Redpath Concert Company.

The Halifax (N.S.) Herald says:—"The company throughout is one of the best that has ever visited this city, not a member of it but is first-class. Music lovers who desire an evening of thorough enjoyment will find it by attending the second performance at the Academy this evening." This company will appear under the auspices of Otonabee Lodge of Oddfellows, in Bradburn's Opera House on Wednesday, March 3rd.

No Rest For the Wicked.

Like Noah's dove—in experience if not in character—the soiled doves, "Flossie" and "Jessie" and "Pearl" and "Ernestine," (or something like that—for particulars see police register) who were "shooed" out of their columbary on George street recently, by the authorities, find no rest for the soles of their erring feet. They were hunted out of Belleville, whence they went from town, and sought refuge in Napanee. On Wednesday, the police of that place raided their abode, and if Justice James, the Iron Duke, sits in judgment on them they will find rest in the county jail.

Smoker's!

Beware of cigars artificially flavored for the purpose of hiding the poor quality of tobacco used in flavored cigars. Insist upon having the old reliable brands—"CABLE" and "EL PADRE."

Fluid Lightning is simply a marvellous Rheumatic Remedy. I was for two months a cripple, unable to get out of the house from Sciatica. One bottle gave me instant relief, and placed me on my feet again. I have driven fourteen miles to-day (something I could not possibly have done were it not for Fluid Lightning) for the express purpose of procuring another bottle. So says Wm. Dixon, Gananoque. How Organized Labour Gets its Rights

The coke drawers of Bradford, Pa., have been granted the 10 per cent. increase for which they struck.

At the shoe factory of Crooks & Co., Hopkinton, Mass., the lasters demanded and were given an increase of 10 per cent.

The moulders on strike at the Virginia Stove Works, at Richmond, Va., have been ordered back to work by the Executive Board of the District Assembly.

As a compromise to the demands of moulders for an advance of 10 per cent., the firm of Peck, Stone, & Wilcox, of Cleveland, Ohio, pays 7½ with a promise of 10 per cent. when business warrants.

John Brett, President of the Fourth District of the Miners' and Labourers' Amalgamated Association, Pittsburg, says that unless there is an advance in wages of 10 per cent. very soon 8,000 miners of the Clearfield regions will go on strike.

The firm of Newhall & White, Weymouth, Mass., have granted an increase of 10 per cent. and have also posted a price list up in their factory.

A boot and shoe manufactory of Detroit, which is being boycotted by the K. of L., before the trouble arose turned out some 200 pairs per day. The present out-put is said to be about 24 pairs per day, and they are only running their factoty on three-quarter time.

The State Convention of the Knights of Lobour of the State of Michigan will open at Lansing, in that State, on the 9th of March prox.

The Toronto labour market continues very dull, there being as yet no appreciable sign of improvement.

The sailors of New York are about forming a union.

The cotton mills of the Eastern States are continuing in the direction of increase of wages, generally averaging 10 per cent.

The 400 striking silk weavers at Taunton, Mass., are to be paid off and new help engaged if possible. The strikers have been organized as an Assembly of the Knights of Labour.

The employes of the Linwood Cotton Company at Briggsville, Mass., have struck against a reduction of wages.

The New Heaven, Conn., wire mills have taken back old hands after a "lock-out" of some six months.

The employes of Wm. Bush and & Sons, morocco factory, have been awarded an increase of 20 per cent. in wages by a joint committee of arbitration upon which each party was represented by three members. The award was accepted by both parties.

The International Boundary Question.

OTTAWA, Feb. 25.—Mr. Gordon, M. P., representing one of the British Columbia constituencies, who drew the attention of Parliament last session to the necessity of definitely locating the international boundary line between British Columbia and Alaska, has arrived in the city. He will again bring the matter up this session, as he says that unless some steps are taken at an early date to define the boundary serious complications may, at any moment arise, as pointed out by President Cleveland in his last message.

Polish Estates.

BERLIN, Feb. 25.—The proposal has been made in Galicia to form a society to buy out Polish estates in order to prevent the Government from obtaining them. The Government will probably prohibit such purchases.

"Whipping up Nature."

There is a whipping up of tired nature going on that ought to come under the notice of some society for the prevention of cruelty to animals. The lash is being applied in this way, to take a common instance, in your very house. Your husband did not sleep any last night, thinking of his business entanglements. You prepare him two cups of strong black coffee, which he pours down for breakfast, unable to eat anything with it. No doubt while the stimulus lasts he is carried through an immense amount of work in a savage manner. It passes for pure grit, by the on-lookers. Perhaps it may be; but there is another kind of grit that we like quite as well,—the patient, steady following one's conscience. And your doses of strong tea that enable you to get through the house cleaning, or the fall sewing, is another whip, long and cruel. The society should have its hands on you both instanter. Margaret Sidney, in Good Housekeeping.

THE MARRIAGE RING.

Dr. Talmage Preaches the Sixth Discourse in His Series on Domestic Topics.

A Few Words About Costume and Morals.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Feb. 14.—Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D., preached to-day in the Brooklyn Tabernacle the sixth of his series of sermons on "The Marriage Ring," the subject being, "Costumes and Morals."

The text was from Isaiah iii, 16, 18-23: "Moreover the Lord said: Because the daughters of Zion are haughty and walk with stretched-forth necks and wanton eyes, walking and mincing as they go, and making a tinkling with their feet, in that day the Lord will take away the bravery of their tinkling ornaments about their feet, and their cauls, and their round tires like the moon, the chains, and the bracelets, and the mufflers, the bonnets, and the ornaments of the legs, and the headbands, and the tablets, and the earrings, the rings, and nose-jewels, the changeable suits of apparel, and the mantles, and the wimples, and the crisping pins, the glasses, and the fine linen, and the hoods, and the veils." The following is the sermon in full:

THIS IS A TYRIAN FASHION PLATE.

It puts us 2,500 years back, and sets us down in an ancient city. The procession of men and women is moving up and down the gay streets. It is the height of the fashionable season. The sensible men and women move with so much modesty that they do not attract our attention. But here come the haughty daughters of Jerusalem! They lean forward; they lean very much forward, so far forward as to be unnatural—teetering, wobbling, wriggling, flirting, or, as my text expresses it, "they walk with stretched forth necks, walking and mincing as they go." They have in most astounding style arranged their bonnets and their veils and their entire apparel, and now go through the streets, taking more of the pavement than they are entitled to, sweeping along with skirts that the text describes as "round tires like the moon." See! that is a princess. Look! that is a Damascus sword maker. Look! that is a Syrian merchant. The jingling of the chains and the lashing of the headbands, and the exhibition of universal swagger attract the attention of the prophet Isaiah, and he brings his camera to bear upon the scene and makes a picture for all the ages. But where is that scene? Vanished! Where are those gay streets? Vermin covered population pass through them. Where are the hands and the necks and the foreheads and the shoulders and the feet that sported all that magnificence? Ashes! Ashes!

That we should all be clad is proved by the opening of the first wardrobe in Paradise, with its apparel of dark green. That we should all as far as our means allow us be beautifully and gracefully appareled is proved by the fact that God never made a wave but he gilded it with golden sunbeams, or a tree but he garlanded it with blossoms, or a sky but He studded it with stars, or allowed even the smoke of a furnace to ascend but He columned, and turreted, and domed, and scrolled it into outlines of indescribable gracefulness. When I see the apple orchards of the spring and

THE PAGEANTRY OF THE AUTUMNAL FORESTS.

I come to the conclusion that if nature ever does join the church, while she may be a Quaker in the silence of her worship, she never will be a Quaker in the style of her dress. Why the notches of a fern leaf or the stamen of a water lily? Why, when the day departs, does it let the folding doors of heaven stay open so long when it might go in so quickly? One summer morning I saw an army of a million spears, each one adorned with a diamond of the first water—I mean the grass with the dew on it. When the prodigal came home his father not only put a coat on his back, but jewelry on his hand. Christ wore a beard; Paul, the bachelor apostle, not afflicted with any sentimentality, admired the arrangement of a woman's hair when he said in his Epistle, "If a woman have long hair it is a glory unto her." There will be fashion in heaven as on earth, but it will be a different kind of fashion. It will decide the color of the dress and the population of that country, by a beautiful law, will wear white.

This goddess of fashion has become a rival of the Lord of heaven and earth, and it is high time we unlimbered our batteries against this idolatry. When I come to count the victims of fashion I find as many masculine as feminine. Men make as though she were the chief worshiper at this idolatrous shrine, and no doubt some men in the more conspicuous part of the pew have already cast glances at the more retired part of the pew, their look a prophecy of a generous distribution. My sermon shall be as appropriate for one end of the pew as for the other.

Men are as much idolators of fashion as women, but they sacrifice on a different part of the altar. With men the fashion goes to cigars and club houses and yachting parties and wine suppers. In the United States the men chew up and smoke $100,000,000 worth of tobbacco every year. This is their fashion.

But men do not abstain from millinery and elaboration of skirt through any superiority of simplicity. It is only because such appendages would be a blockade to business. What would sashes and trains three and a half yards long do in a stock market? And yet men are the disciples of custom just as much as women. Some of them wear boots so tight that they can hardly walk in the paths of righteousness, and there are men who buy expensive suits of clothes and never pay for them, and who go through the streets in great stripes of color like animated checkerboards. I say these things because I want to in my discourse, and that both sexes in the language of the surrogate's office, "share and share alike."

As God may help me I am going to set forth the evil effects of improper dress or an excessive discipleship of costume. It is a simple truth that you all know, although the pulpit has not yet uttered it, that much of the womanly costume of our time is the cause of the temporal and eternal damnation of a multitude of men. There is a shamelessness among many in what is called high life that calls for vehement protest. The strife with many seems to be how near they can come to the verge of indecency without falling over. The tide of masculine profligacy will never turn back until there is a decided reformation in womanly costume.

UNDER FALSE COLORS.

Mr. Carnegie, the member for West Peterborough, is seeking popularity among the farmers under false pretences. He poses as their friend, notwithstanding that he is doing his best to destroy the only institution maintained at the Government expense in the interests of the farming community, the Agricultural College. The other day in the House he had the audacity to assert that he was elected by farmers and was therefore the representative of this class and entitled to voice their opinions. The fact is Mr. Carnegie was not elected by the farmers of West Peterborough. Of the gross total majority (287) obtained by Mr. Carnegie in the riding, 149 was secured in the town of Peterborough. In the rural districts the late Mr. Campbell's gross majority amounted to 198. Deducting Mr. Carnegie's majority in town from the total of his rural majorities, it will be seen that the farmers rejected him by a majority of 60. In face of these facts, is it anything less than hypocritical dishonesty for the members for West Peterborough to set himself up as a representative of the farmers, who rejected him in March, 1883?

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Hudson Bay Company has received $1,750,000 for services rendered to the Government during the Northwest rebellion. This large haul will be still further augmented, says the Hamilton Times, when the bill for losses by fire and pillage, presented by the company, is adjusted.

The Port Hope Times rejoices that the claims on account of the rebellion, amount to only five million dollars. Does our contemporary wish to make the public believe that that includes the whole cost of suppressing the Dominion Government uprising? It will not by a long way. The country will be well off if it gets clear with ten millions.

The Tory organs are trying to make a great deal of the temporary deficit in the current expenses of Ontario, of $40,000. But they forgot to tell their readers that Sir John is responsibe for this discrepancy between the estimates and expenditure. The legal expenses in connection with upholding the rights of Ontario before the Privy Council amounted to twice the above sum. If Sir John had not sought to rob this province of its rights, the expense would not have been incurred, and the expenditure would have been within the estimates.

The Opposition journals pretend to show great anxiety for the welfare of the municipalities. They complain that the latter do not get a sufficient share of the license fund. Yet they have not a word of condemnation against Mr. Meredith who proposed to lighten their financial burdens of the province by transfering the cost of maintenance of lunatics, now borne by the local government, to the municipalities. And wasn't it Sir John who took the power of preparing honest voters' lists out of the hands of the municipalities at an increased cost to the country of half a million dollars a year? Friends to the municipalities indeed!

The Irish Question.

A Tory Organ's Strong Talk.

The Morning Post, the London Tory organ, has the following remarks on the Irish question:

"Some of the Irish National organs have denounced the ex-secretary for India, Ranting Randy Churchill, as the apostle of civil war. Churchill has simply said what has been said over and over again by every one who has any practical knowledge of the Irish question. That the Irish loyalists, and especially those in Ulster, will never tamely submit to any legislative change which would deprive them of the protection now afforded to them by the supremacy of the British crown, but will make something more than a verbal protest. If there is an apostle of revolution now before the country it is the prime minister, because he aims at effecting by apparently constitutional means results which must inevitably lead to civil war. We have no hesitation in saying that if the majority of the English and Scotch members, through indifference or party motives or anxiety to get rid momentarily of the Irish difficulty, were to hand over the property-holding classes of Ireland to spoliation, the latter would have the sympathy of every civilized state in struggling to defend, if necessary by force, their property and their civil and religious rights,. Term "loyalist" is now widely employed all over the kingdom as the opposite of "Irish Nationalist." This new and growing party have now four weeks' truce between Lord Randolph Churchill and Mr. Parnell and are preparing during that time to vigorously canvas the kingdom at what are to be called "union meetings."

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Fifth Parliament—Third Session.

FRIDAY, FEB. 25th.

After routine, Mr. Hardy introduced a bill for the better regulation of the liquor traffic. The new bill provides for a much more rigid enforcement of the law, and offences against the act will be punished by fines of not less than $50 or more than $100 for the first offence, four months' imprisonment for the second and six months imprisonment for the third offence—both these two latter without the option of a fine. It also gives further power for searching for liquor, and adopts for this purpose the provisions of the Gambling Act in a somewhat modified form. With regard to grocery licenses the partition bewees the two parts of the establishment is to be allowed, but any means of communication of any kind or sort whatever is to be punished by a fine of $20 a day during its continuance. Toronto is to have an inspector-in-chief, and an inspector is also to be appointed for each of the two divisions to act under him. With regard to Sunday selling, if any person other than a member of the household be admitted to the bar it shall be an offence under the law, and the person so admitted shall be punishable for having committed a misdemeanor. A Provincial inspector is to be appointed with power to administer oaths and travel through the Province settling disputes. Finally, the scale of fees set forth in the budget speech and in the resolution of which Mr. Hardy gave notice are to be charged in future.

The House went into committee on bill 52 to amend the act respecting the Agricultural College, which was reported with some amendments.

The House then went into Committee of Supply. The item of $127,850 for legislation was passed. After a long discussion over the employment of a person named Gaspard Pacaud as sessional clerk, the item of $56,506 for the Supreme Court of Judicature, $17,675 for Surrogate judges and local masters, and $296,153 for miscellaneous, criminal and civil justice, were passed, and the House adjourned at 9.35 p.m.

A Successful Remedy.

Dr. Dorenwend's German "Hair Magic" has proved itself to be a first-class remedy for gray, and thin hair. The sale of it is rapidly increasing everywhere. Where the roots of the hair are not altogether destroyed, it will make it come in thick and strong, and restore the gray hair back to its natural colour. For sale by all principal drug stores. J. Tully, agent for Peterborough.

Years of experience and successful trial have proved McGregor & Parke's Carbolic-Cerate the most complete and satisfactory compound for healing Old Sores, Festerings, Ulcers, Cuts, Wounds, Burns, Frost Bites or Felons, and for keeping out the cold and to cleanse or prevent proud flesh, sloughing or decay. Insist on having McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate, sold at 25c. by J. McKee, Druggist. d44-eod-w7-1t

"El Padre" Cigars.

Universally acknowledged to be the finest 10c cigar manufactured. Don't be persuaded to take other brands. No chemicals or artificial flavoring used.

It is not Disputed

That Nerviline, the new pain remedy, is a good article. Some indeed claim that the old fashioned preparations are just as good, but any sufferer can satisfy himself by expending ten cents on a sample bottle of Polson's Nerviline, that nothing sold can equal it for internal, local or external pains. Always speedy in effect, prompt and certain in every cure. H. S. Webber, Orangeville, writes: "My customers speak very highly of Nerviline as a remedy for toothache and neuralgia." All druggists and country dealers sel Nerviline. Try it to-day. d44-6t-w8-1t

Don't be Duped.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brand of cigars, which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pay them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby.

I had for years been a miserable sufferer from Dyspepsia, and tried all known remedies and the best medical skill of my acquaintance, but still grew worse, until unable to eat anything without great suffering, or do any kind of work. I began to think there was no hope for me, and that I must surely die; when, like a drowning man catching at a straw, I determined to give McGregor's Speedy Cure a trial, I at once began to improve so rapidly that in two months I was as well as I had ever been in my life.—Wm. Evers Leamington. Sold by J. McKee, Druggist. Free trial bottles. d44-eod-w7-1t

THE MARRIAGE RING.

It is high time that our good and sensible women make vehement protest against fashionable indecency and, if the women of the household do not realise the deplorable extremes of much of the female costume, that husbands implead their wives on this subject, and that fathers prohibit their daughters. The evil is terrific and overshadowing.

I suppose that the American stage is responsible for much of this. I do not go to theatres, so I must take the evidence of the actors and managers of theaters, such as John Gilbert, A. M. Palmer and Daniel E. Bandmann. They have recently told us that the crime of nudness is blasting the theatre, which by many is considered a school of morals, and indeed superior to the church and a forrunner of the millennium. Mr. Palmer says: "The bulk of the performance on the stage is degrading and pernicious. The managers strive to come just as near the line as possible without flagrantly

BREAKING THE LAW.

There has never been costumes worn on a stage of this city either in a theatre, hall or 'dive' so improper as those that clothe some of the chorus in recent comic opera productions." He says in regard to the female performers: "It is not a question whether they can sing, but just how little they will consent to wear." Mr. Bandmann, who has been twenty-nine years on the stage, and before almost all nationalities, says: "I unhesitatingly state that the taste of the present theatre-going Americans as a body is of a coarse and vulgar nature. The Hindoo would turn with disgust at such exhibitions, which are sought after and applauded on the stage of this country. Our shop windows are full of, and the walls covered with show cards and posters which should be a disgrace to an enlightened country and an insult to the eye of a cultured community." Mr. Gilbert says: "Such exhibition is a disastrous one to the morals of the community. Are these proper pictures to put out for the public to look at, to say nothing of the propriety of females appearing in public dressed like that? It is shameful!"

I must take the testimony of the friends of the theatre and the confirmation which I see on the board fences and in the show windows containing the pictures of the way actresses dress. I suppose that those representations of play-house costume are true, for if they are not true then those highly moral and religious theatres are swindling the public by inducing the people to the theatres by promises of spectacular nudity which they do not fulfil. Now, all this familiarizes the public with such improprieties of costume, and depresses the public conscience as to what is allowable and right.

The parlor and drawing-room are now running a race with the theatre and opera bouffe. They are now nearly neck and neck in the race, the latter a little ahead, but on the others, and the probability is they will soon be even and pass the stand so nearly at the same time that one half of Pandemonium will clap its hands because opera bouffe has beaten, and the other half because the drawing-room has beaten. Let printing press and platform and pulpit hurl red hot anathema at the boldness of much of womanly attire. I charge Christian women neither by style or dress nor adjustment of apparel to become administrative of evil. Show me the fashion-plates of any age between this and the time of Louis XVI. of France and Henry VIII. of England, and I will tell you the type of morals or immorals of that age or that year. No exception to it. Modest apparel means a righteous people. Immodest apparel always means a contaminated and depraved society.

It is not only such boldness that is to be remembered, but extravagance of costume. This latter is the cause of fraud unlimited and ghastly. I declare here before God and this people that the effort to keep up expensive establishments in this country is sending more business men to temporal perdition than all the other causes combined. Our Washington politicians may theorize until the expiration of their term of office as to the best way of improving our momentary condition in this country. It will be of no use, and things will be no better until we learn to put on our heads and backs and feet and hands

NO MORE THAN WE CAN PAY FOR.

There are clerks in stores and banks on limited salaries who, in the vain attempt to keep the wardrobe of their family as showy as other folks' wardrobes, are dying of muffs and diamonds and camel's hair shawls and high hats, and they have nothing left except what they give to cigars and wine suppers, and they die before their time, and they will expect us ministers to preach about them as though they were the victims of early piety; and after a high-class funeral with silver handles at the side of their coffin of extraordinary brightness, it will be found out that the undertaker is cheated out of his legitimate expenses! Do not send to me to preach the funeral sermon of a man who dies like that. I will blurt out the whole truth and tell that he was strangled to death by his wife's ribbons! The country is dressed to death. You are not surprised to find that the putting up of one public building in New York cost millions of dollars more than it ought to have cost, when you find that the man who gave out the contract paid more than five thousand dollars for his daughter's wedding dress. Cashmeres of $1,000 each are not rare on Broadway. It is estimated that there are eight thousand women in these two cities who have expended on their personal array, $2,000 a year.

What are the men to do in order to keep up such home wardrobe? Steal—that is the only respectable thing they can do! During the last fifteen years there have been innumerable fine business men shipwrecked on the wardrobe. The temptation comes in this way: A man thinks more of his family than all the world outside, and if they spend the evening in describing to him the superior wardrobe of the family across the street that they cannot bear the sight of, the man is thrown on his gallantry and his pride of family, and without translating his feelings he goes into extortion and issuing false stock and skillful penmanship in writing somebody else's name at the foot of a promissory note, and they all go down together—the husband to prison, the wife to the sewing-machine, the children to be taken care of by those who were called poor relations. Oh, for some new Shakespeare to arise and write the tragedy of human clothes!

INTO PLAIN LANGUAGE,

Act the first of the tragedy—A plain but beautiful home. Enter simplicity of manner and behavior. Enter as much happiness as is ever found in one home.

Act the second—Discontent with the humble home. Enter envy. Enter jealousy. Enter desire of display.

Act the third—Enlargement of expenses. Enter all the queenly dress-makers. Enter the French milliners.

Act the fourth—The tip-top of society. Enter princes and princesses of New York life. Enter magnificent plate and equipage. Enter everything splendid.

Act the fifth and last, winding up the scene—Enter the assignee. Enter the sheriff. Enter the creditors. Enter humiliation. Enter the wrath of God. Enter the contempt of society. Enter death. Now let the silk curtain drop on the stage. The farce is ended and the lights are out.

Will you forgive me if I say in tersest shape possible that some of the men in this country have to forge and perjure and swindle to pay for their wive's dresses? I will say it whether you will forgive me or not.

Again, extravagant costume is the foe of all Christian alms giving. Men and women put so much in personal display that they often have nothing for God and the cause of suffering humanity. A Christian man cracking his Palais royal gloves across the back by to hide the one cent he puts into the poor box! A Christian woman, at the story of the Hottentots, crying copious tears into a twenty-five dollar handkerchief, and then giving a two-cent piece to the collection, thrusting it down under the bills so people will not know but it was a ten dollar gold piece! One hundred dollars for incense to fashion—two cents for God. God gives us ninety cents out of every dollar. The other ten cents, by command of his Bible, belongs to him. Is not God liberal according to his tithing system laid down in the Old Testament—is not God liberal in giving us ninety cents out of a dollar when he takes but ten? We do not like that. We want to have ninety-nine cents for ourselves and one for God.

Again, extravagant costume is distracting to public worship. You know very well there are a good many people who go to church just as they go to races, to see who will come out first. Men and women with souls to be saved passing the hour wondering where that man got his cravat, or what store that woman patronizes. In many of our churches the preliminary exercises are taken up with the discussion of wardrobes.

IT IS PITIABLE.

Is it not wonderful that the Lord does not strike the meeting houses with lightning? What distraction of public worship. Dying men and women, whose bodies are soon to be turned into dust, yet before three worlds strutting like peacocks. People sitting down in a pew or taking up a hymn book, all absorbed at the same time in personal array, to sing;

"Rise, my soul, and stretch thy wings,
Thy better portion trace;
Rise from transitory things,
Toward Heaven, thy native place.

I adopt the Episcopalian prayer and say: "Good Lord deliver us!"

Yet, my friends, I have given you only the milder phrase of this evil. It shuts a great multitude out of heaven. The first peal of thunder that shook Sinai declared: "Thou shalt have no other gods before me," and you will have to choose between the goddess of fashion and the Christian God. There are and they are all easy seats, but not one seat for the devotees of costumes. Heaven is for meek and quiet spirits. Heaven is for those who think more of their souls than of their bodies. Why, if you, with your idolatry of costume, should somehow get into heaven, you would be for putting a French roof on the "house of many mansions," and you would be for introducing the patterns of Butterick's Quarterly Delineator.

I have seen men and women of excessive costume die, and I never saw one of them die well. The trappings off, there they lay on the tumbled pillow, and there were just two things that bothered—a wasted life and a coming eternity. I could not pacify them, for their body, mind, and soul had been exhausted in the worship of costume, and they could not appreciate the gospel. When I knelt by their bedside they were and saying, "Oh, God! Oh, God!" Their garments hung up in the wardrobe, never again to be seen by them. Without any exception, so far as my memory serves me, they died without hope and went into eternity unprepared. The two most ghastly deathbeds on earth are the one where a man dies of delirium tremens, and the other where a woman dies after having sacrificed all her faculties of body, mind, and soul, in the worship of costume.

My friends, we must appear in judgment to answer for what we have worn on our bodies, as well as for what repentance we have exercised with our souls. On that day I see coming in Beau Brummel of the last century, without his cloak, like which all England got a cloak, and without his cane, like which all England got a cane; without his snuffbox, like which all England got a snuffbox—he, the fop of the ages, particular about everything but his morals; and Aaron Burr, without the letters that down to old age he showed in pride, to prove his early wicked gallantries; and Absalom, without his hair; and Marchioness Pompadour, without her titles; and Mrs. Arnold, the belle of Wall street, when that was the center of fashion, without her flipperies of vesture.

And in great haggardness they shall go away into eternal expatriation; while among the queens of heavenly society will be found Vashti who wore the modest veil before the palatial bacchanalians; and Hannah, who annualy made a little coat for Samuel at the temple; and Grandmother Lois, the ancestress of Timothy, who imitated her virtue; and Mary, who gave Jesus Christ to the world; and many of you, the wives and mothers and sisters and daughters of the present Christian church, who, through great tribulation, are entering into the kingdom of God. Christ announced who would make up the royal family of heaven, when he said: "Whosoever doeth the will of God, the same is my brother, my sister, my mother."

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, on its MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder. It might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $300 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through subagents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

Talent in Request.

Rev. I. Tovell, pastor of the George Street Methodist church has been selected to preach the anniversary sermons of the John Street Methodist church, Napanee, to-morrow.

Market Items.

The market this morning was about the average. Beef, hay and wood were offered in abundance and sold slowly at unchanged figures. Butter and eggs were bought up quickly at the same prices as Wednesday. Quotations were:—Butter, in prints, 20c.; eggs, 20c.; chickens, 50c. to 75c. per pair; turkeys, $1.00 to $1.50; geese, 60c. to 70c.; beef, per cwt. $3 to $6; pork, per cwt $5.50 to $6.50; per quarter, 7c. to 9c. per lb. apples, per bag, 80c. to 90c.; wood, hard, per cord, $3.00 to $3.75; soft, $2 to $3; hay $12 to $14 per ton.

Children's Concert.

Another children's concert was given in the Opera House last night, under the management of the Saved Army. Mr. Geo. B. Sproule filled the chair creditably. The children of the army gave a number of lively choruses in excellent style. Capt. Munt, Capt. Stubbs and Mr. Joseph McClelland also assisted in entertaining the large audience which assembled. Miss Sanders' recitations were of a high order and received a merited applause. Miss Mason, of Pembroke, at one time an officer at Peterborough, delighted the audience with her singing. Capt. Holman, Capt. Conacher, and the other officers of the army also assisted in the entertainment.

Police Court.

Wm. McCullough was brought before Police Magistrate Dumble this morning, charged with assaulting W. Segsworth, at the Salvation Army barracks on February 21st. McCullough admitted the charge. Segsworth was sworn and stated that on the night in question he had spoken to McCullough who was spitting on the floor, telling him it was against rules, when McCullough struck him.

The magistrate said as the offence had taken place in a place of worship, it was of a more serious nature than common assault, and fined McCullough $5 or 15 days.

A charge for disturbing a place of worship was also made against McCullough, but as no person appeared for the prosecution, it was dismissed.

Another Boy Runaway.

Yesterday evening about five o'clock Mr. W. J. Mason's horse breathed in the germs of the runnaway epizootic and bolted, when being driven down London street. The boy who was driving the animal held on hard, until the horse struck its heels against the sleigh, when it kicked the dashboard out, taking the boy's purchase away, and fired him out at a soft spot in a snow bank. It then continued down London street to Harvey street and returned to George delivering goods promiscuously along the route. When near George street the sleigh collided with a tree box with the result of freeing the horse and smashing the sleigh badly. The horse then started down George street for Mr. Mason's shop, in company with the harness and shafts, going at a lively gait. Being frightened by persons along the road who tried to interfere, the horse continued down street until past Hunter street, where a number of persons attempted to stop it, with the result of driving it into the sidewalk near Mr. R. B. McKee's shop. It slipped on the icy walk, and would have gone through McKee's plate glass window had it not been for the iron bar protecting it. The now thoroughly frightened steed continued to scramble down the sidewalk until almost past Mr. John Cameron's, where it missed its footing altogether and took a tumble. Mr. P. Grady immediately seized the bridle and when the animal regained its feet, succeeded in controlling its movement. The boy driver and horse escaped uninjured but the sleigh and the groceries were badly wrecked. Several accidents were narrowly averted by the good dodging qualities of the horse. One little girl who stood near Mr. Mason's when the horse turned in at the shop escaped being run over by a hair's breadth.

Our Girls Good Samaritan.

A day of desolation has come. The town teamster was abroad this morning sowing our streets with salt, after having been industriously plowing them for the past month. His worship foreseeing the danger arising from the slippery condition of the walks, instructed Terrapin to make a liberal application of salt in the interest of the integrity of the osseous anatomy of his constituents.

An Eminent Elocutionist.

We have the pleasure of announcing to the public of Peterboro', that the eminent Scotch elocutionist, Prof. Vallance, F. S. Sc., London, England, approved master of Glasgow University, will appear in humorous, pathetic, and dramatic recitals in Peterborough, on Monday March 8th. This gentlemen met with great success in Toronto, at the entertainment given under the patronage of His Honor, Lieutenant-Governor Robinson. Prof. Vallance's "Evening with Scottish Authors," comprises a most entertaining programme. He makes his first visit to Canada, heralded by the most flattering encomiums of the British press.

A Sad Affliction.

The many friends of the Rev. Wm. Jolliffe, who some years ago was pastor of the Bible Christian church in town, and now of Belleville, will regret to hear of the sad affliction which has fallen upon him recenely. Two weeks ago his grand-son was accidentally killed at Ottawa, and this week his second son L. G. Jolliffe, of London, an exemplary and universally respected young man, died on Monday last, after a short illness. The deceased was well and favorably know in town. Mr. Jolliffe's many warm friends in town will sympathize with him and his family in their sad bereavement.

Printers' Presentation.

Mr. John Crowe, who for the past twelve years has been connected with the EXAMINER office, rising from the position of office boy to that of artistic jobber, during which time he has discharged his duties faithfully and efficiently, left for Ottawa this morning. Yesterday evening he was presented by the staff with the following complimentary address and a beautiful gold ring:—

Mr. John Crowe.

DEAR SIR,—We, your employer, and fellow employees of the EXAMINER office learn with regret that you are about to sever your connection with the office, after an association of so many years, during which time you have discharged your duties in an efficient manner, with credit to yourself and to the advantage and in the interests of the establishment. If your zeal and industry as a skillful and ready artizan in the art preservative have won the appreciation of your employer, no less has your good fellowship, good nature and obliging disposition won the respect and esteem of your fellow workmen, who will always look back upon their association with you as a pleasant memory. In presenting you with this ring, we hope you will accept it, remembrancer of the many happy and busy days we have spent together and as a token of our esteem and good wishes, including the wish that you may always have a full case of health and that the hook of life may bristle with "fat takes."

Mr. Chrow replied, thanking the staff for their present and the kind expressions and and good wishes contained in the address. Mr. Chrow's abilities as a first-rate printer will insue him a situation wherever he may go.

Peterborough Curlers' Victory.

The local curlers have again won glory on the ice by defeating yesterday their distinguished opponents of the Toronto Granite Club by 17 shots, after a hard battle. The ice was in good condition and the curlers were in good trim. The playing was exceedingly good and some brilliant shots were made on both sides. The following are the rinks and scores:—

Majority for Peterborough, 17 shots.

After the match was over, the local curlers again entertained their visitors at lunch, in the lunch rooms of the rink. Speechifying was indulged in, in which the compliments of the game were exchanged. The Granites complimented the local curlers on their fine rink, excellent curlers and jolly good fellowship. They say that it is no trouble to get a car load of curlers to go to Peterborough, as they always have a good time. The local club organized a driving party and shewed the Granites around town. The Granites left on the 6.20 train well pleased with their day's sport, and taking their defeat as well as if fortune had been with them. The local curlers speak very highly of their opponents with good reason. It is very creditable to Peterborough that they can man, out of their small club in comparison with the Granites, six rinks capable of upholding the fame of the club.

Y. M. C. A. News.

Reports of the recent convention at Hamilton will be given by the delegates who attended, at the young men's meeting at 4 o'clock on Sunday afternoon. All young men will be welcome. Mr. T. S. Cole, travelling secretary, who expected to be in Peterborough to-day, has been summoned to Hamilton. He will come here shortly. Strangers will receive a cordial welcome at the young men's meeting to-night at eight o'clock.

The Revival in George Street Church.

Another week of revival meetings have been held with satisfactory results. Since the commencement of the series over fifty adults have presented themselves as seekers of Christ. Some twenty more persons rose to their feet on Thursday evening to say they were eager to become followers of the Saviour. Last evening was a "Praise Service" of much power. Many of the Sunday School scholars and all the teachers and officers have given evidence of being under the wholesome influence of the word. It is the intention to continue these services one more week. The Rev. Arthur Browning will occupy the pulpit to-morrow, at both the morning and evening service, in the absence of the pastor who goes to Napanee to preach the S. S. anniversary services. Mr. Tovell will be home to take charge of the meeting on Monday night.

Personal.

Mr. Joseph McClelland, secretary-treasurer at Gospel Army headquarters, Toronto, arrived yesterday to spend Sunday in town.

Mr. J. F. Anderson, of Apsley, passed through town to-day, on his way to the Canada Business College, of Hamilton. He gave the EXAMINER office a call.

Mr. Fred. Davidson, eldest son of Mr. Hugh Davidson of Smith, has very creditably passed the first examination at the Guelph Agricultural College. There were 92 candidates, who tried the examinations, of which 62 were unsuccessful, only thirty, of the number having passed. Mr. Davidson is to be congratulated on coming successfully through such a severe ordeal. It is to be hoped that more of our farmers' sons will take advantage of the excellent advantages offered for securing a practical agricultural education afforded by this institution. Let their sons look forward to preparing themselves for the Agricultural College, which will not yet be abolished, in spite of the energetic efforts of the "farmers' representative," Mr. John Carnegie, in that direction.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

Fifth Parliament—Fourth Session.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY, 26th.

In the House of Commons to day, after routine, Mr, Everett of St. John's N. B. and Mr. Ward, of East Durnham, made brief speeches, in moving and seconding the address.

Hon. Mr. Blake began to speak at 4.20, and kept the floor, with the exception of two hour at recess, until 8.30. He expressed regret at the lateness of the date at which the house had been called together, and said the pledge of a January session had been repeatedly broken. Mr. Blake had to do considerable groping in the dark on the first two subjects he dealt with—the fisheries dispute and the Northwest rebellion—on account of the absence of public papers and documents concerning them. The first of the speech which had been put into the mouth of his excellency said the country was in a prosperous condition. This was not the case. Instead of prosperity, a severe and continued depression had settled over the country. He referred to the large losses in working the Intercolonial railway, and looked with alarm upon the large expenditure that we were annually making on capital account. Mr. Blake congratulated the government upon its proposal to give the Northwest territories representation in parliament and the establishment of a judiciary within its borders. He was in favor of pushing a militia organization of the citizens of the territories, so that in case of trouble they would not be dependent upon the eastern soldiers for protection. He would not at present enter into the question of responsibility for the outbreak of the Northwest, but the government had been repeatedly warned of the impending trouble.

Mr. Blake then entered into a satirical analysis of the reconstructed cabinet. He congratulated the member for London upon his promotion to the agricultural department. The hon. gentlemen had been a farmer once, but he had sold half his farm in a roundabout way to the militia department and now he was negotiating to sell the other half to the C. P. R. He could not see how he could be a successful minister of agriculture without a farm. These remarks made Mr. Carling blush up to the ears.

Mr. Blake next proceeded to pay his respects to the shuffle in the railways and marine departments, after which he congratulated the house upon having the minister of justice once more among them. What amused him was that the government had to go outside the house to find a bright light to fill the position. The new minister of justice as the French said entered politics by the great gate. The speaker referred to the manner in which he had been hounded in the press and in Parliament for three years for recommending that Mr. Mowat forsake the bench to become attorney-general of Ontario. He had been charged with degrading the bench and with smirching its spotless ermine by the very men who now bribed a member of the house (Mr. Isaacs) to vacate his seat to make room for the new minister of justice. As a judge fresh from the bench Mr. Thompson winced at these remarks.

Mr. Blake next asked what had become of Mr. John O'Donohoe. He understood that that gentleman had been taken into the cabinet, but he had never seen the appointment gazetted. He supposed that Mr. O'Donohue was neither in or out of the cabinet. Mr. Blake then paid particular attention in every sarcastic manner to Sir John's speeches at the St. George's club dinner during his late visit to London. He laughed at the premier's laudations of Jingoism at the feast and at his boast that in the event of England's going to war with a foreign nation, the Canadians would give up every drop of their blood and every shilling they owned to save the mother country. Mr. Blake read column after column from newspapers and recalled all the old political feuds and dissensions with his followers that Sir John had ever been engaged in. When Mr. Blake resumed his seat he was loudly applauded.

Sir John, on rising, at once attacked the leader of the opposition with great vehemence. He explained his London speeches, and closed an address lamentably weak in everything but vindictiveness by a spread eagle speech about the mother kingdom, and the daughter kingdom, patriotism and loyalty.

Sir Richard Cartwright next addressed the House; speaking of the descent of Mr. Mowat from the bench to enter politics, he remarked that there was no comparison between that act and that of Judge Thompson. Mr. Mowat entered a legislature that had no say in the appointment of judiciary, while Mr. Thompson would have control over his former brethren and could appoint himself to the highest judicial position in the land if certain circumstances warranted it. The minister of justice had only succeeded in securing a seat in the house by bribing a member to vacate his constituency for a county judgeship. Sir Richard characterized this deal as the worst act of corruption ever committed by any government. He concluded with these word, "The corruption that now exists in this country is a disgrace to civilization and has never been equalled in English history since the time of Walpole. If it is not speedily checked the dream of a permanent confederation will never be realized, but on the contrary a speedy dissolution can be looked for."

Hon. Thos. White, Davies, (Kings P. E. I.) and Peter Mitchell concluded the debate.

In the senate there was a lively scene.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Fifth Parliament—Third Session.

FRIDAY, FEB. 26th.

After routine the following bills were read a third time: To incorporate the Toronto Insurance company; respecting the Midland Railway company; to enable the Toronto General Trusts company to purchase certain lands.

In reply to Mr. Morris, the Minister of Education said that no arrangements had been entered into for the holding of simultaneous examinations of teachers and matriculants by the universities, but there was an understanding to the effect that such would be made.

Mr. Meredith asked for information respecting the judgments of Mr. Justice Proudfoot in the case of McArthus vs. the Queen. The case dates back twenty-four years. The order was granted.

Mr. Lees moved a resolution to the effect that the government should take some action for the abolition of toll gates. The mover presented the obvious arguments in favor of such a policy.

The attorney general pointed out that the mover of the resolution had suggested no way to carry out his idea. The province would not consent to purchase all the toll roads, and the government were not prepared to compel the municipalities to assume the burden.

The motion received the six months' hoist. After advancing several private bills a stage, the House adjourned.

It is probable that Gillis, condemned to death at Charlottetown, P.E.I., will have a new trial. A reconsideration of the evidence given at his trial and several circumstances unearthed since throw grave doubts on the justice of his sentence.

Henry C. Curtis, a well-to-do farmer of Westminster, cruelly dumped an adopted daughter in front of the Guthrie home in London because she took fits and was of no more use to him. He has had the girl ten years in his family.

A Crisis in Burmah.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—A despatch received this morning at the Indian office from Lord Dufferin announces the renewal of disorders in Burmah. The officials refuse to give even a summary of the despatch for publication, and seek to minimize its importance by saying that it reports only a few skirmishes with native bushwhackers. It is known, however, that the despatch has had a very disquieting effect at the Indian office. Two special despatches received to-day from Rangoon and Mandalay respectively, reveal a very grave state of affairs in Upper Burmah. The Rangoon correspondent reports that troops are being hurried forward to reinforce General Prendergast with all possible speed. The passage of the troops up the Irrawaddy River is uninterrupted until Mandalay is reached, but north and east of the capital serious obstacles are encountered. Scores of wounded and invalid soldiers are being brought down the river daily. The Mandalay despatch states that that city is only saved from being in a condition of anarchy by the stern enforcement of martial law. The common people are sullen, but submissive. The chiefs are mostly engaged in conspiracies in favor either of Prince Alompora or Prince Hteitsin, the rival pretenders to the throne. In the interior the condition of affairs, though not critical, is serious and disheartening.

Port Perry.

Another Disastrous Fire.

PORT PERRY, Feb. 28.—Port Perry had another narrow escape yesterday from being wiped out of existence by fire. A fire occurred which destroyed business buildings of the value of $34,000, on which there was insurance for $16,000. Port Perry has been extremely unfortunate, as it has been visited by two great fires previous to this one during the last two years.

"A Passive Crime."

The interesting story, "A Passive Crime," by "The Duchess," commences in to-day's issue of the EXAMINER. "The Maid Forlorn" by the same authoress, concluded in Friday's issue, proved very acceptable reading, and no doubt this charming story will be even more extensively read.

Memorial Service.

In memory of the late Isaac Robinson, St. John's Church was, on Sunday, draped in mourning, and appropriate prayers were said and appropriate hymns sung. In the evening the rector, in the course of the sermon, very feelingly alluded to the deceased gentleman, paying him a high tribute of praise for faithful discharge of Christian duty and consistency of Christian life. He was earnest and zealous in the discharge of his devotional duties. When the rector came to the parish Mr. Robinson was found at his post in the Sunday school and he had kept up his relationship to and his labours therein to the day of his death. His sudden taking off would have been terrible to any one not so thoroughly prepared for death as his daily life gave evidence that Mr. Robinson was. The closing voluntary played by Mr. Hampshire was the Dead March in Saul.

Obituary.

On Saturday evening one of the oldest residents of Douro passed away to his rest in the person of Mr. Roderick Moloney. The deceased was seventy-four years of age, having been born in Queen's county, province of Munster, in 1812. He came to Canada in 1825 with his father, Daniel Moloney, (who died in 1836) when only thirteen years of age. Mr. Moloney left two brothers living. One, Daniel, who was the first white male child born in Douro, now resident in California, and the other, Mr. Martin Moloney, of Douro. Mr. Roderick Moloney, who had been, previous to his death, bereft of his life partner for twelve years, leaves behind him four sons and two daughters, one of whom is Mr. John Moloney, now and for many years reeve of Douro. They are all married but the youngest son. Deceased was in religion a Roman Catholic, and in politics a Conservative, though not a bigoted one. He could on occasion, when the candidate presented strong claims on his judgment act independently of his party, as, for instance, when he cast his vote for the late Sheriff Hall. The funeral took place to-day at 11 o'clock, a large number of friends and neighbors following the remains of Mr. Moloney to the Roman Catholic cemetery in Peterborough.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A government organ asserts that the delegates from the Northwest Territories who visited Ottawa, seeking concessions of just treatment from the Dominion Government are perfectly satisfied with the result. It is about time, the government woke up to its duty. It spent ten millions of dollars and sacrificed two hundred lives to learn that, honest administration and fair treatment pay better than, oppression and injustice.

The Minister of Agriculture has been waited upon by a deputation of gentlemen from the Canadian Association of Breeders of Shorthorn Cattle, who asked that a grant of $2,000 be made by the Government to assist the Association in completing the official herd book by publishing three volumes of the history of thoroughbred cattle prior to the beginning of their operations. Without these back volumes the work of tracing up pedigrees was very difficult.

When a farmer, in buying a reaper to gather his wheat, for which the N. P. was to give him top prices, but which he has to sell for from 75 to 80 cents per bushel, complains of the price of his machine, he must not blame the manufacturer. The N.P. has added something like $40 to the cost of each machine. Consequently the maker to save himself has to add that amount to the cost of the implements, and the farmer has to pay it. Yet the organs argue that the consumer does not have to pay the duty. The duty is divided—between the consumer who has to pay a higher price and the workingman who has to accept lower wages.

The Opposition organs are in a terrible way over the bugaboo of direct taxation, which they assert is over shadowing Ontario. If, in the course of time, direct taxation may be found necessary, the people will have become used to it. The Dominion Government is taxing us directly now. For instance, a man last fall laid in ten tons of coal. To-day he goes to pay for it and remarks that the bill, $70, is "pretty steep." The dealer replies that five dollars of the bill represents the Dominion duty on coal, 50 cents per ton, and the amount of $5 has to be paid over and above the commercial value of the fuel. If that is not direct taxation, save us from anything nearer it.

It would appear that Hon. Mr. Blake is in fine condition for the coming session of Parliament. The Ottawa correspondent of the Toronto World, a journal, which, though it has recently taken on a rather pronounced Tory tone, is fair and honest, says of him on the occasion of his first speech in Parliament: "Mr. Blake, it was admitted on all hands, was never seen in a happier mood. He fairly boiled over with alleged good humor, made jokes, told funny stories, recited a Dutch poem about Hans Breitmann joining the turners a la Baker and Farron, and surprised the members and the occupants of the galleries by his new mode of oratory. For myself, I take it as one of Mr. Blake's best outbreaks of sarcasm."

Read the following extract from a letter of a well-known citizen of St. Catharines,—hundreds like it:

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 30th, 1885.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, I looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two springless trusses made in York State, costing me $60. Nothing would retain my Hernia. . . . I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort: even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down. It holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. B. KING.

This new Spirial Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child case; and 98 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. When writing please mention this paper. Address,

A PASSIVE CRIME.

BY THE DUCHESS.

THE MOMENT APPROACHES.

From its site upon the high rocks that overhang the sea, Penruddock Castle, in all its Gothic and somewhat savage grandeur, frowns down upon the vale beneath; upon plain and upland, park and winding stream, and the pretty cottage far below, that lies half hidden by the spreading foliage.

Although belonging to sunny June, the day is dark and lowering.

The ocean, with a sudden roar, is rushing inland, to break out with furious hisses upon the long, low beach.

The sky is overcast; no faintest gleam of sunshine comes to lighten the gloom, or throw some brightness on the scene, so replete with heaviness and a vague melancholy.

"And such a winter wears the face of Heaven," that all the happy birds lie cowering out of sight.

Upon the castle walls the flag waves fretfully in the breeze. A sense of desolation and of coming evil is over all the place. The servants go softly to and fro, as though waiting solemnly for death's messenger, who comes with hurried feet. The moaning winds and drifting clouds murmur of misery, and plainly tell of dawning grief.

Beneath, in the valley, upon the grass-plot that belongs to the cottage, a man is walking slowly up and down with lowered head, and a heart filled with envy and vain longing. His face, though handsome and suggestive of good breeding, is dark, stern, and impenetrable. His arms are crossed behind his back. Just now an expression, almost evil, mars the beauty of his features. His thoughts, busy with the past and the present, are full of discontent.

Sometimes, as though unconsciously, he lifts his eyes to gaze upon the crimson flag floating so high above him, marking the spot where his sister-in-law, the Lady of Penruddock, lies at the point of death, very certainly to follow her husband into the land of shadows.

Within twelve months they will both lie buried, and all this goodly heritage, these swelling fields and softly undulating plains, will pass into the hands of a child, a feeble girl—a creature scarce fit to combat with the winds that blow; whilst his boy, his treasure beyond all price, must through all his life toil for daily bread.

At this moment a merry laugh rings out upon the air, and from the house, with fair hair flying, a lovely boy of seven runs eagerly and joyously, with arms extended, to the man so deep in envious thought.

As the sound of childish gayety smites upon his ear, his whole expression changes, and he lifts his head, and gladly welcomes the child with word and gesture, as he flings himself, breathless, upon the man's breast.

The boy clings to him, murmuring a joyful story of his escape from nurse and tutor without fear of reproof, and with no dread of the dark features and gleaming eyes above him, that betray some sense of cruelty.

Perhaps his little son is the one thing in all the world that does not shrink from George Penruddock, and is, therefore, doubly dear to him on that account.

He holds him now closely clasped against his heart, as though the contact were sweet to him, and whispers in his ear words of fond endearment that are almost womanish in their tenderness.

Yet even as he holds the youngster in his arms dark thoughts come again, and take fast hold of him.

But for the puny baby in the castle above, all these lands around him might be the boy's, and wealth and position be assured to him.

That thought it is which is now torturing, and which has long driven from his heart every feeling save only one that should inspire a human being.

He loves his little son; for him it is that this man is ambitious, and would enrich even by a crime.

The daughter of Alice Penruddock (once so vainly loved, now so long detested) will soon be in possession of all, whilst his little son, his pretty Dick, must forever remain portionless. It is this thought that constantly tortures, that poisons and lays waste his every hour.

The boy has darted off again chasing from flower to flower a showy butterfly; and once more Penruddock looks up sharply to where the crimson flag should be. But it is no longer there; and almost it seems as though a faint cry comes to him upon the rising wind.

He shivers, and then cries shame upon his superstitious fears, and tells himself it is but the shriek of the sea-gulls flying inwards from the storm.

The click of a latch makes him turn his head. The garden-gate is thrown wide, and a tall woman, of servant's rank, but finely formed, and of the gypsy type, comes hurriedly up to him. Her eyes are peculiarly large and dark, and there is a determination, a solidity, about her lower jaw somewhat remarkable. Perhaps the touch of Romany blood is rather more discernible in carriage and complexion than in eyes and hair, though both are dark as midnight.

Penruddock grows a little pale as she approaches, and acknowledges her presence, not with speech, but by a slight gesture of the hand.

The woman takes no notice of his greeting, but, drawing herself up to her full height, for several moments gazes at him thoughtfully.

"Well?" he asks, at length, as though unable longer to endure her scrutiny.

"My lady is dead!" says the woman, slowly, rather than curtly, and with a difficulty which is very apparent to him.

Penruddock starts, and moves back a step or two. However prepared we may be for such news, the plain telling of it must occasion a shock.

"Ay," says the woman, quietly.

"Dead!" says Penruddock, in a low tone. "So soon—so very suddenly!"

"Yes, it is always so," returns she, moodily gazing at the sward: "the young and the gay go soonest. She is clay now, though a week ago she could chatter with the best; nay, so lately as an hour ago she called me by my name, and held my hand—so. I can feel the pressure still. But it is all over; she is still and cold now, poor soul! And it may be happier, for her heart was broken!"

"How dreadful it all is—how depressing! I feel it as though—"

"No more, Penruddock," says the woman, suddenly, raising her head, and flinging up her hand with an uncontrollable and almost haughty gesture. So standing, she is quite beautiful; and though wearing the garb, loses all the aspect of the menial. "Hypocrisy is a vile sin; and why try to deceive me? There was no love lost between you. Even at the last, the very last, when life was nearly over, she—"

There is a pause, and Penruddock, in an agitated voice, says, with some excitement, "Go on! Do not hesitate.—tell me the worst, Esther! At the last she spoke of me! What was it! Did she forgive?"

"Never!" says the woman, firmly. "No, not even then. You know how she disliked the master's will, and your being left sole guardian of the child in the event of her death. I say nothing," slowly, and with averted looks. "The dislike may have been—nay, must"—with a curious contraction of the brows—"have been unreasoning, but still it was there; and at the last she alluded to it. As I knelt beside her she laid her hand on mine, and whispered a few words. They were not many, but they were of you and the child. If you command that I should speak those words, of course I must; but better not hear them, sir—"

"Speak, woman!" replies he, roughly. "What could she say of me in death that would be harsher than that which she said in life?"

"Nay, then, if you will hear, of course you must," returns she; yet she pauses as though somewhat reluctant to proceed. "It always seemed to her a strange thing that Miss Penruddock (the little one) should by the will be compelled to live here in this small spot until her eighteenth birthday, when in reality she is mistress of it, and all the lands around, and the great castle up yonder."

"Tell me what she said of me as she died," says Penruddock, impatiently.

"She mentioned no names, but bending toward me, said, with her poor eyes wild and frightened, as it were, 'Now that I am torn, and forever, alas! from my sweet lamb, she must walk beside the wolf.'"

"Ah!" says Penruddock, drawing his breath quickly, and coloring darkly; "is that the truth, or is it only that which you have yourself invented?"

"It is true. You would have me speak. But"—lowering her head—"it may have been but raving. When death is near, how few know light from darkness!"

"What more did she say?" demanded he, as though deaf to her last remark.

"She made me swear that I would never forsake the little one; that as I had been its nurse for three long years, so I would still cherish and keep a watchful eye upon her. I swore it," says the woman, solemnly, raising her eyes to the dull sky above her, as though in memory of her "oath in heaven;" "and I shall never break that promise, come what will, and cost me what it may to keep it."

She pauses then, and looks keenly at Penruddock, who meets her gaze as firmly as though his heart was frank and true, his mind without a single thought of evil.

"When will it please you, sir, that I shall bring the child down?" she asks, presently, in a subdued tone. "This evening? Already she pines for her dead mother, poor bairn; but if with Maister Dick, I think the feeling of loneliness might be lightened, and, no doubt, in a very little time would cease to exist altogether."

"Very well. Let her be sent this evening," says Penruddock, slowly, unwillingly, as it seems to the ear of his attentive listener.

"Perhaps I hurry you?" she says with a certain newborn nervousness in her manner. "It is too hasty an arrival. There will be our sleeping-room to arrange, and the preparations for it may—"

"There need be no trouble," says Penruddock slowly. "There is nothing to arrange. My niece can sleep in the nursery with Wilkins."

"Miss Penruddock always sleeps with me in my room," says the woman, growing terror in her eyes. "Wilkins is nothing to her; I am all the world to her."

"For the future many things will be changed," says Penruddock, speaking coldly and with singular precision. "It is better you should understand at once that your services in this family will no longer be required. My son's nurse will be sufficient for both children."

The woman's face alters as he speaks until it is almost unrecognizable.

A gray, leaden pallor discolors her lips; her eyes grow strangely dark.

By a supreme effort, she so far controls herself as to speak with some appearance of calmness.

"You would separate me from the child?" she says, in a low, anguished tone.

Her hands are clasped behind her back, well out of sight, lest he shall see how the fingers, closing on each other, leave white marks upon the knuckles.

"Yes; it will be better so. I shall keep no one near my niece who may prejudice her against her uncle," replies he, with a slight sneer; "her guardian too, according to her father's wish."

She makes a quick gesture, as though she would dispute the insinuation; but he prevents her.

"It is useless arguing," he says. "Your manner betrays you. It is distrustful, and touches on insolence. From your mistress you have, I know but too well, imbibed a hatred of me strong as it is unjust."

The woman, pale now as death, makes a step forward.

"I was her nurse," she says desperately. "She is like my own—nay, more to me than the one I lost. All through her young life I have borne with her, cared for her, loved her. She is part of myself. At this bosom," crossing her hands passionately upon her breast—"she was fed. She is all on earth I care for—my last tie. And will you now compel me to part with her?" Penruddock, have pity."

"I have spoken;" returns he unmoved; "and tragic scenes have no charm for me. I shall give you a character, and any wages that are due you can have whenever it may suit you to come for them."

"Then it is all over," murmurs she, faintly, pressing her hand to her heart and turning away.

But when she has gone a yard or two, she comes back again, and confronts him with a look upon her handsome face ill to meet.

She is very white, and her large, unearthly eyes burn with a revengeful fire.

"I had forgotten," she says, slowly. "My lady sent you one more message. 'Tell him,' she said, 'that surely he shall be dealt with as he deals with mine!'"

So saying, she moves away into the leafy recesses of the wood, and is presently lost to sight.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, on its merits. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $120 to $200 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $120 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through subagents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our Extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

Lindsay's Luck.

In the match for the Governor-Generals medal and cup, played at the Governor-Generals private rink Ottawa, last Friday, between the Lindsay and Truro club, of Nova Scotia, the Truro curlers defeated two rinks of the Lindsay club by 14 shots.

Wednesday Evening, March 3rd.

The plan for the reserved seats for the entertainment of the Redpath Concert Company under the auspices of the Oddfellows of Otonabee Lodge, is now open at Hartley's Music Store, and the seats are being taken. We would recommend our citizens to secure seats and not miss this fine entertainment.

Cantata.

In addition to the cantatas "Ruth" and "The Flower Queen," to be given in St. John's and St. Andrew's churches this month, the former conducted by Mr. Chas. Hampshire, organist of St. John's Church, and the latter by Mr. D. D. Galletly, precentor of St. Andrew's Church choir, there will also be given in St. Luke's school room, Ashburnham, during the latter part of this month, the beautiful, sacred cantata "Christ and His Soldiers." A number of local vocalists, under the leadership of Prof. Parker, have the cantata under preparation.

Sluggers on the War-path.

All Saturday afternoon excitement ran high at a Hunter street hotel. Two factions of notorious fighters from Ennismore and Smith met and discussed probabilities. The head man of each tribe "stumped" any man on the other side to go out in the back yard and knock a chip off his shoulder. The trouble was to keep the whole side from damaging the chip. The crowd soon drew another crowd, which waited expectantly for the fray. Several minor members of the factions indulged in a few rounds, giving good exhibitions of the lung power. The police appeared on the scene and induced the contestants to keep quiet. The proprietor of the hotel adroitly managed to restore order in the camp to the satisfaction of all.

Still Another Carnival.

The Fire Brigade Band is bound to make hay while the sun shines—if such a figure of speech is allowable in these blizzardous days. It is intended to hold the third Fancy Dress Carnival of the season on Friday evening, March 12th, and it is expected that it will be the crowning one of the course. An interesting feature of it is to be a political contest, involving the winning of a gold headed cane, between Hon. Edward and Sir John Macdonald. Tickets are to be issued to which coupons are attached, entitling the holder to a vote. Out of delicate compliment to the Chieftan, a bribery provision is added to the arrangment. Persons desiring to enjoy an unlimited exercise of the franchise, can purchase as many voting coupons as desired, at 5 cents each. The band boys are the first to introduce universal suffrage—every man, woman and child is eligible to vote.

An Assembly at Millbrook.

A sleighing party of about a dozen young ladies and gentlemen left town on Friday evening last for Millbrook to attend the final assembly of the Iolanthian Club, held in the town hall of that place. They arrived at their journey's end all right and were greeted with a hearty reception by the club committee of management, who escorted the party to the scene of revelry. Here they met about forty couples of the village and Port Hope youth and beauty. The gay throng lightly trod the fleet hours of night away to fascinating music of the piano, dispersing early in the morning. The Peterborough party, refusing all invitations, entreaties and persuasions to remain, faced the storm on the home stretch arriving in town about six o'clock in the morning tired, weary and sleepy, but satisfied. One of the number who was the last to leave his lady love, on the way home went to sleep rolled up in a robe and blanket, with a leather valise in each arm, his countenance lit up with a smile like that of a halloween pumpkin. It was late in the day when the boys bothered their heads with business. Nevertheless they say they had the best time on record, and wax warm in praise of Messrs. W. A. Smith, R. H. Kells; R. J. Doak and C. H. McIntosh, the club committee of management.

Curling.

Two rinks of the local curling club went to Lakefield this morning, to play a match with the Lakefielders.

Protestant Home Annual Meeting.

Mr. J. G. Hall, secretary of the Protestant Home, announces that the annual meeting of that institution will take place to-morrow, March 2nd, at 4 o'clock p.m.

Frost Freaks.

The organ of St. Paul's Church gave forth no music yesterday morning, the pipes which supply the water power being frozen. The front bound pipes were thawed out during the afternoon, and in the evening the organ pealed forth as usual.

The Golden Lion.

The attention of the public is called to the first announcement from Mr. R. Fair, of the "Golden Lion," under the new regime. It will no doubt be read with interest by all, but the ladies especially will be pleased to see so many of the items devoted to them.

"MADRE E HICO!"

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

Life, Love and Death.

The vital statistics for the month of February, as registered with the Town Clerk, were as follows:—

Births	23
Marriages	2
Deaths	3

The above record shows that proud fathers are willing to comply with the law with regard to the registration of births. Negligence in the other departments is apparent.

Curling at Keene.

Two rinks of the Keene curling club defeated by one shot a rink of the Campbellford curlers in a match played at Keene on Friday, the Campbellford rink playing a game with each of the Keene rinks. The rinks and scores were as follows:

Keene, 1st rink,—R. McIntyre, B. Wylie, J. C. Read and J. Millar, skip, 14. 2nd rink,—W. McCune, W. Kennedy, J. Dickson and W. Campbell, skip,—14. Total 28.

Campbellford,—E. Goodry, D. Waters, Jas. White and Jas. Buchannan, skip, with 1st rink, 16; with second rink, 11. Total 17.

Agricultural Amalgamation.

On Saturday afternoon there was held a meeting of the directors of the West Riding Central Exhibition, and it was decided that they were to go to Norwood on March 9th, to attend the meeting to be held in that place, and endeavour to secure arrangements for the amalgamation of the East and West Riding societies for exhibition purposes. It is to be hoped that a spirit of concession will characterize the respective parties to the proposed fusion of interests and that mutually satisfactory arrangements may be arrived at.

Another New Firm.

Messrs. W. J. Morrow and M. Tierney, two of the most popular grocery men in town, the former lately of the firm of Morrow & Co., and the latter for the past seven years with Messrs. Rush & Elliott, have purchased the large stock of groceries, wines and liquors of Messrs. Fortye & Elliott, and will carry on the business in the same premises (old Rush & Elliott stand) under the name and style of Morrow, Tierney & Co. Both men, though young, are old in the trade, are capable and experienced buyers, and most popular salesmen, and no doubt will do an extensive business. We wish them every success and trust their most sanguine anticipations will be realized.

Police Court.

Police Magistrate Dumble presided at the police court this morning.

The charge against Mr. J. E McIntyre, on which the magistrate reserved judgment, was called.

Mr. O'Meara objected, that the case had been closed and that no further evidence could be taken.

Mr. Edwards, for the town, contended that Mr. McIntyre had not entered a plea. He thought the charge should be read and Mr. McIntyre asked to plead guilty or not guilty.

The magistrate held that Mr. McIntyre had pleaded guilty of giving a glass of beer to a guest.

Mr. Edwards said they had evidence to show that Mr. McIntyre's statement was false.

The magistrate said he would have to dispose of the case as it was. The prosecution had tendered no evidence to the contrary of Mr. McIntyre's admission. If the prosecution had evidence to show that a breach of the law had been committed, other than supplying beer to a guest, another information might be laid. The charge was dismissed.

Chas. Legros, charged with exercising his calling as a barber on Sunday, February 7th and 14th, pleaded guilty to both charges. The Magistrate remarked that men's beards would grow, but they would have to go with dirty faces on Sunday or learn to shave themselves. Barbers would have to stop shaving on Sunday. He imposed a fine of $2 and costs in each case, remarking that if it occurred again he would impose a penalty of $40 and costs, the highest the law allows.

Thos. H. Darcy, was charged with allowing liquor to be consumed on his premises after 7 o'clock on Saturday, February 20th. Mr. Darcy denied the charge. Jos. Crevier, was sworn and testified that he and two others went into Darcy's on the night in question about seven o'clock. He drank his beer immediately. The others did not drink at all. He saw Inspector Leary in the house.

Mr. Leary stated that when he went into Darcy's there were two full glasses and one half full.

Mr. Darcy, on oath stated that he closed his bar at seven o'clock, and that no liquor was consumed on his premises after 7 o'clock.

The Magistrate reserved judgment.

The First Spring Month.

March has come in like a roaring lion seeking whom it may freeze to death. There is nothing very lamb-like about the entry of the first spring month, with the thermometer 'way below zero. There is nothing suggestive of snow-drops, violets, house-cleaning or a quietus to coal and wood bills.

Mr. A. W. Jones, head master of the South Ward public school, has tendered his resignation of the position on account of ill health.

Rev. Arthur Browning, of Campbellford, occupied the pulpit of the George street Methodist Church morning and evening yesterday, in the absence of Rev. I. Tovell, who was engaged in preaching the Sunday School anniversary services at Napanee. Mr. Browning's sermons were able and impressive, and were listened to with much interest. His lively manner of conducting a meeting met with so much favor that he has been prevailed upon to remain for the revival service on Monday evening. Many old friends of Mr. Browning, some of whom were converted under his ministry years ago, were pleased to see and meet him again.

The Shoemakers' Grievance.

CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

I have read the advertisement published by the "Shoemakers Union of Peterboro'," which appeared in the EXAMINER of Saturday evening, giving the particulars of a resolution passed at a special meeting of that body, and wherein it is decided that—Whereas, I had "ceased paying the Union bill of wages," that my shop must be "struck from the list of Union shops," and that "all men working for said shop be rated as Scabs."

In reply to this I beg to say, in the first place, that there is no branch of the Knights of St. Crispin in Peterborough, which is the only Shoemakers' Union of Canada recognised by the trade; and that the so-called "Shoemakers' Union of Peterborough," has no connection with the Grand Lodge, and is therefore, without any jurisdiction whatever, so far as I am aware.

In the second place when I decided to establish a wholesale boot and shoe manufactory in Peterborough, I took the trouble to address a letter to the "Shoemakers' Union" here asking them to furnish me with their bill of wages to make boots and shoes with "died" stock, so that I might be guided as to what wages to pay. I had been the first to sign their bill of wages for rough stock, when they started their Union in Peterborough, in April, 1882, and was desirous of consulting them in this matter as well. To my courteous letter I received the following reply:—

JAN. 12th, 1886.

JOHNSTON CAREY, Esq.

Dear Sir,—In reply to your communication to me, as Secretary of the Shoe-Maker's Society, I have to state that I done according to your request, and they have come to the conclusion that we cannot furnish you with a manufacturing bill of wages, therefore you will have to act according to your own judgment. Hoping you will not alter our bill on measure work. Hoping this will prove satisfactory,

With respects,
Yours truly,
JOHN S. WELLS,
Secretary of Shoe-Makers' Society.

The above is the last and only communication I have received from the "Shoemakers' Union of Peterborough." I therefore took the advice they sent me to "act according to my own judgment," and have been paying the Toronto Knights of St. Crispin's bill of wages—the highest paid in Canada. This bill applies to my custom, or measure work, as well as to manufactured work, as the custom work will be made more perfectly with "died" stock. ("Died" stock is all cut out from steel dies worked by machinery.) My men have been working steady all winter, making good wages and have been well satisfied.

I may just say, in the third and last place that this trouble has originated from the fact that the "Union" here has received notice from other shops who do not use machinery in the manufacture of their stock as I do, that if the Union did not strike Carey's shop off the Union list they would not continue to pay the bill of wages (i. e. the bill of wages under the old system for goods made out of rough stock), claiming, as a reason for insisting upon this, that they could not compete with my prices.

The men who have arrived from Toronto to work in my factory are perfectly satisfied with their wages, and if the local men do not go to work, I will be compelled to fill their places with men from outside.

As I have no wish for further controversy in this matter, I leave the facts now in the hands of the public.

JOHNSTON CAREY,
Wholesale Manufacturer of Boots and Shoes,
George Street, Peterborough.

The Shoemakers' Grievances.

CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

In the Review of March 1st, and under the above heading, appears a card from Mr. Johnston Carey, in which he seeks to set himself right with the public and at the same time throws the onus of the strike in his shop on the Shoemakers' Union. I ask space in your valuable paper to answer some of those statements. In the first place, he says there is no branch of the Knights of St. Crispin in Peterborough. No person said there was, as far as as I know, nor do I think there is any in Canada, but he recognised them as a union, as his name at the bottom of our bill of wages proves; and he will find out before long that we are in connection with a grand lodge strong as that of St Crispin. With Mr. Carey's wholesale factory we will have nothing to do, but when he professes to run a factory and at the same time take in ordered work and make it in shop or factory style, paying his prices not Toronto bill and then trying to foist this work on the public as hand made and equal to the best made in town and then underselling others in the business, who are paying a fair price for good work and are carrying on business legitimately, then I think we are right in drawing our men from such a shop.

Let Mr. Carey run a factory and wholesale his work, then no one will have any reason for complaint. And if Mr. Carey under sells others his men have to suffer, because he can't buy stock any cheaper than other men, and his machinery is of no value to men on custom work. He also says that his Toronto men are satisfied. I believe he is right there. One of them is so much satisfied that he is going back as soon as he can get cash enough to pay his fare; he has made $6 in two weeks and says he is done with buckeye factories. The other is satisfied because he did not come till he had a guarantee of so much per week for a length of time. Now there are not two shoe-makers in town that make $350.00 per year. I would ask a generous public if there is much of a margin for Mr. Carey to cut wages on those men?

I would also ask Mr. Carey would it not be better to pay his men fair wages so that they would not have to apply to the town for remission of their taxes. There is an old book, which Mr. Carey professes to revere which says:—"Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn," also, "The laborer is worthy of his hire." I wish he would think of this. In conclusion I would ask the public generally and working-men in particular, if they think a man like Mr. Carey is worthy of their patronage, or do they think the Union has acted harshly with him? I think not.

Peterborough, Feb. 26, 1886.

Objection was taken to the Water Works item by Mr. McNaughton, who was of opinion that the supply for streets was to be given free.

Mr. Yelland took the same view as Mr. McNaughton.

Mr. Cahill, chairman of the Finance Committee, said he was also of the opinion that the water was to be supplied free for street purposes, and explained that the company held that the hydrants on George street were private property, paid for by local tax. The company did not charge for street-watering on Water, Aylmer, Hunter and Simcoe streets.

Mr. Yelland thought the town could present a bill against the company if they wished to be strict. The company had promised to give two days supply for every day missed. He thought last winter's account at this rate would leave a balance in favor of the town.

Mr. Kendry said he thought the town should not be too strict, as last year the water had been drawn off in building new dams.

Mr. Moore said he was not very strongly impressed with the Water Company's claim. They admitted that that they had made a miscalculation of about $100 which reduced their bill to about $400. He thought a compromise should be made to avoid any law suit, and the company were entitled to something. He was in favor of the amount proposed in the report.

On motion of Mr. Davidson the report was adopted.

Mr. Kendry, chairman of the Committee on Appointments, then read the following supplementary Peterborough, March 1st, 1886.

On motion of Mr. Rutherford the report was adopted.

Mr. Cahill read the following

All of which is respectfully submitted.
THOS. CAHILL,

Peterborough, March 1st, 1886.

On motion the report was adopted.

BY-LAWS.

Mr. Moore's by-law to amend the rules of the Council received another reading and was held over for next meeting of the Council.

On motion of Mr. Kendry the Council went into committee on the continuation of the second reading of the by-law to appoint town officers.

Mr. Hartley in the chair.

Further appointments were made as recommended by the Committee on Appointments.

On motion of Mr. Moore, the clause appointing Mr. R. B. Edwards Town Solicitor at a salary of $200 a year, was amended by defining the duties and emoluments of the Town Solicitor.

Mr. Davidson moved, seconded by Mr. McNaughton, that the blank in the clause appointing Chief of Police be filled by adding the name of Robert Adams, as acting chief.

Mr. Rutherford moved, seconded by Mr. Kendry, that the blank be filled by the name of Mr. Cooper, as proposed by the committee.

Mr. McNaughton objected to Mr. Cooper's name being added as he was not known, and if appointed and not efficient it would be hard to dispose of him. He was in favor of Mr. Adams

Mr. Yelland wanted to see Mr. Cooper's recommendations.

Mr. McNeil said that some of the councillors were in possession of letters detrimental to Mr. Cooper, which would outweigh all his recommendations. He was in favor of appointing a man of experience. Mr. Cooper came on his character. He was confident there were many men in town who had as good characters as Mr. Cooper, and just as capable of filling the position. He was in favor of appointing Mr. Adams as acting chief. His notice of motion which should have been considered before the by-law, would have settled the matter as he thought advisable.

Mr. Kendry said Mr. Adams had not done his duty as an assistant constable, and could not be expected to fill efficiently the position of chief. Mr. Cooper was recommended as a man of good executive abilities.

Mayor Stevenson said he had no doubt Mr. Cooper was an efficient man from all reports. He did not know if they would get better by following Mr. McNeil's plan.

Mr. Moore did not think Mr. Adams as capable of filling the position, and was in favor of appointing Mr. Cooper. It could be arranged to discharge him at any time if not satisfactory.

Mr. Rutherford said Mr. Cooper had almost the unanimous vote of the committee after Mr. Cochrane withdrew his application.

On motion Mr. Cooper's recommendations were read.

Mr. McClelland spoke with reference to the merchants' meeting two years ago, at which it was expressed that the town required a more efficient staff of policemen, and Mr. McGinty was added to the force. Inquiries were made, and it was found almost impossible to get a good man from the cities, as they look for promotion and a pension. A man accustomed to the routine not necessary. He would have voted for Mr. Cochrane if he had not withdrawn his application.

Mr. Yelland contended that Mr. McClelland's argument would not hold water. By his reasoning P. C. McGinty had kept the town quiet for the past two years. He was in favor of appointing Mr. Adams as Chief of the present force, and by doing with the present force save money.

Mr. Kendry said the town would be going back to the same place it was two years ago, when the merchants complained. Two constables at night and two during the day were necessary.

Mr. McClelland said Mr. Yelland was inconsistant, for when on the committee he was in favor of appointing Mr. Cochrane at a higher salary than Mr. Cooper would get, and now he wanted to keep down expenses.

Mr. Yelland said his intention was to discharge one of the present force, as he thought three sufficient. He had said so at the time. As for recommendations it was easy to get them from friends.

Mr. Cahill said he came to vote for Mr. Adams as Chief of Police and not as acting Chief. He thought Mr. Adams quite qualified for the position.

Mayor Stevenson agreed with Mr. Yelland that it was an easy matter to get a good or bad recommendation. He was convinced that Mr. Cooper was a smart man. He found that the present force did their work well and efficiently. The general opinion was that they wanted a good head.

A motion made by Mr. McNeil, seconded by Mr. Davidson, that the committee rise to sit again was lost.

Mr. Moore thought the duties of policemen were not definitely defined and asked that a by-law be prepared for that purpose.

The amendment to appoint Mr. Cooper was carried, and the blank in the clause was filled in with his name. Salary $600 a year. The motion to appoint Mr. Adams was lost.

Moved by Mr. Moore, seconded by Mr. Rutherford, that the several appointments by this by-law made shall be subject to and governed by all by-laws now in force or that may hereafter be passed, relating to the offices and positions held by them hereunder and defining the duties of the several officers and persons hereby appointed.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. McNeil, seconded by Mr. McNaughton, that the by-law be not read a third time.

Mr. Kendry moved as an amendment that the by-law be read a third time and passed.

The amendment being put was carried, and the motion was lost on the same vote.

Mr. McNaughton called for yeas and nays, which were as follow, on the amendment:—

Yeas—Messrs. Cahill, Kelly, Mclelland, Yelland, Moore, Rutherford, Kendry and Hartley.

Nays—Messrs. Davidson, McNaughton and McNeil.

The by-law received its third reading and was finally passed, signed and sealed.

BY-LAW REGULATING LICENSES.

On motion of Mr. McNeil the Council went into committee on the second reading of the by-law regulating licenses, Mr. Kendry in the chair.

Mr. Rutherford spoke at some length condemning billiard parlors as training schools for the devil, and made a motion to keep the billiard licenses the same as last year, $75 for each table.

Mr. Yelland seconded the motion; he held that the sum received as license would assist in enforcing the law.

Mr. Moore drew attention to the clause which prohibited the proprietors allowing boys 16 years of age and under playing on the tables, which would partly overcome the objection. It might be amended by adding the words "or remain in the room." He said there was a bill before the House which, if passed, would prohibit youths from frequenting or playing in billiard rooms.

Mayor Stevenson thought it would be unfair to impose too high a license. Billiards was a good game for travellers to spend their time at.

Moved by Mr. McNeil, seconded by Mr. Kelly, that the blank be filled in by inserting the amounts $50 for the first table, and $25 for each subsequent table. The motion was carried.

The license on bagatelle tables was placed at $100.

On motion of Mr. Moore a clause was added with reference to licensing billiard rooms, prohibiting youths of 16 years or under from frequenting the rooms, and that the holders of the license under the by-law will be subject to further by-laws on the same subject passed during the year.—Carried.

On motion the committee rose, the Clerk being authorized to further prepare the by-law for consideration at the next meeting.

DEPUTATION TO OTTAWA.
